RESIDENCE OF THE LATE CAPT. JOSEPH J. WHITING.

MONTREAL, January, 1878.

DEAR SIR,

Hitherto, so far as I am aware, no connected and general Genealogy of the "Cushing Family" has ever been compiled. Individual members of it have held, and still hold, high and honorable positions, and the facts and incidents of their lives, with a more or less extended reference to their ancestral connection, may be found recorded in History and Historical works. Other members of the Family, proud, and justly so, of their name and connection, have at very considerable pains and expense traced their lineage to the common ancestor MATTHEW, who came from England in 1638, or to some one or other of his honored and distinguished descendants, and have furnished the result of their researches for publication in "The New England Historical and Genealogical Journal" of Boston and elsewhere, but no attempt has ever been made to weave these disconnected fragments together and make one harmonious whole out of what is otherwise inextricable confusion.

This task I have undertaken, and, after protracted and voluminous correspondence with all known or traceable descendants, have printed a small work in octavo of over 100 pages, in which I have traced the Family from the year 1466, adding as full details, historical and otherwise, respecting individual members as possible. A list of Books of Reference which contain information concerning the Family, and a full description of the "Coat of Arms," with explanation from standard works on Heraldry, is embodied in an Introduction, while the Appendix furnishes an exact copy of the will of William Cushing of Hingham, England, dated 1492.

Some numbers I have had interleaved with blank paper for the convenience of those who may desire to add to or amend what is in type.

The price of the work is as follows :—

Single copy (interleaved) bound in cloth, &c.....	$2 50

In sending forth the following work, to be subjected to the inspection and criticism of the public, the author is aware, that he assumes a great responsibility, inasmuch as every historical work, is to effect, for good or ill, the reputation of those who are named in its pages. For the manner in which this difficult task has been executed in the present instance, it is hoped that but little cause of complaint will be found. Many thanks are due to those who have kindly aided my labors, and strenghtened my purposes.

Valuable assistance has been derived from the Library of the Mass., and New England Historical Societies, and that of the State, the Records of Plymouth and Suffolk Counties, and from many published histories, and private manuscripts. If the work meets the approbation of the public, and if it is found to contain a faithful and impartial record of facts, the author will feel that his labor has not been in vain. Every attempt, however humble, to rescue from oblivion the fast fading mementos of the past, is laudable, and valuable; and local histories, furnish the materials from which, hereafter, works of a more general character, will be written. That this work, imperfect as it is, may fill some niche in the "gallery of history," is all that the author can ask.

ERRATA.

A few errors have been discovered, in carrying the work through the press, the most important of which are here noted, for correction.

HISTORY OF HANOVER, MASS.

CHAPTER I.

"O dark the scene and dreary,
When here they set them down,
Of storms and billows weary,
And chilled with winter's frown.
Deep moaned the forests to the wind,
Loud howled the savage foe,
While here their evening prayer arose,
Two hundred years ago."

FLINT.

Early settlement of the territory, in connexion with that of Scituate — Incorporation of the Town, and present boundaries — Remonstrance of Abington — Acquiescence of Scituate — Ancient boundaries — Family locations previous to the Revolution.

THE TOWN OF HANOVER, whose history we propose to sketch in the following pages, was incorporated as late as 1727, or more than one hundred years after the landing of the Pilgrims; but its territory was actually settled as early as 1649, or less than thirty years after the landing. Although its municipal age, therefore, may not be so great as that of many other towns in the county, yet its history may properly date back a century at least previous to its incorporation.

The landing of the Pilgrims took place on Monday, December 11th, 1620, Old Style, or December 21st, New Style, on the ever memorable Rock at Plymouth: and this was the first successful settlement made in Massachusetts.<sup>1</sup> It was not till twelve years after, or in 1632, that the first settlements were made in Duxbury,<sup>1</sup> and this town, which was incorporated in 1637, then embraced within its limits the present towns of Marshfield; incorporated in 1640; Bridgewater, incorporated in 1656, and covering the territory included in North, East, West, and South Bridgewater, or Bridgewater proper;<sup>2</sup> Abington, incorporated in 1712;<sup>3</sup> and Pembroke, also incorporated in 1712, from which, in 1820, the present town of Hanson was set off.

Less than eight years after the landing of the Pilgrims, however, or in 1628, settlements were made in Scituate; and although this town was not incorporated until 1642, or five years after Duxbury, and two after Marshfield, yet it properly ranks next to Plymouth in age, it having been the second town settled in the Plymouth Colony.

The greater part of the present territory of Hanover originally belonged to Scituate, and so remained, until its erection into a township by itself. The early history of the town, therefore, is identified with, and strictly belongs to, that of Scituate. But it will not be necessary to enter into many details relating to the latter town. The history of Scituate has been published to the world; and had we the disposition, it is doubtful if we could add much to Deane's excellent narrative.

We shall content ourselves with a few brief notes; and present these, more for the purpose of showing how, when, and by whom the territory and town of Hanover were first settled, than to re-write what has been once so ably written.

As we just remarked, the first settlements were made in Scituate eight years after the landing of the Pilgrims, or in 1628; and the names of these early settlers were William Gilson, Anthony Annable, Thomas Bird, Nathaniel Tilden, Edward Foster, Henry Rowley, and others, called "Men of Kent," probably from their having come from the County of Kent in England.<sup>4</sup>

that part of the town called The Harbor, and on the second cliff. The third cliff had been previously appropriated and occupied. In August, 1633, the inhabitants proceeded to lay out a regular village, allowing to no man more than four acres for a house lot, the proposition being "to build a compact street for purpose of mutual defence."<sup>1</sup> This was called Kent Street, and led from the bridge at the harbor, easterly to the third cliff. Here houses were built; and when, in 1634, the Rev. Mr. Lothrop, with thirty of his church, arrived from London, who were joined the same winter by others, some of whom were "Men of Kent," additional house lots were granted, and additional tenements reared. Deane suggests that these primitive houses were built of logs, and covered with thatch cut from the sedges which grew profusely upon the neighboring marshes. But as it was "agreed upon by the whole Court, held the sixth of January, 1627, that from henceforward no dwelling-house was to be covered with any kind of thache, as straw, reed, &c., but with either board or pale, and the like to wit of all that were to be new built in the towne," we think it probable that most of the houses were covered with "board or pale."<sup>2</sup> True, the law applied to Plymouth only, when passed, but would be likely to be observed throughout the colony. And as the settlers of Scituate were many of them men of substance, they were not compelled by poverty to build their dwellings in the rudest form, though those of the poorer class may have been covered with thatch. Houses were built, however; and here, for a series of years, dwelt in comparative seclusion, in their wilderness home, a race of men, many of whom had lived in far costlier habitations in the land of their nativity, and enjoyed advantages, for literary culture and social intercourse, far superior to what could be immediately expected in their new abode.

But though the act of their coming here was to some extent voluntary, yet it must have been with feelings of loneliness and depression, in their thoughtful moods, that they looked out upon that broad ocean, stretching before them, not whitened as now with the sails of every clime, but expanding, a gulf of three thousand miles between them and their former home ; its waves, in the storm, lashing with fury the rock-bound coast, and striking terror to the mother's heart ; or in its milder moods, laving the shore with quiet murmurings, the more calculated to awaken in the saddened spirit emotions which find vent chiefly in sighs. Or as they looked behind, upon that broad forest, clothing plain and hill, where wild beasts prowled, and the Indian roamed, and not a sign or a token of civilized life appeared, and as they felt their exposure to the deadly incursions of these hostile foes, iron wills must have been possessed by the men, and iron nerves have braced the gentler sex, else could they never have passed through the perils which surrounded them, and the dangers of their earlier days, with that calm composure and unwavering trust which they ever displayed.

But a life of privation, and hardship and toil, was encountered with cheerfulness, and endured without murmuring, for the praiseworthy object of permanently securing for themselves and their posterity, what they had never fully enjoyed on English soil,—a diffusive civil, and an enlightened religious liberty. Animated by this purpose, they moved steadily on, “fainting not for weakness, faltering not for pain,” their tears and their blood watering the soil, and their lives yielded a willing sacrifice to the cause of freedom !

The boundaries of Scituate remained unsettled for some years. It was the practice of the Colony Court to make grants, from time to time, to new planters, as they requested it ; waiting until each settlement should become of sufficient magnitude to require corporate powers, before conferring the same. The “Conihasset Grant” was made in 1633, to four gentlemen, usually called “Merchant Adventurers of London ;”<sup>1</sup> and in 1637, the tract called “The Two Miles,” now a part of Marshfield, was granted on the application of Mr. Timothy Hatherly, and the Rev. Mr. Lothrop, accompanied by a Committee of fifteen of the principal planters.<sup>2</sup>

Finally, in 1642, by order of the Court, the general bounds of the town were fixed “on the westerly side up the Indian Head River, to the Pond, which is the head of said River ; and from thence to Accord Pond ; and from thence to the sea, by the line that is the bound between Massachusetts and Plymouth.”<sup>1</sup>

Upon this territory, which included the most of Hanover, the first settlers, with their descendants, and those who subsequently joined them, took up their abode, and spent their days, in the peaceful pursuit of agriculture, manufactures, and commerce, interrupted only by occasional periods of Indian warfare, during which, and especially in that bloody and protracted campaign which signalized Philip's war in 1676, much suffering was endured, many of their houses were destroyed, and many precious and valuable lives were lost. But of these matters we shall have occasion to speak more at large hereafter.

As we have already observed, the first settlements in Scituate proper, were at the harbor. But as years rolled on, and the country around was explored, and the population continued to increase, by internal growth and external additions, lands farther back from the shore began to be improved, and settlers pushed their way along up the windings of the North River, dotting its banks here and there with their simple dwellings, and spacious farms ; — occasionally varying the scene by the establishment of a ship-yard ; — and thence up the Indian Head, where forges and furnaces were erected from 1704 to 1710 ; and so back towards the colony line, and in the vicinity of the third Herring Brook, where were saw and grist-mills, and farms of considerable extent ; until eventually, towards the close of the seventeenth century, a respectable number of busy and enterprising men were resident upon the territory now included in Hanover ; and during the first quarter of the eighteenth century, that number was so much enlarged, (the population amounting to nearly three hundred souls,) that the inhabitants began to think of petitioning to be incorporated into a town by themselves ; and in 1727, their petition having been presented and carefully considered, their wishes were gratified, the new town took its place among the municipalities of the county, and received its name of HANOVER, probably in compliment to the DUKE OF HANOVER, who had lately been called to the English throne under the title of GEORGE THE FIRST.

At present, the town is bounded on the North by Abington and South Scituate ; on the East by South Scituate ; on the South by Pembroke and Hanson ; and on the West by Abington. Its area is fifteen and one half square miles, or nearly ten thousand acres. The latitude of the centre-meeting house, from the State Trigonometrical Survey, is  $42^{\circ} 06' 49''$ , and lon.  $70^{\circ} 49' 13''$ , and of the Town Hall, as laid down on the map published by Mr. Whiting, the lat. is  $40^{\circ} 7'$ , and the lon.  $70^{\circ} 50' 58''$ . Distance from Boston to the Four Corners, twenty-two miles ; from thence to Plymouth, fourteen miles. This was the thirteenth town established within the limits of the county ; and according to the census of 1850, is the fourteenth in point of population, and the fifteenth on the valuation list. Being principally a farming town, and possessing but few external advantages, its growth has not been so rapid as that of some other towns, perhaps more recently incorporated. Still, industry and frugality have ever characterized the people ; and steadiness in business, and general intelligence, have proved the sure elements of rational prosperity.

As might well be supposed, the new town was not incorporated without some opposition on the part of its neighbors. Scituate, which was to be most seriously affected, sent no remonstrance to the General Court which remains on file, and voted at a meeting held in 1726 not to oppose its incorporation ; but Abington, which was then less thickly settled than Scituate, though now having nearly double the population, and which was struggling to maintain its own existence, complained that the change contemplated would not only considerably diminish its territory, but seriously weaken and cripple its resources.

In the latter town, in September, 1726, Lieutenant William Reed, Matthew Pratt, Edward Bates, and Samuel Noyes, were chosen a committee "to draw up objections in answer to the Drinkwater people's petition to draw off from them," and it was voted, "that Matthew Pratt and Samuel Noyes should carry the answer to the Court."<sup>1</sup> This remonstrance was presented April 19, 1727, and the reasons assigned in it why the inhabitants of Abington opposed the petitioners prayer are,—“1. Because of the fewness of our families in number, which is but about fifty-three, including the eight desiring to be set off; and of these five are newly married, and have neither house nor home, but as they sojourn under the roofs of others; and of the rest, six are widows, whose husbands have of late deceased, leaving their families much broken, and under low circumstances; which nineteen, taken from fifty-three, leaves but thirty-four; — and even of these some are so poor that they are left out of the rates, and have need of support from the town; — so that there will be but thirty families left to bear the public charges. 2. The part of the town petitioning to be set off, contains eleven polls, and above one-fifth of the rateable estate; and although there will still be left to Abington a considerable tract of land, yet but little part of it is capable of settlement, except the easterly part, which is chiefly in gentlemen proprietors hands, who do neither sell nor settle their lands, they living in other towns, and improving the same only as timber lots; and the inhabitants petitioning to be set off dwell on the easterly part of these great lots, which run westerly nearly to the centre of Abington, which will hence be exempt from taxation here for the support of the ministry. And, 3. That the eight petitioners for the separation, viz.: Elijah Cushing, Jeremiah Hatch, Nathaniel Davis, Joseph Bryant, Nehemiah Cushing, Benjamin Loring, and Isaac Hatch, though they urged their distance from public worship, were but four miles from the meeting house, and that if it was objected that the way was difficult and impassable, yet several responsible men had offered to make it good and passable, for man and horse, for £5 charge.”<sup>1</sup>

The Court, on the reception of this remonstrance, appointed a Committee, consisting of Lieut.-Governor Tailor, and Elisha Cook, Esq., of the Council, and Ezra Bourne, Esq., Major Tileston, and Edward Arnold, Esq., of the House, to view the territory, and they reported in favor of its incorporation, although they allowed that it would “put the inhabitants of Abington under some difficulties, respecting the supporting the public worship of God, for that several large tracts of land within the town did not pay towards the maintenance of the ministry.”

presented June 20, 1727, the Court authorized Abington to levy a tax of one half-penny per acre, for three years, on all dormant or non-resident lands within their limits, for the support of the ministry, and also granted them as a compensation for what they had lost, a tract of land lying to the North-east of that commonly called Waldo's farm.<sup>1</sup>

Scituate, the town most deeply interested in this decision, seems to have acquiesced in it, without any serious complaints, and so far as we can learn from an examination of the records of that town, cheerfully extended to the inhabitants of the newly incorporated district the hand of fellowship, and continued to live with them on terms of friendship, and reciprocal good will.

And now that the new town is fairly started upon a career of its own, it may be well to pause for a moment, and glance at the territory it embraced, and at the men who settled that territory; picturing to ourselves, as well as we can, the appearance which it would have presented, had we been permitted, from some appropriate eminence, to survey the scene, and note its features.

First and foremost stands the Town itself. Its ancient boundaries are described in the Act of Incorporation, as "beginning at the Third Herring Brook, at David Jacobs' Saw Mill Dam, and from thence running near West about two hundred and fifty six rods, to the Northeast corner of Isaac Turner's Great Lot, then near west with the north side line of said Great Lot, one mile to the share line,<sup>2</sup> and then continuing the same course three quarters of a mile; then turning and running near South, two miles to the South west corner of Nehemiah Cushing's lot, then South five degrees and forty minutes West to the Southerly bounds of Abington and Pembroke, and on Indian Head River, and South easterly by the North River, and easterly by the aforesaid Third Herring Brook; from the said North River, to the Dam before mentioned."<sup>3</sup>

The territory here described, is substantially that now constituting the town, — only a small gore having been annexed to Pembroke; — and valuable as it is to the present proprietors, and pleasant as is the home it affords to nearly sixteen hundred free and industrious people, it was still more highly prized, because obtained at greater sacrifices, by the original settlers; and the location of these early residents we propose briefly to notice, according to the best information we have been able to obtain, derived from the Records of the Town and Church, from wills and deeds, and from family tradition; and should any mistakes occur in this, which has proved a difficult part of our task, we can confidently affirm that our list of names is correct, so far as it extends, and errors of location it is impossible always to avoid, inasmuch as the ways travelled then were not, in every case, precisely the same as the highways of our own days, and many families have removed from the town, leaving few traces of their existence behind them.

At the Four Corners, and along the North, and Indian Head Rivers, the earliest settlements were made. Near the North River, and N. 18° W. 125 rods from the Four Corners, the respectable and enterprising family of Barstows settled, as early as 1649. The house of William, the ancestor, who was a carpenter or shipwright by trade, stood in the pasture a few rods North of Back, and East of Washington Street. How it was constructed, or when it was torn down, we have no means of determining with certainty. It had a cellar, the outlines of which are still visible, partially filled with stones and rubbish; and a few scattering trees, the remnants of an old orchard, known as the Benjamin Barstow orchard, are standing near the spot. Whether these trees constituted a part of the original orchard of Mr. Barstow, we cannot say, but it is certain that he had an orchard, as in the volume of "Actions," in the Records of the Old Colony, p. 69, William Barstow complains of John Palmer, Sen. and John Palmer, jr. in an action of £10 damage, "for setting of trapps and caching of swine, whereby the said Barstow is damnified;" and on the same page, is the entry of another action instituted against John Palmer, damage £10, "for pulling down fence, and damnifying his apple trees, and for stroying his corn, English and Indian, with his hoggs." In the old family mansion, William, the youngest son of William, Senr. resided, and after him, his son Benjamin, with his numerous family of twenty-one children.

Farther east, or 41 rods N. E. of the Corners, and opposite the residence of Joseph S. Bates, on Broadway, stood the house of Joseph Barstow, grandson of William, which was used as a block-house or garrison house in the Indian War of 1676. This structure was removed many years ago, but its foundation is still visible, and the outlines of the same may be traced even from the road.

In March 1672, liberty was "graunted and allowed to Joseph Barstow to keep an ordinary at the place where he now lives, and that he be provided always with necessaries for the entertainment of travellers, and keep good order in his house, that there be no just cause of complaint against him in that behalfe."<sup>1</sup>

Across the North River, in Oct. 1656, William, Senr. was authorised to build a bridge, "above the third herring brook, at stoney reache, being the place where now passengers goe frequently over; the said bridge to bee made sufficient for horse and foot; and to cleare and marke a way to Hughes cross, and to open and clear and make a way along beyand Hughes Crosse toward the bay, soe as to avoid a certain Rocky hill and swamp;—he to have £12 current countrey pay for so doing."<sup>2</sup>

July 27. 1662, Mr. Barstow agreed with Mr. Constant Southworth, and Major Josias Winslow, in behalf of the Colony of New Plymouth, to keep in repair and maintain the bridge called Barstow's bridge, upon the North River, in consideration of £20 in hand paid, for 20 years, to serve for transportation of passengers, horses, chattle, and all such use as they shall ordinarily put it to," and pledged for the fulfilment of this contract, the house and land in and on which he dwelt, a small tract already disposed of to his son (in law) Moses Simmons, only excepted.<sup>3</sup>

This bridge, the first built on the stream, stood above the present bridge, and the old piers, which are still visible, and which belonged to the second bridge, are probably near, if not on the spot where Mr. Barstow built.

In 1657, Mr. Barstow was "allowed by the Court to draw and sell wine, beer, and strong waters for passengers that come and goe over the bridge he hath lately made, or others that shall have occasion, unless any just exception shall come in against him.”<sup>1</sup> He had been previously licensed to keep an ordinary ;<sup>2</sup> so that we think it probable that near his bridge he had a small building as a kind of toll-house, and here his refreshments were kept.

About 1662, a grant of land was made to William Barstow, “lying westward of Cornett Studsons graunt, in reference to satisfaction for his paines &c. in the countreys business ;”<sup>3</sup> and the commissioners were instructed to lay out for him not less than 40, nor more than 50 acres of arable land.

Benjamin, Capt. Joseph, and Samuel Barstow, were the representatives of the family in Hanover, at the date of the incorporation of the town.

Benjamin, who occupied his grandfather's house, was engaged principally in ship-building, at the yard established by the family on the North River, as early as 1690, and this business is still followed by his descendants. Some of his sons moved to Rochester, and established ship-yards, yet improved by their descendants, who are among the most active and enterprising men in Mattapoissett.

Capt. Joseph, in connexion with Benjamin Stetson, received in 1720, a grant of two acres of land on the Indian Head River, between Pine Hill and Rocky Run, for the accommodation of a forge and finery, and erected the forge subsequently known as Barstow's forge, but now as Sylvester's, and which was improved by his descendants for nearly a century, or until about the year 1800.

Samuel Barstow resided in the Drinkwater district, and owned land in the Central and Westerly parts of the town. He was engaged principally in farming, having an estate of nearly one thousand acres, and was somewhat interested in commercial pursuits as a ship owner, and in manufactures as proprietor of a mill.

The descendants of these families, and of the common ancestor, are widely scattered over the Northern and Western States, and wherever known are men of respectable standing, and several have risen to eminence and honor, in the councils of States, and the Congress of the nation.

Of the Eells family, which has also furnished to the town useful and enterprising men, who served it faithfully in the French War, and were commanders of Companies in the War of the Revolution, Samuel, a descendant of Revd. Nathaniel, fourth pastor of the Second Church in Scituate, dwelt at the Four Corners, on the spot where the house of Joseph C. Stockbridge stands, and in the building erected and occupied by his father-in-law, Mr. Witherell. He was a blacksmith by trade, and his shop is spoken of in the laying out of a highway in 1730. His career was short, but distinguished. In 1740, a company was enlisted in the county of Plymouth, by Capt. Winslow, to serve in the expedition against the Spanish West Indies, under Admiral Vernon, whose original muster-roll, on parchment, is still in existence, and in the possession of Revd. Benjamin Kent, of Roxbury. Of the 500 men sent in the expedition by Massachusetts, not more than 50 returned, many having fallen victims to the prevailing tropical fevers.<sup>1</sup> Samuel Eells enlisted in this company as an Ensign, and died, either on the passage from Carthage to Jamaica, or at Jamaica, May 9, 1741, in the 35th year of his age. His widow, Hannah, who survived him for many years, and occupied his homestead, obtained a pension from the British Government, through the friendly aid of the Revd. Ebenezer Thompson, Rector of St. Andrew's Church, which, we understand, was punctually remitted to her to the close of her life.<sup>2</sup>

Abner Dwelley, a descendant of Richard, of Scituate, was in Hanover in 1727, but died soon after, and his descendants left the town. He lived on Elm St. not far from Col. J. B. Barstow's, and an old orchard, known as the "Abner Orchard," marks the spot. The cellar and well are yet visible. His brothers settled in Pembroke, and some of their descendants are now in Hanover. Dr. Melzar, Dwelley, also a descendant of Richard, of Scituate, came to Hanover in the latter part of the last century, and remained until his death in 1828. His descendants are in Ashburnham, and South Boston. One of his sons yet resides in Hanover.

Melatah and John Dillingham seem to have lived near the Corners, and tradition says that the former was a blacksmith, and built the house at present occupied by the widow Eells. Joshua, the Quaker, a descendant of Melatiah, was also a blacksmith, and his shop stood at the corner, near Wood & Torrey's store. He moved to New York. A few descendants of these brothers, in the male line, lived in Hanover until the close of the last century, but the name is now extinct. There were several intermarriages in this family with the Este's, of Hanover.

Below the Corners, and on the old Scituate road, near the third Herring brook, called by some the smelt brook, lived the Palmer's. John, supposed to be the same who came with the first settlers of Hingham, in 1635, and who was a freeman in Massachusetts in 1638, was freeman in Plymouth in 1657, with his sons John and Elnathan. His house lot was near the junction of the road S. E. of Church Hill.<sup>1</sup> He is the one referred to in our account of the Barstows. In 1660, he built a log-bridge over the third Herring brook, "from firm upland to firm upland," which is still known as Palmer's bridge. Ezekiel and Josiah, his descendants, were citizens of Hanover for a time, and others of his descendants have resided in the town, though there is but one of the name now living here.

Not far from the residence of the Palmers, lived the Stockbridges, descendants of Charles, of Scituate, who was son of John, the wheelwright. To Charles was granted, in 1673, "30 acres of land on the third Herring brook, on condition that he erect a corn mill on that brook, and keep and tend the mill fourteen years."<sup>1</sup> This mill, subsequently known as Jonah's mill, and the Tiffany mill, stood near the tack factory of Mr. Samuel Salmond, and was built in 1677. In the division of the estate of the father, in 1684, there was given "to Charles, the oldest son, land at third Herring brook, and half the corn-mill and three fourths of the saw-mill there; To Thomas, land on third Herring brook, half the corn-mill, and one fourth of the saw-mill; To Joseph 50 acres of land in Duxbury, near Indian-head river."

The first of these, Charles, lived near the Herring brook, and also Thomas.<sup>3</sup> Joseph, the third son, became a citizen of Pembroke in 1735, but continued to be a member of the Church in Hanover until his death, in 1773, at the advanced age of 100 years. His farm, which was his father's grant, was in what is now Pembroke, and where Haviland, son of the late Capt. William Torrey resides, — the first house in Pembroke, after crossing the bridge at the Curtis Forge. His son David, who married Deborah, daughter of Judge John Cushing, built the house near North River bridge, where the new house of Edmund Q. Sylvester stands, and was Town Clerk for many years, Representative, &c. and his son David was Senator, &c.

Within a half-mile of the Corners, Northward, dwelt the Sylvesters, descendants of Richard, who was of Weymouth in 1633, and of Scituate in 1642. Capt. Joseph, the father of Amos and Benjamin, of Hanover, had, according to Deane,<sup>1</sup> a farm north of the Church Hill, which in part he purchased of John Whiston in 1664, and his house stood where that of Samuel Waterman stands, not far from the third Herring brook. He was Capt. under Col. Benjamin Church, the famous Indian warrior, in the Eastern expedition in 1689, and in 1690, was Captain with 16 men from Scituate, many of whom never returned, in Phips' expedition to Canada, and died in the service. His will, which was verbal, was proved in the Court by three of his soldiers, Benjamin Stetson, and John and William Perry, and gives "all my land at Hugh's cross to son Joseph; the three younger sons (Amos, Benjamin, and David,) to be provided for by their mother (Mary,) out of the remainder of my estate."

On Broadway, and on Elm and Spring Streets, dwelt the Joselyns, descendants of Thomas, who came from London in 1635, through Abraham, his oldest son, and Henry, his grandson, who settled in Scituate in 1669. Nathaniel, Jabez, Joseph, and Dea. Thomas, were living in Hanover at the date of the incorporation of the town. The descendants of this family are very numerous, and widely scattered.

The Burdens or Bardins, Isaac and Thomas, probably descendants of Abraham of Scotland,<sup>2</sup> also resided on Broadway, and tradition says the latter built the house now occupied by David Hersey. He was likewise proprietor of the First Forge, erected on the Indian Head river, about 1704, where the Curtis Forge now stands, whose dam stretched across the stream from shore to shore, and near which the then highly important alewife fishery, subsequently a matter of controversy, and now of no consequence to the town, was carried on in its season.

Farther up the stream, and on the gore which was annexed to Pembroke, dwelt the Cushings, Lt. Elijah and Lt. Nehemiah, descendants of John of Scituate, who came from Hingham in 1662, and who was son of Matthew, born in England in 1588.<sup>1</sup> Both these men were useful in the town, the former serving as Moderator, Representative, &c. The latter, Nehemiah, became a citizen of Pembroke before 1750, and also Elijah; and their descendants are principally in Hanson.

Few families in the country have been more celebrated than the Cushings, and probably no other one has furnished more Judges for our Probate, Municipal and Supreme Courts. In all its branches, it has been highly respectable, and it still maintains its ancient standing.

In the vicinity of the Cushings, and on the gore annexed to Pembroke, so far as I can learn, dwelt a few other families, whose descendants are now in Hanson; as Richard Bowker, Richard Hill, and perhaps Edmund Bowker, William Cocks (Cook, now Coxe,) and Israel Smith.

In the Westerly part of the town, on Torrey's lane, now Winter Street, the Tilden house, a portion of which is still standing, was erected over 130 years ago, and was occupied by a brother of Lt. Job, when the town was incorporated. On the same lane dwelt the Torreys, David and Stephen,—and James and Nathaniel lived more towards the centre of the town. Farther on, and on the same street, the Wings,—Bachelor, Sylvanus, and Ebenezer,—were settled. In the male line, all these names are extinct here. A few of the female descendants still survive, among whom we may name the wife of Thomas M. Bates, who was a Wing.

Around Circuit Street, and in other parts of the Drinkwater district, were settled Robert Young, Thomas Jones, and John Cobb, who left no descendants in Hanover ; Joseph and Samuel Ramsdell, whose descendants are in the western part of the State ; Job Otis, who returned to Scituate ; and near Abington line, Samuel Staples, who occupied the old Wanton House, and John Bray and Thomas Wilkes, the latter of whom has descendants in Abington. William Ford may have lived in the same neighborhood, though of this we cannot speak with confidence.

On and near what is now Plain Street, lived Caleb Barker, the Quaker, whose descendants are in Pembroke and New York ; and Matthew, William, and Edward Estes, a few of whose descendants are in Hanover, but who mostly removed to the Western States.

On Center Street, and near the present residence of Albert White, Esq., the Hatch family settled, on land bought before 1680, by Jeremiah and Walter Hatch, of John Hanmer, being a portion of Hanmer's Hook. Jeremiah, Isaac, and Dea. James, were in Hanover in 1727, and all lived in the Westerly part of the town, James owning the saw-mill near Teague's bridge, then Hatch's bridge, and which stood where stood the mill of Cobb & Cushing, burnt in 1852. The Hatch estate, improved as a farm, and on which was a family burial ground, is said to have been sold in 1743, to Cornelius White, then of Marshfield, and a descendant of Peregrine White, the first male child born in Plymouth Colony—and it has since been in the possession of, and is yet improved by his descendants.

Benjamin Hanmer, a descendant of John, who was of Scituate in 1639, seems to have lived on some part of the hook, and I infer, from scattered notes, that he was settled not far from the old Meeting House.

In the vicinity of this Meeting House, lived the Stetsons, descendants of Cornet Robert, of Scituate, a noted and valuable man in the Colony. Matthew, Benjamin, Seth, Robert, and Samuel, were heads of families when the town was incorporated. Tradition says that Isaac Buck lived in the same neighborhood ; but none of his descendants remain in the town. Probably the venerable schoolmaster, Richard Fitzgerald, lived in the same section of the town; and Thomas and John Rogers, a few of whose descendants yet remain.

The Bates family settled in the Westerly and Southerly parts of the town, and descended from Clement, who was of Hingham in 1636. Joseph, Solomon, Amos, and Clement were in Hanover in 1727, and a large number of their descendants still reside in the town.

The Baileys, descendants of John, of Scituate, 1670, settled first on Curtis Street, and afterwards principally on King Street. Col. John and Major Luther, of Revolutionary memory, belonged to this family, — also Dr. David, of Scituate, and others.

The Curtis family lived on Washington Street, where many of the descendants still reside, and on Curtis, now Main Street. Benjamin, Benjamin, jr., William, John, Elisha, Richard, Jesse, David, Ebenezer, Samuel, Thomas, and Bezaleel, were in Hanover before 1727.

The Turners, descendants of Humphrey, of Scituate, and Thomas, of Hingham, settled on Curtis Street, and in the North part of the town, in the "Snappet" neighborhood.

Joseph House lived on Curtis Street, and David, the latter, near T. J. Gardner's mill, on the third Herring brook.

John, Uriah, and Isaac Lambert, lived in the Northerly part of the town. This name is extinct in Hanover.

Of the Manns, descendants of Richard the planter, who came over in the Mayflower in 1620, Benjamin was in Hanover in 1723, and owned part of a mill on Curtis Street, where he resided.

Eliab Studley, a descendant of Benjamin, of Hingham, settled on Pleasant Street; and Benoni, who was of another family, from Sandwich, lived on Hanover Street, and his house, one of the oldest in the town, is still standing, not far from the residence of the late Dr. Joshua Studley.

Benjamin Bass, the first minister of the town, also lived on Hanover Street, and his house stood near the house of William Church.

Joseph Cornish resided near him, but no descendants are left in the town.

Jonathan and Othniel Pratt resided on Washington Street, near where Martin and Samuel S. Church now reside. A few of their descendants yet live in the town.

Thomas Rose, a descendant of Thomas, who was in the "Two mile" in 1660, seems to have lived near where Edwin Rose now resides, on Hanover Street; and Edward Brisco lived in the same neighborhood, the plain on which his house stood being known on old records as Brisco's Plain. If I am not mistaken, he moved to North Carolina over a hundred years ago.

Of the Perrys,—Samuel and Joseph were early in Hanover, and have descendants here, and in Pembroke, and other towns in the vicinity.

William Witherell, the First Town Clerk, lived at the Four Corners, and perhaps Samuel and Daniel also. John Woodwarth, or Woodward, lived beyond William Church's, on Hanover Street, near Woodward hill, so called. Both these names are now extinct in the town.

Capt. Joseph Soper, lived on what is now Union Street, back of the house occupied by Josiah Bonney, on the hill. His descendants are in Hanson.

A few other names occur on the early records, but most of them are extinct. Of these are Henry Merritt, Ezekiel Vinal, John Warren, Benjamin and John Taylor, Nathan Bourne, Samuel Harlow, Hugh Vickery, Daniel Foster, John Stoddard, and Recompense Tiffany; the last of whom lived near Palmer's Bridge.

The families of Briggs, Brooks, Barrell, Clark, Church, Chamberlin, Gardner, Ellis, Jacobs, Munroe, Robbins, Simmons, and Whiting, appear on the records from 1740 to 1775. The other names in the town are of a more recent date. Sketches of all these families will be found in our Second Part.

In the foregoing pages, our aim has been to give a picture of the town before the Revolution, and especially in the earlier days of its settlement. We do not claim that our sketch is perfect; on the contrary, we think it highly probable that some errors will be detected in it; but we have sought to make it correct and reliable. Should errors be discovered, however, we hope they will be noted, and that those who have it in their power to correct them, will take the liberty so to do.

The records on which we have been obliged to rely, are scattered and fragmentary. The elders of the town are fast disappearing; and many from whom much that is valuable might have been learned, have departed to the spirit-land. Those that remain have been diligently consulted, and the gleamings of their memories faithfully recorded.

CHAPTER II.

NATURAL HISTORY.

"To me be Nature's volume broad displayed,
And to peruse its all-instructing page,
Or, haply catching inspiration thence,
Some easy passage, raptured to translate;
My sole delight, as through the falling glooms
Pensive I stray, or with the rising dawn,
On fancy's eagle-wing excursive soar."

THOMSON.

Geology of the Town—Forests, ancient and modern, with their products, value and uses—Herbaceous Plants—Birds, &c.—Laws for their destruction, and argument for their preservation—Wild and Domestic Fruits—Ancient Sheep Husbandry, and the Culture of Flax, Wheat, &c.—Materials for improving the soil—Indications of progress.

It is an interesting fact, and one calculated to impress us with an exalted sense of the Infinite Wisdom of our Heavenly Father, that every square mile of the earth's surface has an aspect of its own, and presents to us features which, though resembling in some respects what may be elsewhere seen, are so different in others as to give to it a distinctive character, sufficient to render it worthy of a separate notice. Hence every town has its own natural history. The contour of its surface, with its hills and plains; the quantity of its arable land, with the proportion unfit for cultivation, and covered with rocks or water; the extent of its forests, with the comparative abundance, age, and size of the trees of which they are composed;—these, and other minuter details, which we need not specify, give to every spot on our globe a peculiar interest in the eyes of those most familiar with its scenery, and encircle it with that mysterious charm which hovers around the place of our nativity, or the home of our adoption.

Of the town of Hanover, we may briefly say that its surface is comparatively level,—undulating in some parts,—and with a few scattered hills, but none of any great elevation. There are spots of highland, here and there, from which beautiful views may be obtained of the country around, stretching away to the distance of from twelve to twenty miles, with the Blue Hills to the North, and Manomet to the South. On Walnut Hill is one of these "look outs," and on a beautiful summer's day, or even in October, when the leaves are changing, and the forests are clothed in their rich autumnal drapery, it is worth one's while to take a seat in the top of a majestic pine, very easy of ascent, which stands near the summit, and from thence to survey the attractive picture, of God's own painting, spread out before the eye; attractive, not only for its own diversity and beauty, but for the associations connected with it, as compassing the home of the Pilgrims,—the ground pressed by their feet, and watered by their blood, and hallowed by their spirits which seem as if gazing, with a rapture full equal to our own, on what was to them a consecrated soil!

Of the geology of the town, traces of diluvial action are everywhere visible, not only in the range and shape of our hills, but in the numerous boulders of granite and greenstone, with which its surface is covered; some of which were evidently transported from Hingham, and correspond with the ledges of that town, especially with the granite ledge, intersected by veins of trap, through which the South Shore Rail Road is cut in West Hingham;—others from Cohasset, corresponding with the rocks in situ there;—and others from Weymouth, from the vicinity of the Old Spain Meeting House, and the Depot at Back River.

The largest, however, are from the extensive granite beds which underlie all but that part of the town bordering on the North River, and which outcrop on Walnut Street, and along the third Herring brook, and in the vicinity of Brooks's upper mill, and on Centre Street, as may be seen by the references on the map of the town, placed there by Mr. Whiting at the author's suggestion. Of these boulders, some, of great size, are still nicely poised upon the parent rock, and have been moved but a few feet at the most. An example may be seen in the pasture land of Rev. Robert L. Killam, on Walnut Street.

Along the North River, a grauwacke formation occurs, which extends North-westerly through Hanson and Abington; and in the latter town, near the residence of Benjamin Hobart, Esq., explorations have been made for coal, but not with sufficient success, in the estimation of Mr. Hobart, to warrant a continuance of the enterprise. Undoubtedly coal exists in the whole of this formation, but at such a depth, and mixed, especially in its upper beds, with so large a per centage of the carburet of iron, that it will not for a long time, if ever, be wrought with profit. Even in the grauwacke of Rhode Island, where explorations for coal are now in progress, near the Blackstone river, and about three miles from Pawtucket, and where an article of much better quality than formerly, is being raised, the depth of the shafts is over 300 feet, and the expense of conducting the work is so great, that it absorbs nearly if not quite all the materiel which is sold.

Specimens of crystallised quartz, though not of great beauty, are frequently found in the Westerly and Southerly parts of the town, where quartz boulders occur. The author has one lump of considerable size, in which the crystals radiate from a central nucleus, apparently of grey quartz, in a stellar form, — the crystals themselves being white or cream colored, and slightly tinged with the oxide of iron. Specimens of earthy chlorite, the granules of which are green, and often of a triangular form when seen through a magnifier, occur in the same localities. A peculiar kind of feruginous asbestiform quartz, called by the people "petrified chips," also occurs somewhat abundantly near the North River, with bituminous shale; and in the rock near Perry's Tack Factory, is a vein of ochrey brown oxide of iron, nearly a foot wide; and there are traces of the earthy oxide of manganese, on the bank of the river.

Micaceous oxide of iron, in small quantity, is found in the granite region, and sometimes handsome specimens of porphyry may be obtained, in which the crystals of feldspar are white, large, and quite numerous. The hydrate or bog iron, of fair quality, and yielding a considerable per centage when smelted, may be found in most of our low grounds, especially near the water courses, as at Iron Mine Brook, and in alluvial tracts.<sup>1</sup> Hydrate of Silica is also common in the low grounds, with peat.

Clay occurs on Walnut Hill, and bricks were made there sixty years ago, by Dea. Benjamin Mann. In this clay are rarely disseminated crystals of selenite, and specimens of nodular argillaceous iron ore. Some years since, and in the days when less was known of geology than now, a search for the precious metals was made in one part of the town, and quite a California fever raged for a season. A few crystals of quartz were obtained; and when the little cubical blocks of sulphuret of iron, which have deceived so many, made their appearance, glittering in the sun, and of a golden yellow, they were seized with avidity, and the miners thought their fortune was made.

At a still earlier period, when physical science was rarely studied even by the learned, divining by the hazel rod, and by the stone in the hat, which made the universe transparent, taught sapient divines, as well as astute laymen, that beneath the surface treasures vast were within their grasp, and could be easily obtained! But the only treasure that has thus far been dug from our soil, is the plentiful crop which the plough and the hoe have brought forth.

The forests of Hanover, which cover a large part of its territory, are extensive and valuable; and here are found trees of the kinds most common in our State, as the white, swamp white, grey, red, scarlet, yellow bark, and bear or "ragged plain" Oak; the upland and swamp Elm; the crabbed Hornbeam; the pignut and shellbark Hickory; the white, the black, and the yellow Birch; the fragrant Sassafras, an article of commerce two centuries ago; the common white maple; the tremulous Poplar; the majestic Beech; the white and the black Ash; the spine-leaved Holly; the Wych-Elm, or Iron Wood, as some term it; the verdant Hemlock; the tall Spruce; the white and the red Cedar; and the white, yellow, and pitch Pine.

White Birch is a wood of rapid growth, and is fit to cut once in twelve or fifteen years. Oak, Maple, Birch, and Walnut, may be cut once in from twenty-five to thirty-five years. Pines attain to a considerable size in thirty years, and some trees, with that growth upon them, are large enough for board logs. The Cedar, the Hemlock, and the Spruce, are of a slower growth and cannot usually be cut oftener than once in about sixty years.

There are large tracts of Cedar Swamp in the Westerly part of the town, the wood from which is valuable for posts and rails, and if of good quality, for the manufacture of tubs, piggins, pails and churns.

Several hundred cords of pine, called rare-ripes, are annually carted to Hingham, for the use of the coopers, to be made into the pails, firkins, dumbetty tubs, and other articles of wooden ware for which that place is so famous. Crocker Wilder & Co., are the most extensive purchasers, and the largest manufacturers, though the business is carried on, more or less, all over that town.

Nearly a half million feet of boards are also sawed annually, — mostly pine, — the half-inch stuff being used chiefly for the manufacture of shoe-boxes, and trunks; — a business extensively carried on at Shepherd's Factory, in Pembroke, at the steam mill of Mr. John Jones, in South Scituate, at the workshop of Mr. John Gross, in the same town, and at several establishments in Hanover, especially on Whiting Street.

Cedar and pine shingles are sawed at Brooks's upper mill, and at the mill owned by Mr. Nahum Stetson, on Pleasant Street.

There is a ready market for from two to three hundred cords of pine wood, annually, at the brick-yard of Mr. Edward Jacobs, in South Scituate. Oak, maple, and other kinds of hard wood, find a market principally in Hingham, Abington, and Weymouth. Charcoal is manufactured to a considerable extent every year by Mr. Ethan Perry, on Main Street. Ship-timber is saleable at Scituate harbor, and at the yards on the North River, though the quantity cut is not very large. Oak and maple butts are sold to the coopers, at Hingham, and plank to the wheelwrights of Hanover and Scituate. Our farmers engage in the lumbering business more or less every winter; and it not only furnishes steady employment for their teams, but a fertile field for the exercise of their own industry, and a by no means unfruitful source of addition to their income.

It is sometimes asserted that the quantity of wood in the town is not so great as it was fifty or seventy five years ago; and it may be, and doubtless is true, that trees of great size, and of an old growth are diminishing, though there are still "not a few" left. But as much, if not more territory is now covered with forests, — many fields and pastures having been left to grow to wood, and pieces which were planted within the memory of the living, and on which the indian hills are yet visible, are covered with trees from fifteen to eighteen inches in diameter. Indeed, we think we may safely say, that there is a supply left sufficient for home consumption for several generations ; and at least for one century, even if the demand is as brisk as now, no apprehensions of an entire failure in this supply need be entertained.

It was probably the custom of the early settlers of New England, as it is of the emigrants of different nations who are peopling the Western States, to make clearings by cutting the trees upon those tracts designed for cultivation, and heaping the trunks and limbs into one vast pile, which was set on fire, and burned to ashes ; and this process as at present conducted, is termed "burning the fallow."

It is quite certain that the forest trees which stood on our soil two hundred years ago, were much larger than any that are seen in our day, and doubtless approximated in size the monarchs of the Mississippi valley. The author has seen, in the State of Illinois, red oaks four feet in diameter, and black walnuts five feet through ; and in the low, rich bottom lands, the cotton-wood trees grow to a great height and size, their tops appearing to pierce the clouds. But farther west, on the borders of the Pacific, in California and Oregon, travellers, upon whose veracity we can rely, inform us that the trees are of a still larger growth, and that pines are found there three hundred feet high !<sup>1</sup> It is not uncommon to find pine trees in Hanover, one hundred feet high, and from three and one half to four feet in diameter. These are old trees ; — but our old men tell me that in their boyhood, the trees were still larger, and Cedars and Oaks were found from three to four feet through !

We are not to infer, however, that the fertility of the soil, or its capacity for the production of such trees is exhausted ; for were the forests now standing left undisturbed for two centuries to come, and could we then look upon the scene which they would present to our view, we should have a picture of New England as it was seen by the Pilgrims, and the primeval aspect of our hills and plains would be restored, and the deer and the wolf be once more seen in the land.

The Indians disturbed not often the vegetation of the country they inhabited. Their axes of stone, were not so well fitted as our keen-edged tools of steel for felling trees. Hence the forests continued to grow, from age to age, furnishing lairs for the wild beasts, and favorite resorts for herds of deer, and countless multitudes of wild fowls which lodged in their branches.

Of the herbaceous plants described by Bigelow, in his Plants of Boston, the author has found over three hundred species in the town of Hanover, and probably more might be discovered were the whole of its territory explored. Of the flowerless plants, as the mosses, the lichens, the ferns, and the fungi, we have also a large number of species, some of which are not only rare, but exceedingly beautiful. Indeed, our little municipality is by no means an uninteresting field for botanical researches, and several plants are common here, and in Seituete, which are less frequently met with in other towns in the State; as the Kalmia latifolia, or Mountain Laurel, which in June is covered with a multitude of rich and fragrant blossoms; — the Epigæa repens, or Mayflower, a sweet-scented, and modest little plant, blossoming early in April, and which was probably the first plant seen in bloom by the pilgrims the spring after they landed, — whence its name; — and the Pyrola maculata, or spotted pyrola, with its zebra-striped leaves, peeping out from the dry and mouldering vegetation scattered every fall around in the forest.

The author has taken great pleasure in rambling through woods and swamps, and over pastures and meadows, at all seasons of the year, in quest of flowers; and seldom has he made an excursion without learning something new; either discovering fresh localities, or returning laden with more beautiful specimens, or with plants of a different species from any that had been previously met with in his walks. But woe to the luckless wight who, in such strolls, comes in contact, all unconsciously perhaps, with the poisonous ivy, in scaling stone walls, or the malignant dogwood, in threading his way through the swamps; for swollen features, and days of pain will be the portion of those who imbibe the venom of these plants through the pores of the skin, or inhale it through the lungs! And blessed are they who can handle with impunity these usually annoying "subjects of the vegetable kingdom."

In the earlier days of our Country's history, deer and wild cats, and even bears and wolves were found in all our forests, and ducks, and geese, and crows, and blue jays, and other birds, were far more numerous than now;—so much so that laws were passed, and bounties offered, to aid in extirpating those which were most destructive, or from which danger was apprehended. Deer were protected, however; and December 13, 1739, in Hanover, Dea. James Hatch and William Curtis were chosen "to look after the Deer that none are killed and destroyed contrary to law." But wild-cats, and many birds were doomed. Thus, March 1, 1732-3, there was paid to Joseph Bates, Solomon Bates, Stephen Torrey, John Woodworth, Benjamin Curtis, Ebenezer Curtis, and others, each 20s. for "killing wild cats;" and in 1738, 40s. a head were voted for killing them, and in 1744, £3 each was voted to be paid for every one killed in Hanover or Abington.

In 1736-7, £6, 18s. were voted to different persons for killing "birds and squirals;" and in 1740, 3d. a head was voted for "killing black birds, squirals, jay birds, chuits, read thrashers and wood-peckers."

In 1773, a bounty of 1s. a head was granted for killing crows, and 2d. a head for crow blackbirds, and ground or red squirrels, the head to be shown as proof of the killing. The bounty on crows continued to be paid so late as 1837.

In 1836, the Legislature of the State offered a bounty on killing foxes, and throughout the State a destructive warfare was waged against them. In Hanover, 13 were killed, for which a bounty was received.<sup>1</sup>

Of the policy of such regulations, every one must judge for himself. For our own part, whilst we admit the propriety of destroying wolves, wild cats, racoons, skunks, and beasts of the like nature, we are free to own that in our opinion, the jay, and the wood-pecker, and the red thrasher, and the blackbird, and even the crow, though they do much mischief, and are less melodious singers than some others, pay their way, and deserve to be protected, for preserving our trees and vegetables, from the ravages of insects and field mice, which increase just in the ratio that birds diminish.

The crow is by no means an uninteresting bird. True he is a rogue, and wants watching, — but he will devour scores of grubs in a day, and save more corn for the harvest, than he steals in the seed. Let all the birds live, to enliven our forests! Let the robin come to our door-yards, and pick up the crumbs; and if he does steal a few cherries, we take more from the trees!

To rise at break of day, and hear these sweet warblers breathing forth their morning hymn; — the prelude by the robin, and the chorus swelled by the trill of the oriole, the scream of the jay, the hawk, and the wood-pecker, and the distant cawing of the crow, with the solo of the bobolink, and the symphony of the peewit, or chickadee; and at mid-day, to hear in the stillness of noon, the chant of the cuckoo, or the plaintive call of the cat-bird, and the chattering of the striped, red, grey, and flying squirrels, as they skip from tree to tree; and at night, to hear the whippoorwills complaint: — all these to me, are sweet and pleasant sounds; — and even the flight of the butterfly, the note of the bee, and the hum of the locust, with at eventide the chirp of the cricket, the radiance of the glow-worm, or that mimic lightning, flashing out with incessant scintillations from the multitude of fire flies hovering over field and meadow; — all have charms for my spirit, and lead me to adore the wisdom and goodness of Him who has made everything beautiful in its time, and who is good unto all, and whose tender mercies are over all his works.

Of the agricultural interests of Hanover, we think we may truly say that the farmers of this section are beginning to manifest a commendable spirit of progress and improvement, and fine crops of corn, rye, potatoes and hay, are raised in favorable seasons. Of wild fruits, we have the usual variety. Grapes are abundant in the woods, and cranberries in the meadows. Whortleberries, strawberries, blueberries, and blackberries, too, are abundant; and in the summer months, when a vacation is given to our school children, they may be seen daily in groups wending their way to the pastures and woods, with baskets, or tin kettles, or barks on their arms, their merry voices striking like sweet music on the parent's ear, and returning with their luscious offerings to the domestic shrine, which, served with baked apples and milk, furnish a dish so luxurious that we doubt whether Queen Victoria, or the Emperor Nicholas, or any other monarch or prince, of ancient or modern times, ever tasted a better, or ate one more palatable, nourishing, and innocent.

Considerable attention is beginning to be paid to the raising of domestic fruits, and plantations of the apple, and peach are becoming quite common; and even the pear, the quince, and the cherry, with the smaller fruits, including the currant and gooseberry, are not wholly neglected; though much remains to be done before public attention will be thoroughly awakened to these matters, and every farm will be supplied with fruit of all kinds, in rich abundance, both for summer and winter use.

The famous high-top-sweeting, an apple which is a native of Plymouth County, ripe in September, of a medium size, golden yellow, and mellow and juicy, is not so common as it was when our fathers were young. Orchards of these trees were then quite numerous. But the crabbed, sour apples with which they were accompanied, and which caused the cider press to shriek in agony as the teeth of the cog-wheels met and crunched them, and whose juice was vinegar almost as soon as expressed, have given place to the Baldwin, the Greening, the Roxbury Russet, the Spitzenberg, the Early Harvest, the Yellow Bough, and the many other varieties of far more palatable fruits, which characterise the present age. Nurseries, too, are being established here, and in adjoining towns, which are doing an increasing business, in the sale of trees to our own citizens and others.

The Pratt Rare Ripe, is an excellent seedling peach, a native of this town, raised by Mr. B. C. Pratt, who resides about one half a mile from the Four Corners; and it is not only hardy and prolific, but seems to be almost entirely exempt from that common scourge,—the yellows,—which destroys so many of our finest trees.

There was a time in the history of the town, when all our farmers kept their flocks of sheep, and raised, and spun their own wool, and made their own cloth; and the hum of the wheel, and the clatter of the loom, tended by the goodwife, were heard in about every dwelling. Indeed, such was the esteem in which this branch of industry was held, that in 1732, the town "made choyce of Caleb Barker and Thomas Josselyun as agents to draw up a Town act for the Regulation of Rames," to prevent them from running at large, to the injury of the flocks.

It is to be borne in mind, that farms of from two to four hundred acres, and even more, were owned by many of our townsmen then, and hence the range of pasturage was such that sheep could be kept to good advantage. But it is now rare to find farms containing even one hundred acres. Hence sheep are kept by but few; and the loom and the spinning wheel, with but rare exceptions are mouldering in the garret, or have long since been cut up into fire wood to heat the oven on baking days; — and the daughters of our farmers, and even the mothers, for the most part, spend their time either in fitting shoes, or in the manufacture of coarse garments for the ready made clothing establishments of Boston.— The flocks have gone to the hills of New Hampshire and Vermont, or to the prairies of the West, and the wool is sent to our extensive factories, at Lowell and elsewhere, to be converted into carpets and rugs for our floors, or shawls and de-laines for the ladies wear, or broad cloths and cassimeres for the men.

Flax was also an article to whose cultivation considerable attention was once paid; and the smaller wheels, upon which linen thread was spun, of which the snow white table cloths, and sheetings and shirtings were made, which constituted, so important a part of the outfit of the new housekeeper, have not been laid aside over thirty years. The hatchel, and swingling-knife, alas! are numbered, forever, we fear, with the things that were but are not!

Doubtless these changes are all for the best, when rightly viewed. Occasionally we hear lamentable jeremiads upon the degeneracy of the times, and complaints that the simplicity of former days has entirely vanished, and that strength, and vigor, and power of endurance, are likewise departing from our sons and daughters, who are rising up around us a puny race, wholly unfit for the storms and tempests of life.

But we long since learned to look at the world, not from the deceptive position with which the imagination is ever inclined to invest the past, but from that broader stand-point which looks at man, not as a beast of burden alone, having a body to feed and a back to clothe, but as an intellectual and a moral being, capable of unlimited advancement in that exalted career which God has marked out for him, and of making continued improvements, tending not only to increase his physical comforts, but to open the way for nobler pursuits and purer joys, in the expansion of the mind, and the cultivation of the heart.

About fourteen years ago, or in 1838, the Committee on Agriculture made a report to the Legislature, in favor of "allowing a bounty on the production of Wheat,"<sup>1</sup> which led to the passage of a law granting such bounty, and to the publication, by order of the Legislature, of a valuable report "on the cultivation of Spring Wheat," from the pen of the lamented Henry Colman.<sup>2</sup> In 1839, from the "Abstract of the returns of the bounties paid for Wheat,"<sup>3</sup> Hanover is represented by six claimants, who raised 101 bushels, and received a bounty of \$12.55. Mr. Colman, the Commissioner, in his return for 1840, states that these six claimants sowed  $11\frac{1}{2}$  acres, and that the average yield was 9 bushels per acre. The several crops were 14 bushels,  $10\frac{2}{7}$  bushels, and four of  $7\frac{1}{2}$  bushels. Samuel House was one of the claimants, and his certificate is the only one I find on file in the Town Clerk's office. The largest crop was obtained by the application of 12 loads of compost from the yard. The crop is said to have suffered from the drought.<sup>4</sup> In 1840, there were two claimants from Hanover, who raised  $38\frac{1}{2}$  bushels, and received \$4.43.<sup>5</sup> But this experiment was not attended with all the results which its sanguine friends desired. Perhaps it was too soon abandoned.—At all events, it developed important facts, and taught us clearly, as the returns show, that there are sections of the State, and especially the Western Counties, in the limestone region of Berkshire and Franklin, where wheat can be raised successfully and profitably.

The materials for improving the soil in Hanover, and increasing our crops, are probably as abundant, and can be as easily obtained, as in any of the adjoining towns; and the natural resources are as great and as available. In our low grounds are vast deposits of decaying vegetable matter, the accumulation of ages, in the form of peat, and muck, and beds of leaves, all of which are useful as manures, and of excellent quality and incalculable value when judiciously composted, and liberally applied.

By the drainage of our meadows, too, and more skill on the upland, the produce of the soil might be easily doubled in a very few years, and the wealth of our citizens proportionably increased. We need a more enlightened industry in all our towns, to secure the highest results. Intelligent labor is as applicable in farming and quite as advantageous, as in any branch of human enterprise. And when it is borne in mind by our citizens, that we have no rail road, with its freight trains, running through the place; that the old line of Plymouth stages which daily passed the Four Corners is discontinued; and that ship-building has shifted its quarters to the vicinity of Boston; it will be at once apparent, that our chief dependance for the future must be upon the soil and its productions. And though our Mills, and Forges, and Tack Factories, and Boot and Shoe Establishments, may do much to develope our industry, and increase our wealth, yet the earth is our great nursing-mother, and from her prolific bosom must we draw our nourishment, and our means of support.

Assiduous labor in this direction, accompanied by persevering effort, and enlightened skill, will enable us to keep pace with the towns around us; so that Hanover will continue to be, as in the past, respectable for the industry, the enterprise, and the intelligence of its citizens. And what has been accomplished within the past twenty five years, should be an encouragement to us to continue to progress. Houses were then unpainted, and the walls, for the most part covered with shingles;—and many were but half-finished within, and but few were carpeted. Barns were mere hovels, without cellars, with the wind whistling through every crack. Now, almost every house is neatly finished and painted, and well furnished within; and our barns are being rebuilt, of fair proportions, with the walls shingled, and with large cellars. Improved implements of husbandry have been introduced, and land, though divided into small fields, is much better tilled and the produce of hundreds of acres has been greatly increased. The smallness of our fields, however, is partly a matter of necessity, to make room in the walls, for the stones which are cleared from the surface.

To complete our sketch, we should perhaps add, that several of our townsmen are engaged in driving cattle, sheep, and swine, every spring and fall, for the supply of this and other towns; and the size and power of our oxen, the milking quality of our cows, the fattening properties of our hogs, and the speed of our horses, have all partaken of the changes which have been made in other respects.

Onward seems to be New England's motto, and the spirit of improvement, now so generally diffused, will eventually bless every home, and will tend, in the Providence of God, to make the future richer in comfort, and a scene of higher advancement, than any thing we have dreamed of, or which we have even thought it possible to attain.

CHAPTER III.

INDIANS.

“Indulge, my native land, indulge the tear
That steals, impassioned o'er a nation's doom,
To me, each twig from Adam's stock is near,
And sorrows fall upon an Indian's tomb.” DWIGHT.

Names of the seven principal tribes — Chikatabut's possessions — Indian Deed of Seitate — Manners and customs of the natives — Stature, clothing, money, weapons, dwellings, food, &c. — Dishes at the first meeting of the Old Colony Club — Philip's War — Reminiscences of the Indians of Hanover — Changes which have taken place since those days.

Previous to the settlement of New England by the white race, the whole country was in the possession of the Indians, who were very numerous, until reduced by a great war, and by a devastating sickness, which some have supposed was the plague, others the small pox, and others the yellow fever, and which took place about the year 1617. Early voyagers speak of “countless multitudes” seen by them when they visited the country. Smith, who took his survey in 1614, says, — “the seacoast as you pass, shows you all along, large cornfields and great troupes of well proportioned people.” Gookin enumerates 18,000 warriors, in five nations, and some have computed that, in all, there were at least 25,000 warriors, and 100,000 people.

According to Lechford, they were governed by Sachems, Kings, and Sagamores, or petty lords, and were divided into several great nations, each of which consisted of many tribes. Seven of these nations are named in New England, viz: — 1, the warlike Tarrantines, under Nultonanit, who were in the Eastern part of Maine, beyond the Penobscot river; — 2, the Chur-ehurs, under Bashaba, from the Penobscot to the Piscataqua; — 3, the Pawtucketts, numbering 3000 warriors, under Nanapashemet, whose dominion reached from the Piscataqua to the river Charles, and extended north, as far as Concord, on the Merrimac; — 4, the Wampanoags, divided into 32 tribes, and numbering 3000 warriors, who were ruled by Massasoit, a sachem of great power, but who was ever a friend to the English, and whose dominion was in the Southeastern part of Massachusetts, from Cape Cod, to Narraganset Bay; — 5, the Narragansets, numbering 5000 warriors, and governed by Canonicus and Miantonimo, who lived in Rhode Island on the west of Narraganset Bay; — 6, the Pequots, numbering 4000 fighting men, under Sassacus, a name of terror, who dwelt in Connecticut; — and 7, the Massachusetts, so named from the Blue Hills at Milton, numbering 3000 warriors, under Chikatabut, whose territory extended from Nishamagoguanett, near Duxbury mill, to Titicut, near Taunton, and to Nuckatateset, now Nippenicket, a pond in the Southwest part of Bridgewater, adjoining Raynham, — and from thence in a straight line to Wanamampuke, or Whiting's Pond in Wrentham.<sup>1</sup>

The latter tribe owned the land around Hanover, and their sachem, Chikatabut, was one of the nine who, on the 13th September, 1621, subscribed at Plymouth, the Articles of Submission to King James,<sup>2</sup> and he, with many of his people, died of the small pox, in 1633, and was succeeded by his son Josias Wampatuck.

The Pilgrims were well aware of the diminution of the Indians, by war and sickness, before their arrival. Their charter from King James states "that he had been given certainly to knowe, that within these late years there hath, by God's visitation, rained a wonderfule plague, together with many horrible slaughters and murthers, committed amongst the savages and brutish people there heertofore inhabiting, in a manner to the utter destruction, devastacion and depopulacion of that whole territorye, so that there is not left, for many leagues together in a manner, any that doe claime or challenge any kind of interests therein."<sup>1</sup>

This circumstance, — the death of the savages, — was doubtless favorable to the Pilgrim band, and contributed greatly to their peaceful and permanent settlement. Our fathers, however, acknowledge an Indian title to the soil, which consisted chiefly in a privilege of free fishing, trapping, and hunting; and this title, they considered themselves bound lawfully to extinguish, by purchase or otherwise.

They did not, therefore, seize with violence the possessions of the red race. Their rights were generally respected. And the Indian deeds which have descended to us, are not only valuable to the antiquary, but are living mementos of our father's honor, and convincing proofs that they were willing to render some equivalent for whatever they received.

The land comprised within the limits of Scituate and Hanover, together with the tract called the "Two Miles," was purchased of Josias Wampatuck, and the deed, which bears date "Plymouth, June 1653," reads as follows:

"I Josias Wampatuck do acknowledge and confess that I have sold two tracts of land unto Mr. Timothy Hatherly, Mr. James Cudworth, Mr. Joseph Tilden, Humphrey Turner, William Hatch, John Hoar, and James Torrey, for the proper use and behoof of the Town of Scituate, to be enjoyed by them according to the true intents of the English grants: The one parsel of such land is bounded from the mouth of the North River as that River goeth to the Indian head River, from thence as that River goeth unto the Pond at the head of that River, and from the pond at the head of the Indian head River upon a straight line unto the middle of Accord Pond: from Accord Pond, by the line set by the Commissioners as the bounds betwixt the two jurisdictions, untill it meet with the line of the land sold by me unto the sharers of Conihasset, and as that line runs between the Town and the shores, untill it cometh unto the sea: and so along by the sea unto the mouth of the North River aforesaid. The other parcell of land lying on the easterly side of the North River, begins at a lot which was sometime the land of John Ford, and so to run two miles southerly as the River runs, and a mile in breadth towards the east, for which parcell of land, I do acknowledge to have received of the men whose names are before mentioned, fourteen pounds in full satisfaction, in behalf of the inhabitants of the town of Scituate as aforesaid; and I do hereby promise and engage to give such further evidence before the Governor as the Town of Scituate shall think meet, when I am thereunto required; in witness whereof, I have hercunto set my hand in presence of

At the same time when Josias made acknowledgment as above mentioned, there was a Deed brought into Court which he owned to be the Deed which he gave to them whose names are above specified for the said lands, and that he had not given them another; which deed was burnt in presence of the Court.

NATHANIEL MORTON, Secretary." <sup>1</sup>

The manners and customs of the Indians have been painted by some writers in glowing colors; but, viewing their condition as sober reason presents it to our view, it cannot be regarded as enviable or desirable. True, they were free; roamed the land at will; ate of its fruits as spontaneously produced, spending but little time in the cultivation of their maize and roots; and lived chiefly by hunting and fishing. But this, though usually a fertile supply, often failed, through indolence, and other causes, so that they knew the gnawings of hunger, and the distress of famine. The different tribes, too, were frequently at war with each other; and the amenities of life, and the kindlier feelings of the heart were but little cultivated, and were even lightly esteemed. Stern endurance, and unshrinking submission to the fiercest tortures, were regarded as the principal virtues, and he was the greatest hero, who had taken the most scalps, and slain the most enemies in battle.

In their persons, the Indians were not taller than the white race. Wood, in his New England's Prospect, published in 1633, describes them as "black haired, out nosed, broad shouldered, brawny armed, long and slender handed, out breasted, small waisted, lank bellied, well thighed, flat kneed, handsome grown legs, and small feet."

Josselynn, also, in his New England's Rarities, says of the women, "many of them have very good features, seldom without a come-to-me in their countenance, all of them black eyed, having even, short teeth, and very white, their hair black, thick and long, broad breasted, handsome straight bodies and slender, their limbs cleanly straight, generally plump as a partridge, and saving now and then one, of a modest deportment."<sup>1</sup>

It was their constant practice to oil their bodies and face with fat of bears and eagles, and to paint the face with various fantastic colors, as red, black, and white;—and though this smearing of the person may have seemed beautiful in their eyes, yet it must have given to them any thing but an agreeable odor, in a warm day, or in a close apartment!<sup>2</sup> The dress of the men was the skin of a deer or wolf, though generally they were naked, except a slight covering around the waist. The women wore robes of beaver skin, with sleeves of deer skin, dressed, and drawn with lines of different colors into ornamental figures. Some wore a short mantle of trading cloth,—blue, or red,—fastened with a knot under the chin, and girt around the waist with a zone; their buskins fringed with feathers, and a fillet around their heads, which were often adorned with plumes. The moccasins, worn by both sexes, were made of skins, and their snow-shoes were ingeniously constructed for winter's use. The men considered labor as degrading to them, and maintained that "squaws and hedge hogs were made to scratch the ground," and called the white people "much fool to spoil their women by keeping them from out door labor and making them lazy squaws." The women, therefore, were held in abject servitude, and compelled to do all the drudgery,—as planting, harvesting, and carrying burdens,—while their lords lolled listlessly around, smoking, or recounting their warlike exploits.

Their money was made of shells, and was of two kinds, the wampum peag, or white, and the suckauhoe, or black; the latter being twice as valuable as the former. Roger Williams, in his Key, says "one fathom of this, their stringed money, is worth five shillings." Josselynn, speaking of these beads, which were their money, says, the one is their gold, and the other their silver. "These they work out of certain shells, so cunningly that neither <sup>2</sup> It has been suggested to me, that a custom similar to the above, prevails in Eastern nations, and that the practice of oiling the body, is considered conducive to health.

Jew nor Devil can counterfeit. They drill and string them, and make curious works with them, to adorn the persons of their Sagamores and principal men, and young women, as belts, girdles, tablets, borders for their women's hair, bracelets, necklaces, and links to hang in their ears. Prince Philip, a little before I came away for England, (1671,) coming to Boston, had a coat on and buskins set thick with these beads, in pleasant wild works, and a broad belt of the same; his accoutrements were valued at £20."

Their war weapons, were bows, arrows, and tomahawks. The bows, which were strong and elastic, were made of walnut or ash, and strung with sinews of deer or moose. With these they could throw an arrow to a great distance, and strike any object desired with remarkable precision.

Their arrows were made of elder, feathered with the quills of eagles, and pointed with sharp stones wrought for the purpose, or with bones, or eagle's claws. Their tomahawks, were of an oblong form, sharpened to an edge, and fixed to the handle by a withe, passed around the groove, formed at the head, or blunt part of the weapon.

Their houses, or wigwams, were rude structures, made of poles or young saplings, set round in the form of a cone, and covered with bark or mats, the smoke passing out at the top. In winter, one great house, built with more care, served for the accommodation of many.

They had two kinds of boats, called canoes; the one made of a pine log, twenty to sixty feet in length, burnt and scraped out with shells; the other of birch bark, very light, and very pretty. Their fishing lines were made of wild hemp, equal to the finest twine, and fish bones were used for hooks.

Their chief objects of cultivation were corn, beans, pumpkins, squashes, and melons,—all of which are indigenous plants,—which were tended by the women. Their fields were cleared by burning the trees and brush in the autumn. Their season for planting, was when the leaves of the oak were as large as the ear of a mouse; and from this arose the rule of the first settlers,

"When the white oak trees look goslin grey, Plant then, be it April, June or May."

The corn was hoed with large clam shells, or the shoulder-bone of a moose or deer, fixed to a handle, and harvested in cellars dug in the ground, and covered with mats.

Their food, says Gookin, in his Historical Collections of the Indians in New England, "is generally boiled maize, or Indian corn, mixed with kidney beans, or sometimes without. Also they frequently boil in this pottage fish and flesh of all sorts, either new taken or dried, as shads, eels, alewives, or a kind of herring, or any other sort of fish. But they dry mostly those sorts before mentioned. These they cut in pieces, bones and all, and boil them in the aforesaid pottage. Also they boil in this fermenty all sorts of flesh they take in hunting, as venison, beaver, bear's flesh, moose, otters, rackoons, or any kind that they take in hunting, cutting their flesh in small pieces, and boiling it as aforesaid. Also they mix with the said pottage several sorts of roots, as Jerusalem artichokes, and ground nuts, and other roots, and pompions, and squashes, and also several sorts of nuts or masts, as oak-acorns, chestnuts, walnuts; these, husked and dried, and powdered, they thicken their pottage therewith. Also sometimes they beat their maize into meal, and sift it through a basket, made for that purpose. With this meal they make bread, baking it in the ashes, covering the dough with leaves. Sometimes they make of their meal a small sort of cakes and boil them. They make also a certain sort of meal of parched maize; this meal they call nokake. It is so sweet, toothsome, and hearty, that an Indian will travel many days with no other food but this meal, which he eateth as he needs, and after it drinketh water. And for this end, when they travel a journey or go a hunting, they carry this nokake in a basket or bag for their use."

Many of the old Indian dishes are still well known, and in common use in the country; as for instance, samp, made of whole corn, boiled with ashes to remove the hull, and eaten with milk; — hominy, made of corn coarsely pounded and boiled; — and hasty pudding, made of corn ground fine and boiled; — succataash, made of corn and beans boiled together; — baked pumpkins, eaten with milk; — boiled and roasted ears of green corn; — parched corn, — and were this ground and made into a pudding and eaten with milk, it would be luscious; — and last, not least, whortleberry cakes. To this, if we add, a cake made of strawberries and parched corn, we have quite a variety of dishes, all of which are good and palatable.

The Old Colony Club, at its first celebration of the Landing of the Forefathers, held Dec. 22, 1769, in remembrance of the simplicity of early days, provided for their entertainment on the occasion, “1, a large baked Indian whortleberry pudding; 2, a dish of sauquetash, (succatash, corn and beans boiled together); 3, a dish of clams; 4, a dish of oysters and a dish of cod fish; 5, a haunch of venison, roasted by the first Jack brought to the Colony; 6, a dish of sea-fowl; 7, a dish of frost fish and eels; 8, an apple pie; and 9, a course of cranberry tarts, and cheese made in the Old Colony.”<sup>1</sup>

That the early settlers of our State experienced much trouble from the Indian tribes, every one knows who is acquainted with the history of those times. The bloodiest contest, was that known as Philip's War, which commenced in 1676. In this, the inhabitants of the territory of Hanover, then inhabitants of Scituate, suffered their part, in common with the rest of the people in the vicinity.

We do not propose to enter at large into the events of this war, as we have nothing new to add to what is already known. We shall present a few details, pertaining principally to the immediate subject of our sketch.

In was in 1674, that the Colony Court began to make serious preparations for the rumored war with Philip, which was soon expected to break out; and as one of these preparations, in 1675, a garrison of twelve men was ordered to be established at the house of Mr. Joseph Barstow, which, as we have elsewhere remarked, stood on what is now Broadway, and opposite the residence of Mr. Joseph S. Bates. Other garrison houses were fitted up at the same time, in Scituate, but this was the only one which stood on the present territory of Hanover.

In the spring of 1676, the Narragansetts, having committed ravages in Rhode Island, and penetrated even to Plymouth, in which neighbourhood they had killed a number of inhabitants,

Capt. Michael Pierce, of Scituate, with a company of 50 or 63<sup>1</sup> Englishmen, and 20 friendly Indians, from Cape Cod, were ordered in his pursuit, and proceeded, without being molested, as far as Seekonk, where he arrived on Saturday, March 25. Hearing of Indians in the vicinity, he went immediately in their pursuit, and a bloody battle was fought, in which the Captain, and 18 of his men, from Scituate, were slain or wounded. Among this number was Jeremiah Barstow, a descendant of William, the earliest settler on the territory of Hanover.<sup>2</sup>

On the 20th of May, the Indians made an attack upon Scituate. They came from Hingham, where the day previous they had burnt several houses,<sup>3</sup> and entered the town by the Plymouth Road, now Washington Street. Striking down the "Indian path," which led to the Mattakeeset settlements at Indian-head ponds, they burnt the saw mill near Ellis's bridge, and Cornet Stetson's mill, near what is now Winslow's bridge; also the house of Capt. Joseph Sylvester, on the easterly side of the Third Herring brook, which stood where Mr. Samuel Waterman now resides. The garrison house at Joseph Barstow's, which was well fortified, was carefully avoided by the invaders; and, according to Gov. Winston's letter to Mr. Hinckley, a company of 14 men, which had marched up from Marshfield as far as Mr. Barstow's, saw the enemy, and put them to flight, thus, doubtless, preserving other houses in the neighborhood, which would have been destroyed had it not been for their presence.

Those who desire to know more of the events of this day, must read the graphic account of Deane, in which he enumerates the houses destroyed in Scituate proper.<sup>4</sup>

We have no other notices which connect the events of this war directly with the history of Hanover, though casual traditions speak of damages sustained at different periods, from the ravages of the Indians; and it is a matter of satisfaction to know, that the war was prosecuted with such vigor, on the part of the Colonists, and with such success, that Philip was slain, his warriors routed, and from that time forth the people lived in comparative security.

At the date of the incorporation of Hanover, no hostile Indians lived in its vicinity. It is said that the last tribe, from which the citizens had trouble, congregated on an island in Drinkwater Swamp, in the westerly part of the town, from whence they issued, and committed their depredations. They were discovered early one morning, by the smoke of their fire, seen rising from amidst the trees, and were attacked and routed.

Friendly Indians resided in the town for a long time, and the last of the race has not been dead many years. Some of these lived on the Bank land, so called, which is near Oren Josselynn's, or west of King Street; and old samp mortars, pestles, tomahawks, or axes, and spear, or arrow heads, have been frequently found on the spot. Others resided on Curtis, now Main Street, and their wigwams stood on Joseph Dwelly's land. Here, too, relics have been occasionally found, turned up by the plough.

On the land of Capt. Elisha Barrell, in the north-easterly part of the town, and but a few rods distant from his barn, on the knoll, stood the wigwam of George Toto, probably a son of Merey Toto, and sister of Rhoda, and perhaps of Sarah, who married James Still, in 1764. George's wife was Mary. He had no children. The old well dug by him, in the low ground near his hut, is still visible, in the midst of the bushes which surround it, and even the children of the neighborhood know it as Toto's well.

King Diek and Queen Daphne lived on Pine Island, so called, situated on what is now Hanover Street. Diek requested Col. John Bailey to write a letter for him to his friends, on the Cape, and on being asked what he should write, replied, "King Diek and Queen Daphne, ebery ting, ebery ting."

It is said that there was an old Indian burial ground on this island, and that, before the violent September gale of 1815, known as the hurricane, the mounds covering the graves of those who had been buried on the spot could be distinctly seen. Since then, all traces of them have disappeared.

There was another Indian burial ground, back of Assinippi Hall, in the north-easterly part of the town, on land owned by Capt.

Thomas Simmons. This was used, if we have been rightly informed, so late as the former part of the present century, and some of our old people remember when the last burial took place on the spot.

It is said that there was another burial ground, not far from Rocky Swamp; and perhaps there were others, in other parts of the town.

Old Peter, an Indian, lived on land owned by Turner Stetson, and married a black woman, who gave the name to the tract known as Peg's Swamp. She resided, the latter part of her life, in a house which stood where that of Albert Stetson stands, not far from the Town House, and d. May 1, 1815, æ. 87.

One John Fredericks, a Hessian, deserted from the British Army, during the Revolution, came to Hanover, and married an Indian woman named Joanna. A bounty being offered for the detection and return of deserters, he was obliged to secrete himself for a time in Plymouth woods, and on being asked by the father of the present Zaccheus Estes, how he fared while there, he replied, "if turkentine had been molasses, I should have done very well."

The author has in his possession several relics of the Indians of Hanover, and other parts of Plymouth County; among which are a pipe, of clay, hard baked, and of a brownish color, a present from Mr. David Mann; — arrow and spear heads, the gifts of different friends; an axe or tomahawk, of a greenish color, and fine finish, from Mr. John Gross, of South Scituate, and others from other friends; a pestle, 9 or 10 inches long, and about 2 inches in diameter, a present from Mr. Seth Jones, of Pembroke; and a stone ball, perfectly round, and about the size of a four pound cannon ball, which was picked up near the residence of Cornet Stetson, on the North River, on the occasion of a pilgrimage made to the spot a few years since, when the author drank water from the spring from whence his ancestor, more than two hundred years ago, slaked his thirst, and gave his children to drink!

What changes have taken place since those days! No longer is the war-whoop heard, breaking upon the stillness of the night, arousing the father to arms, and causing the mother to clasp her trembling little ones closer in her embrace. Neither is the light canoe seen gliding down the Indian Head, or the North River, to the sea. The deer and the wolf are gone. The ponds of Pembroke, where Hobomok dwelt, no longer reflect upon their placid bosoms the graceful forms of the Indian maidens, who came there to bathe, and to sport in the waters.

Even the rude dwellings of our ancestors are gone. Their fortresses have long since perished. And every building, erected two hundred years ago, has fallen to decay, and returned to the dust. Yet the same sun shines brightly upon us, by day, as upon them. The same moon sheds down its clear and silvery light upon our fields and homes. And the same stars sparkle above us! Even the forests have changed. Here and there may be a scattering tree which saw the light when the pilgrims landed. The brave old white oak, by Jacob's saw-mill dam, is one of these ; — also the two white oaks at Barstow's yard, on the North River. But the mighty cedars, the giant pines, the tall walnuts, with the spreading beech, the waving poplar, and the graceful elm, all are gone. Trees of a recent growth alone occupy the soil. One hundred and thirty summers, will probably number the years of our most aged forest trees.

" Oft in moonlight by whose side

The hum of our grist mills, the clatter of our tack-machines, or the louder reverberations of the descending trip-hammer ; with the noise of the saw, cutting its way through the log ; the ring of the blacksmith's hammer, upon the anvil ; the cheerful call of the farmer, to his team, and the rumble of our wagons, along the road to market, laden with boxes, and shoes, and the produce of the farm ; — these are the sounds which now strike the ear ; — and the spire of the church pointing to heaven, the village school-house, and our neatly painted dwellings, dotting the sides of our streets ; these are the signs of advancing civilization, and a manifest token that man is subduing the earth to his dominion, and making the elements his ministers ; and though monuments of the past are occasionally seen among us, connecting by visible links what has been with what is, yet these are only incentives to greater exertions, and stimuli to prouder achievements !

A portion of the Preamble to the “ General Laws and Liberties of New Plimouth Colony, published in 1671,” sets forth, that “ Whereas the great and known end of the first comers, in the year of our Lord 1620, leaving their dear Native Country, and all that was dear to them there ; transporting themselves over the vast Ocean into this remote waste wilderness, and therein willingly conflicting with Dangers, Losses, Hardships, and Distresses sore, and not a few, WAS, that without offence, they under the protection of their Native Prince, together with the enlargement of his Majesties Dominions, might, with the liberty of a good conscience, enjoy the pure Scriptural Worship of God, without the mixture of Humane Inventions and Impositions, And that there children after them might walke in the Holy wayes of the Lord ; And for which end they obtained leave from King James of happy memory, and his Honourable Council, with further Graunts from his Gracious Majesty Charles the first and his Honourable Council, by Letters Patent, for sundry Tracts of land, with many Priviledges therein contained for their better incouragement to proceed on in so Pious a Work, which may especially tend to the propagation of Religion, &c., as by Letters Patents more at large appeareth, and with further assurance also of the continuance of our Liberties and Priviledges, both Civil and Religious, under the Royal Hand and Seal of our Sovereign Lord King Charles the Second; And whereas by the good Hand of our God upon us many others since the first comers are for the same pious end come unto us, and sundry others rise up amongst us, desirous with all good conscience to walk in the faith and order of the Gospel; whereby there are many churches gathered amongst us walking according thereunto: And whereas (by the Grace of God) we have now had near about Fifty Years Experience, of the good consistency of these Churches, with Civil Peace and Order, and also with Spiritual Edification, together with the welfare and tranquillity of this Government. It is therefore for the Honour of God and the propagation of Religion, and the continued welfare of this Colony, Ordered by this Court and the Authority thereof, That the said Churches already gathered, or that shall hereafter be orderly gathered, may and shall from time to time by this Government be protected and encouraged, in their peaceable and orderly walking, and the Faithful, Able, Orthodox, Teaching Ministry thereof, duly encouraged and provided for; together with such other Orthodox able Dispensers of the Gospel which shall or may be placed in any Township in this Government where there is or may be a defect of Church Order."

From this, we see the views of our Pilgrim Fathers, and their reverence for religion led to the enactment of many laws for its regulation and support. Provisions were made for the support of the ministry in every town of the Colony; and no act of incorporation was granted, without containing a clause especially enjoining the erection of a meeting house, and the settlement of a "learned, pious, and orthodox minister."

After the junction of the two Colonies, Plymouth and Massachusetts, in 1692, the laws for the maintenance of the ministry, and the erection of meeting-houses continued in force ; and accordingly, in the act incorporating the town of Hanover, it is stipulated as one of the conditions of the grant, " that the Inhabitants of the said Town of Hannover do within the space of Two years from the Publication of this act erect and finish a suitable house for the Public Worship of God, and as soon as may be procure and settle a learned Orthodox Minister of good conversation, and make Provision for his comfortable and honourable support, and that thereupon they be discharged from any Further Payment for the maintenance of the ministry, &c., in the Towns of Scituate or Abington, for any estate lying within the said Town of Hannover."

In pursuance of this proviso, one of the first steps taken by the town, was to provide for the support of Public Worship ; and July 17, 1727, " Mr. Daniel Dwight was chosen to dispense the word of God for three months,"<sup>1</sup> Amos Sylvester, and Thomas Josselynn being chosen to treat with him for that purpose ; and £7 19s. were subsequently voted him as a remuneration for his services. Meetings were held at this time in private dwellings ; and that of Mr. Samuel Stetson, being nearest to the centre of the town, and most convenient for the public accomodation, was principally used, for which he was liberally paid.

August 29, £60 were voted for the support of a minister ; and Isaac Buck, Elijah Cushing, and Joseph House were chosen to provide one. Nov. 13, It was agreed " to erect a meeting-house at the most convenient place, by the road called the Drink water road," and Elijah Bisbee, Joshua Turner, and Aaron Soule, who were probably of Pembroke, were chosen to select the site, and Job Otis was appointed to inform them of the town's desire. Dec. 13, " Voted that the size of the house be as follows : Length 48 feet ; width 38 feet ; and height between joints 19 feet ; — to be completed by Oct. 1, 1728 ;" and Elijah Cushing, Joseph House, and Abner Dwelley were chosen a building committee, they to have the house done in a workmanlike manner, but as cheap as possible.

January 22, 1728, Isaac Bush was chosen agent to apply to the town of Scituate for aid in erecting the new meeting-house ; a subscription paper was circulated by him, on which the sum of £90 was subscribed, but of which only £66 1s. 6d., were realised ; and it was agreed that the money thus obtained, should be proportioned on the polls and estates, towards defraying the charges. Mr. Buck was also agent to apply to citizens of Hanover for aid. Gifts of land were made, by John Cushing, James Cushing, Job Otis, Nicholas Litchfield, Stephen Clapp, Senr., and others, of Scituate ; Rev. Thomas Clapp, of Taunton ; and Joseph Barstow, and Samuel Barstow, of Hanover ; the lots being laid out for the town by Caleb Torrey, and Stephen Clapp, of Scituate. The land on which the house was built, is said to have been given by Thomas Buck. Isaac Buck was the agent of the town to receive the deeds of the above lots.

March 3, 1728, the town voted to take their part of the Government loan of £60,000, "now in the Treasury at Boston," and Joseph Barstow, Benjamin Curtis, and Samuel Barstow, were chosen to receive the same, and to let it out towards paying the carpenters. Gifts of lumber were made by several persons, and what was left, after the house was finished, was sold for the use of the ministry. The whole cost of the house appears to have been about £300.

This first meeting-house, stood on the same spot as the present house, and continued in use until 1765, under the ministry of Mr. Baldwin, when the second house was built. No records exist from which a correct idea of its appearance can be gained. An old lady, Mrs. Perry, yet lives in Pembroke, born in 1755, who is now in her 98th year, and who was ten years of age when the second house was erected, who has a distinct recollection of that event, but not of the looks of the original edifice. From the best information I can gain, I learn that it was a plain structure, in accordance with the simplicity of the times, facing the South ; without steeple or chimney ; the windows glazed with diamond-shaped glass ; the walls unplastered ; and unwarmed by stove or furnace ; and here, for about forty years, the fathers of the town, with their wives and little ones, gathered together, from Sabbath to Sabbath, in summer's heat and winter's cold, listening devoutly to the ministrations of the Word of God, and chanting, to the quaint, old fashioned tunes of the day, Sternhold and Hopkins' hymns, deaconed off to them line by line.

I seem to see them now ; — the fathers, with broad-brimmed hats, turned up into three corners, with loops at the sides ; long coats, with large pocket folds and cuffs, and without collars, — the buttons, either plated, or of pure silver, and of the size of a half-dollar ; shirts, with bosoms and wrist ruffles, and with gold or silver buttons at the wrist, united by a link ;<sup>1</sup> the neckcloth, or scarf, of fine white linen, or figured stuff, brodered, with the ends hanging loosely on the breast ; the breeches close, with silver buckles at the knee, of goodly size ; the legs covered with grey stockings ; boots, with broad, white tops, or shoes, with straps and silver buckles ; — the mothers, with black silk or satin bonnets ; gowns, extremely long-waisted, with tight sleeves, or else very short sleeves, with an immense frill at the elbow ; and high-heeled shoes ; — these mounted upon the “ family horse,” — for carriages were unknown in those days, — the father in front, and the “ gude wife” seated on a pillion behind ; the children, either on foot, or in the “ horse cart,” with a goodly store of bread and cheese, or doughnuts and apple pie, for the noon lunch ; all moving sedately along, with becoming gravity, and decorous deportment, towards the “ ancient temple ;” and on arriving at the house, the husband, assisting the wife to dismount upon the bank-wall, in the rear of the building ; and she, with the children, passing quietly in at the door ; whilst the horse is hitched to the post, and the father also walks in, and sits near the door of the pew, in accordance with the custom established in times of danger, when sudden attacks from the Indians were feared ; and over the house stillness reigns, until the minister, with ample gown, and powdered wig, walks up the aisle, and mounts the long flight of stairs leading to his desk, from which, as from a tower, high above his hearers, with the sounding board over his head, to convey the sonorous tones of his voice to his flock, he dispenses to them the word of life, and bears up their prayers to the throne of God !

The first minister settled in the town, was the Rev. Benjamin <sup>1</sup> Mr. Samuel Brooks, on Main Street, has in his possession, specimens of the buttons here referred to, and also of the knee buckles.

Bass, son of Joseph and Mary Bass, of Braintree, and a descendant of Samuel Bass, who, with his wife Anne, and one or two young children, came to New England in 1630, and settled first in Roxbury, and afterwards in that part of Braintree now Quincy.<sup>1</sup> Benjamin was born in 1694, graduated at Harvard College in 1715, and settled in Hanover in 1728.

August 27, 1728, Benjamin Curtis, Elijah Cushing, William Witherell, Thomas Josselynn, and Benjamin Curtis, Jr., were chosen "to advise with the neighboring ordained ministers as the law directs, in order for the settlement of the Rev. Benjamin Bass in the work of the ministry;" and subsequently the sum of £130 per annum, after the rate of silver money, at 16s. per oz., was voted as his salary.

Nov. 23, 1728, it was voted to ordain Mr. Bass to the work of the ministry; and Amos Sylvester was chosen to provide entertainment for the council.

The ordination took place Dec. 11th; the 4th of the month having been observed as a day of Fasting and Prayer, and the Church, consisting of 10 (male?) members, besides the pastor, being formed on the 5th. Rev. Mr. Eells, of Scituate, and Rev. Mr. Lewis, of Pembroke, were present and assisted in the services on the day of Fasting.

The ceremonies of the Ordination are thus given on the Church Records: "Dec. 11, 1728, Benjamin Bass, A. M., was, by prayer and fasting, with imposition of the hands of the Presbytery, ordained a pastor of the Church, the Rev. Mr. Eells, of Scituate, Mr. Lewis, of Pembroke, Messrs. Hobart and Gay, of Hingham, and Mr. Cheekley, of Boston, laid on hands; Mr. Gay began with prayer; Mr. Cheekley preached; Mr. Eells gave the charge; and Mr. Lewis the right hand of fellowship."

The house being completed, and a minister settled, next in importance was the "seating the worshippers." From a report made Nov. 31, 1728, it appears that there was room in the house for 31 pews, valued at £10 each, or £310 in all. But, the record proceeds to say, "as it is usual and commendable that there should be dignities, we generally vote and allow for the same; that therefore we vote that the highest pew in dignity should be valued at £15, and the next £14 10s., and so proportionally lower, until we come down to those pews which are of no difference in dignity, and then proportionable to each man's rates, either by a general vote, or lots, to take in the more people into each pew so valued or prized, as shall amount to the money ;" and Joseph Stockbridge, John Hatch, and William Witherell, were chosen to proportion the pews according to these votes. Their action not being entirely satisfactory, June 29, 1730, votes were passed anew "to proportion the pews to make all persons easy, and to take in those that were left out;" a committee of seven was chosen to attend to this duty, and their doings were confirmed Aug. 31.

Although the mention of dignities may cause some to smile, yet substantially the same custom prevails in our own day, certain seats, in all our churches, being deemed more fashionable, and more valuable, than others.

January 10, 1728-9. At a church meeting, it was "voted to raise money by contribution to provide utensils for the Lord's table;" and by the 30th of the month, were bought, and brought to town, "three Pewter Tankards, marked C. T., of 10s. price each; five Pewter Beakers, costing 3s. 6d. each, and marked C. B.; two Pewter Platters, marked C. P.; a Pewter Basin for baptisms; and a Cloth for the communion table." The communion was celebrated, for the first time, March 2, 1729, and the first service plate continued in use until 1768, and Oct. 30th of that year, the Church received a present of "four silver cups for the communion table, by order, and at the expense of Deacon Stockbridge, the cost of each cup at £25, old tenor, and each having this inscription, THE GIFT OF DEACON JOSEPH STOCKBRIDGE TO THE CHURCH OF CHRIST IN HANOVER, 1768." For this present, the thanks of the Church were voted.

January 8, 1786. Two silver cups for the communion table were received, "a Legacy from Deacon Thomas Josselynn, cost £7 4s., and recorded as a token of gratitude, and to perpetuate the memory of the Benefaction."

The tankards and flagons are still in the possession, and these, with the silver cups above referred to, constitute the present communion service, of the church.

Not long after the erection of the meeting-house, the juvenile portion of the town, not having the fear of the law before their eyes, began to manifest a disposition to violate the fourth commandment, by congregating in the school-house, and other acts of insubordination; and March 1, 1734, it was "voted that the schoolmaster should lock up the school-house on Saturday's, to keep people out Lord's day;" and March 1, 1741, it was "voted that David Curtis look after the boys and negroes in the school-house on Sabbath days;" also, "voted Thomas Wilkes and Joshua Studley to look after the meeting-house Sabbath days, to keep the boys in order." Oct. 29, 1746, "Appointed Jacob Bailey to take care of the school-house for four months next coming, and to have full power to prosecute any person that shall presume forcibly to break into the school-house on the Lord's day."

This propensity to mischief, however, was not confined simply to tumultuous gatherings in the school-house, and disorderly conduct in the meeting-house; for other demonstrations, in the shape of broken windows, and shattered doors, attested their skill in the old-fashioned sport of casting stones; and votes for re-setting glass, and repairing locks, duly recorded, still bear testimony to these deeds of wantonness. But we are not to suppose that the youth of Hanover were more given to such proceedings than those of other towns. Public records, generally, show more or less of such outbreaks and damages in all towns. Nor need we be surprised at the character of these offences, for even in our own days, the school-house, and the meeting-house, are not exempt from such visitations, and the winds shrieking mournfully through shattered panes, seem like ghosts, lamenting the desolations of Zion, and the desecration of the Sanctuary. This Vandal spirit should ever be deprecated; for not only is it irreverent, but a sure sign of ill-breeding, and a state of semi-civilization.

1742, May 7. "The church took a vote to see if the Society would sing in the new way, and it passed in the affirmative, nem. con. Then being desired to bring in their votes for a TUNER, Mr. Ezekiel TURNER was chosen by a considerable majority." Previous to this, singing, in most, if not all the New England churches, had been strictly congregational, the lines of the hymns being read off by the Deacon, who usually pitched the tune, and all, who could sing, joined in the performance. By this vote, Sternhold and Hopkins' version of the Psalms was rejected, and Tate and Brady's adopted.

1748, April 8. £14 15s. were collected, "to buy good books with, to lend to such of the Society as stand in need of them, and would be glad to read them." With the above money, says Mr. Bass, "I bought in less than a week, a parcel of books, whose Titles, Authors, and Price in Old Tenor, may be met with in a book which is an exposition of the Epistle to the Colossians, by Nicholas Byfield."

The ministry of Mr. Bass, which was quiet and undisturbed, passed peacefully on, until terminated by his death, which took place May 23, 1756, in the 63d year of his age, after a settlement of 27 years, 5 months, and 15 days, during which period 83 persons joined the church, and 588 were baptised.

The remains of Mr. Bass, with those of his wife, who died Feb. 25, 1772, lie in the south-east corner of the old burying ground; and the grave stones, which mark the spot, are still in a state of tolerable preservation, though that of Mr. Bass appears to have been broken, and re-set. The inscriptions on the same are simple, and can be easily deciphered.

Our materials, for a sketch of the life of this first servant of the Church, are quite scanty. In vain have we sought for some notice of his career in the papers of that day. From his writings, he appears to have been a man marked more by common sense, than by brilliancy of diction, withal a little inclined to facetiousness, yet open-hearted, and frank, and laboring diligently for the welfare of his people. He was often consulted by neighboring Churches, and acted as Moderator in Ecclesiastical Councils;<sup>1</sup> and, in the midst of the excitement which prevailed, during the latter years of his ministry, occasioned by the preaching of Whitefield, and the rise of the "New Lights," as they were termed, he preserved his own hold on the good-will of his Society, and left his people in a state of as great prosperity as was enjoyed in any of the adjoining towns. His habits were simple, and his manner of living frugal and unostentatious; yet his was ever a hospitable board, to which his parishioners and friends were cordially welcomed. He took great interest in the children of his parish, and never passed a child, in the road, without noticing it. And the children so loved him, that whenever they saw him approaching, they would arrange themselves in a row, and, as he drew near, greet him, with bows, and curtesies, while smiles of joy illumined their faces. His grandson, Elisha, has, at his house, the wedding dress of Mrs. Bass, which was a cream colored, brocade silk, of considerable beauty, — also a silk apron, of a sage color. A lady, whom I saw there, Oct. 18, 1852, informs me, as an illustration of Mr. B's facetiousness, that having received an invitation to settle at Eel River, Plymouth, and on being asked if he should accept, he replied, "No, Eel River may do for small fish, but it is not large enough for a Bass."

After the decease of Mr. Bass, Ezekiel Turner, Esq., Joseph House, and Michael Sylvester, were chosen a committee by the town, June 14, 1756, to join a committee chosen by the Church, "to supply the pulpit with preaching;" and Aug. 30th, the Church having laid before the town their choice of Mr. Samuel Baldwin for their pastor, the town concurred in the choice, and voted as his salary £73 6s. 8d., lawful money. Mr. B. declining to settle for this sum, it was voted, Oct. 11th, to give him £80 lawful money, and to build him, within the space of 18 months, "a dwelling-house 40 feet long, 30 feet wide, and 17 feet between joints, with two stacks of chimneys, a plain roof, with a suitable number of windows with crown glass, and to be painted inside and outside, such a color or colors as shall be agreeable to his mind, and to build and finish under the house a cellar 30 feet long, and 14 feet wide, pointed, &c., and every thing, both inside and outside, both wood work, iron work, and joiners' work, with two Bofatts (cupboards) and as many closets in said house as may be convenient, all to be done to the turning of a key, and to be underpinned in a suitable manner, to the acceptance of the said Mr. Baldwin, and this to be a free gift as a settlement, to which proposal Mr. B. gave his answer in the affirmative." Feb. 7, the dimensions of the house were altered to 38 by 32 feet; and it was voted to pay for the building in money, and to give Joseph Curtis £160, lawful money, for building and completing it. March 5, 1759, Mr. Baldwin acknowledged the receipt of the house as his settlement gift.

October 18, 1756, "Voted that Mr. Baldwin be ordained Dec. 1, if the Thanksgiving be not on that week, but if it is, the ordination to be on the second Wednesday of said December." Also, "Voted to give Captain Joseph Josselynn £16, in lawful money, to provide handsome and suitable entertainment for the ordination, and he agreed to do it for that sum."

The ordination took place Dec. 1; "the Rev. Messrs. Gay, of Hingham, Cook, of Sudbury, Storer, of Watertown, Smith, of Pembroke, and Swift, of Acton, laying on hands. Mr. Smith prayed, Mr. Cook preached, Mr. Gay gave the charge, Mr. Storer the right hand of fellowship, and Mr. Swift offered the last prayer. The churches or pastors sent to besides the above, were Wales, of Marshfield, Hitchcock, of Pembroke, Woodward, of Weston, Dodge, of Abington, and Barnes, of Scituate."

Under the ministration of Mr. Baldwin, the meeting-house was soon filled; and accordingly, June 25, 1764, it was voted, to open the same "in two parts, and to put in a new piece in the middle of 13 or 14 feet in length." This vote was reconsidered, October 22, and it was then voted to build a new house, of the following dimensions: — "62 feet in length, 43 in width, and 22 feet between joints, according to the plan in the office of the Town Clerk."

At the same time, it was voted, that "each person enjoy their pews as heretofore, only giving way for the new additional pews to be built;" and the Committee was empowered to "dispose of the old meeting-house, and the new additional pew room, to the undertaker or undertakers of the meeting-house aforesaid, or to any other person or persons, in part of pay for the work aforesaid." Mr. Joseph Tolman, was the contractor for the erection of the new house; and May 20, 1765, it was voted "to have a steeple to the meeting-house, provided the money for the same can or shall be raised by subscription."

This steeple was built; and the new house was erected on the site of the old one. It stood facing the South, and the roof pitched North and South. At the East end, was the women's porch, extending from the ground, to the eaves, and projecting from the building, a few feet; in the entry, was the stairway leading to the gallery, and overhead, the powder room, in which the town's stock of powder was kept, during the Revolution. The men's porch, was at the West end, also projecting from the building, and rising above the eaves, with a long, tapering spire, or steeple, surmounted with a vane. This spire was removed about 1784, when a bell was presented to the society by Mr. Josselyn, and a new steeple, with a suitable belfry, was erected.

Within, the walls were plastered, the pews square, the galleries spacious, and the accommodations for the worshippers comfortable and decent. The author does not know of any house now standing, from which a perfect idea of this ancient tabernacle could be obtained. Perhaps in internal arrangement, the old meeting house in Carver, near the residence of John Savary, Esq., may be considered as an approximation to that of the second house in Hanover, though externally, the porches and steeple are wanting. It is said, that, while this house was being erected, meetings were held in a pine grove, near by, and here, Mr. Baldwin's daughter Hannah was baptised.

The affairs of the society, from this time forward, until the war of the Revolution commenced, continued in a state of quiet prosperity, and the salary of Mr. Baldwin was paid regularly and promptly; but the derangement in the finances of the country introduced by that struggle, led to difficulties in many religious societies, and, finally, to a dissolution of the connexion, which had so long and so happily subsisted, between Mr. Baldwin, and the society in Hanover. On the Church records, under date of Nov. 28, 1779, is the following entry by Mr. Baldwin himself: "I preached a farewell sermon to the people of Hanover for the want of support, and on the 8th March following, I asked a dismission for the want of support, which they granted, and it was confirmed by a vote of the town."

Mr. Baldwin remained with the society 23 years, 3 months, and 3 days, during which period, 107 persons joined the Church, and 632 were baptised. As a pastor, his services gave general satisfaction, and as a preacher, his talents were not only highly respectable, but his manuscripts evince that he was a ready and eloquent writer, and his discourses display good judgment, keen perceptions, and strong common sense.

Mr. Baldwin early espoused the cause of America, in the struggle with Great Britain, and, throughout the continuance of the war of the Revolution, took a deep and anxious interest in his country's success.

He officiated as a Chaplain in the Army, and gave eloquent exhortations to his own flock at home, and to the minute men of the town ; and, so completely was he absorbed in this work, that the intensity of his devotion, joined with other causes, affected his mind, and for a period of four years, previous to his decease, he was partially deranged, and under the faithful care of his devoted wife.

It is said that on one occasion, during this period, a neighbor, Miss Studley, called at the parsonage, to converse with Mrs. Baldwin, upon the events of the war, not then wholly closed. Mr. B. lay on his bed, apparently unmindful of what they were saying, in his usual state of apathy and indifference. Suddenly he arose, left the room, went to his study, and returned with the manuscript of a discourse which he had delivered to the minute men, and, standing in the doorway, he deliberately read it from beginning to end. Mrs. B. was rejoiced, thinking the balance of his mind was about to be restored. But when he had finished his reading, he carried the manuscript back, returned, and laid himself on the bed in silence.

His death took place December 1, 1784, about one year after peace was declared ; and his remains, with those of his wife, lie in the old burial-ground ; grave stones having been erected to their memory, by vote of the town, March 9, 1796.

I have been able to learn of but one of his productions that was printed,—his address before the Pilgrim Society, delivered in 1775.

The house in which Mr. Baldwin lived is still standing, on Hanover Street, not far from the residence of the late Dr. Joshua Studley ; and it is a fair specimen of the style of building here one hundred years ago. It is still in decent repair, and promises yet to stand for many years, a memorial of the past, and one of the few relics of olden time, becoming rarer every year.

After the withdrawal of Mr. Baldwin, several candidates for the pastorate of the society were heard, and some time elapsed before a settlement was effected.

Rev. Joseph Litchfield, subsequently of York, Maine, a descendant of Lawrence Litchfield, of Barnstable, Massachusetts, was one of these candidates; and a call was given him, with a salary of "£90 per annum, in silver money, at 6s. per dollar, or gold equivalent, or in paper bills at the rate or value the General Court or Assembly shall settle the same, and 12 cords of firewood at his door, within a mile from the meeting-house;" and December 27, 1780, was fixed upon as the day for his ordination; Capt. Joseph Soper to provide entertainment for the Council. The Council met, and, it is said, were in session two or three days; but Mr. L. was not ordained, many of the society being opposed to his settlement. Tradition says, that the objections urged against him were of the most trifling character;—one being, that he wore stockings, "footed up" with yarn of a different color from that in the "tops;" and this was "beneath the dignity of the clerical office;"—and the second, and perhaps the most frivolous of the two, affirming, that, on a certain occasion, in making a call, instead of entering the yard by the gate, as a clergyman should have done, he "clambered over the rails of the fence, much to the lowering of the dignity of his profession."

We suspect, however, that political, or other differences, were the real grounds of objection against him.

But though not settled when first called, a second attempt was made to effect that object; which resulted as before, in his rejection and withdrawal.

Finally, after hearing several other candidates, to some of whom a call was given, a more unanimous request was sent, in 1783, to the Rev. John Mellen, of Sterling, to come and labor among them; and this call was successful. He was settled in Hanover, February 11, 1784; Capt. Joseph Soper making the entertainment for the Council. "Six churches were sent to on the occasion, but Cambridge failed by reason of the aged and Reverend Dr. Appleton's death on the same week. Rev. Mr. Hitchcock, of Pembroke, gave the charge; Rev. Mr. Barnes, of Scituate, the right hand of fellowship; his son, Rev. Mr. Mellen, of Barnstable, preached the sermon; Rev. Mr. Prentiss, of Reading, began with prayer; and Rev. Mr. Niles, of Abington, concluded. Anthems were sung by the choir, on entering and leaving the Meeting house."

In 1785, the Society received, of Col. Joseph Josselyn, a donation of $100, which they agreed "should go towards buying a bell, if there can be enough subscribed to make up the rest;" and November 29, 1785, the bell was purchased, of Col. Aaron Hobart, of Abington, and a committee of twenty, "with all the rest of the town that see cause to assist," were chosen to "hang it."

This bell was broken, not long after, through want of skill on the part of the person appointed to ring it; was re-cast, and when re-hung, December 18, 1788, Dea. Bass, Dea. Robbins, and Benjamin Stetson were chosen to "give the sexton directions how to ring the bell."

In 1789, it was voted to paint the meeting-house; "the walls to be stone yellow, the roof spanish brown, and the corner boards and window frames and sashes white." May 30, 1791, "Voted to give Capt. Timothy Rose, £3, to take care of, and sweep and sand the meeting house, and ring the bell the present year."

October 14, 1793, a Committee chosen "to get the meeting-house underpinned, and to procure a stock lock for the door." June 9, 1797, a Committee was chosen to seat the singers; and alterations were made in the house to provide for their accommodation. The same year, $300 were voted as the salary of Mr. Mellen, and from that time forward, his salary was paid in Federal, instead of Sterling, currency. In 1802, the bell was re-hung; and in 1803, Capt. Albert Smith presented to the town a number of Lombardy poplar trees, which were set out near the meeting house. Not one of these is now standing. The last was cut down, a few years since, by Mr. Samuel Stetson.

The ministry of Mr. Mellen was terminated, by the infirmities of age, in 1805, and he removed to Reading, Massachusetts, where he closed his long and useful life, in the house of his daughter, the relict of Caleb Prentiss, July 4, 1807, aged 85.

His life was an eventful one. He was born in Hopkinton, March 14, 1722, and graduated at Harvard College, in 1741, teaching school the same year for £85, at Sudbury.<sup>1</sup> He was ordained the first pastor of the church in Sterling, December 19, 1744, where he continued, probably at the head of the clergy of Worcester County, until November 14, 1774. His connexion with this society, which had continued for thirty years, was dissolved, in consequence of disputes, occasioned by his endeavors to maintain what he considered the true discipline of the churches, and by his adoption of doctrinal sentiments, not wholly in accordance with those generally prevailing at the time. "He with others, as tradition says, had sensibly departed from the standard of faith that had been generally received in the New England Churches, and had extended his speculations in such a manner, as to give great offence to some who had not pursued the same course of reasoning. In 1756, he delivered an eloquent series of discourses addressed to parents, children, and youth, which contained sentiments highly obnoxious to many of his brethren in the ministry. These were published, and were extremely well received by his people. In the unguarded hours of social conversation, too, he, as was well understood, rejected many of the articles of the popular faith. Nor were his people dissatisfied with him on this account, but rather for publicly co-operating in the censure of those doctrines which it was supposed he embraced as the truth of the gospel. It was now understood by some of the most intelligent of the parish, that their minister was verging towards doctrines that he had publicly disclaimed. In 1765, he published a volume of sermons on the doctrines of Christianity. These contained a learned system of scholastic theology, maintaining a middle course between the two extrêmes of Calvinism and Arminianism. Upon some of the controverted points it is not easy to understand which side his speculations favor most. The volume is highly creditable to his memory as a scholar and a theologian, and when published was considered an acquisition to the literature of the country. When his people produced their allegations against him in 1773, they urged but few instances of false doctrines, and of these he fully exculpated himself before a council. The principal charge of this character was, that he had said that God was the author of sin. The sermon was produced where it was said to be contained. He stated that he had never held this doctrine in its gross sense, but only that sin was by permission, &c. The council cleared him, as his church had previously." He is described, in the work from which we have just quoted, as a man "liberally endowed by nature with a strong and energetic mind, which was highly improved by diligent and successful cultivation, and he obtained a high rank as a preacher and scholar."

Besides the volume of doctrinal Sermons, to which we have already referred, and his sermons to parents, &c., his other published works, were, a Sermon at the Ordination of Rev. J. Palmer, 1753 ; — a Discourse at a General Muster, 1756 ; — on the Mortal Sickness among his People, 1756 ; — on the Conquest of Canada, 1760 ; — on the Death of Sebastian Smith, 1763 ; — Religion productive of Music, at Marlboro', 1773 ; — a Sermon at the Ordination of Rev. Levi Whitman, 1785 ; — a Discourse before a Lodge of Freemasons, 1793 ; — and a Thanksgiving Sermon, 1795.<sup>1</sup>

A few of these, as will be seen by the dates, were delivered after his settlement in Hanover. He is spoken of here, with much affection, by his old parishioners ; and was a man of sociable habits, lively in conversation, fond of a jest, and of ardent feelings. Many anecdotes are related of his ministry ; but we have already extended our sketch as far as will be generally interesting, or we should be happy to introduce them.

October 21, 1805, " Voted to repair the bass viol, and the singers' seats."

July 23, 1806, Rev. Calvin Chaddock, late of Rochester, was installed as pastor of the Society ; the entertainment being provided by Lemuel Dwelly, at an expense of $125. Seven churches were sent to on the occasion ; five only attended. Rev. Mr. Strong, of Randolph, offered the Installing Prayer ; Rev. Mr. Niles, of Abington, preached the sermon, and offered the consecrating prayer ; Rev. Mr. Barker, of Middleboro', delivered the charge ; Rev. Mr. Norton, of Weymouth, the right hand of fellowship ; and Rev. Mr. Richards, of Halifax, offered the concluding prayer." During the ministry of Mr. Chaddock, the Academy was built, of which we shall speak in our Chapter on Education ; and of this Academy, Mr. C. had the charge, until his removal from the place, in 1818, after a settlement of 12 years. He is spoken of as a ready preacher, a man of great natural eloquence, fluent in speech, and one whose discourses were generally popular. In the possession of his son, Mr. Ebenezer N. Chaddock, of Boston, is a large sized painting, containing a likeness of Mr. C., and of his wife, and three of his children, executed nearly 50 years since, by Arad Thompson, and representing him in the attitude of imparting instruction to the children.

Mr. Alden, one of the pupils at his school, says of him, that, "with a mind richly gifted by the Father of Spirits, he possessed a native, simple, and truly genuine eloquence. His bosom, a fountain of the tenderest sympathies spontaneously gushing forth, moved him often and copiously "to weep with them that weep." To the afflicted — to the mourner in Zion — his words of consolation were the breathings of angelic sweetness; while the truth of God heard from his lips in tones of deepest solemnity, thrilled the hearts of assembled multitudes. "Of like passions with others — by no means faultless — yea, even specially "compassed with infirmity," — yet in conflict with his spiritual foes "he was more than a conqueror." The peaceful close of his useful life was passed on the sunny plains of Western Virginia. While passing up the beautiful Ohio, of a pleasant summer's morning, many years since, I was providentially thrown in company with some of those who enjoyed his last ministrations; and thus, from the lips of his personal friends, I received the animating account of his final exit from earth, in the triumph of the Christian faith."<sup>1</sup>

Rev. Seth Chapin, the sixth Pastor, was the son of Seth and Eunice Chapin, of Mendon, Mass.; and was born June 25, 1783. His father was an officer in the Revolutionary Army, and was stationed, a portion of the time, in Rhode Island; being engaged in Sullivan's celebrated expedition. The son pursued his studies, preparatory for College, under the Rev. Dr. Crane, of Uxbridge, entered Brown University, in 1804, graduated in 1808, studied Theology at Andover, which place he left in 1811; and in November of that year, was installed as pastor of the Church in Hillsboro', N. H. Here he remained until 1816; and the following three years were spent in Rowley, Mass., Mansfield, Conn., and elsewhere. In 1819, he was settled in Hanover, and remained until 1824, after which he preached in East Haddam, Conn., Hunter, N. Y., Attleboro', Mass., and Granville, Mass. In 1845, he relinquished the duties of his profession, and engaged in agricultural pursuits, with such ardor, and success, in the language of his son, as to "have the pleasure of matching the wonderful Georgic transformation, and saw,

"Ingens

Exiit ad coelum ramis felicibus arbos

Miraturque novas fondes et non sua poma."

He married Mary Bicknell, second daughter of the Hon. Joshua Bicknell, of Barrington, May 28, 1810, — her father having been, "for more than 50 years, prominent in the councils of the State; and a man of such unflinching political integrity as to have received the title of "old Aristides." By this marriage he had two sons, the elder of whom, Henry, graduated at Brown University, in 1835, received the degree of L.L.B., at Harvard College, in 1838, and is settled as a Physician, in Providence, Rhode Island. The younger son, read law with the Hon. A. C. Greene, of Rhode Island, and settled in Alabama, where he died September 11, 1836, at the early age of 21. Mr. Chapin, the father, died in Providence, Rhode Island, April 19, 1850, æ 67. His widow survives, and is residing with her son, in Providence. As a preacher, Mr. Chapin was earnest, and faithful; his discourses being instructive, and copiously illustrated. As a scholar, he was diligent, and studious; and several of his occasional productions were published. He was successful in his calling; a man of usefulness, and indomitable perseverance; and he left behind him a good name, as an inheritance for his surviving son.

Rev. Ethan Smith, the 7th pastor, "was born in Belchertown, Mass., Dec. 16, 1762, and while young, was a soldier for one summer in the Revolutionary War, and was at West Point when the traitor Arnold sold that fortress to the British. Having attended to the preparatory studies, he entered Dartmouth College in 1785, and graduated in 1790. Soon after taking his degree, he was licensed to preach, and spent the first Sabbath of October, 1790, at Haverhill, N. H., where he was first settled in the ministry. In about a year from that time, he was married to Bathsheba Sandford, second daughter of Rev. David Sandford, of Medway, Mass. He remained at Haverhill nine years, and was then dismissed for want of support. He was installed in the ministry at Hopkinton, N. H., March 12, 1800, and continued there about eighteen years, during sixteen of which he was Secretary of the New Hampshire Missionary Society. He was afterwards settled at Hebron, N. Y., about four years; at Poultney, Vermont, about five years; at Hanover, Mass., five years; and then spent a season as a city missionary in Boston. His publications were, 1. A Dissertation on the Prophecies, two editions; 2. A View of the Trinity, two editions; 3. A View of the Hebrews, two editions; 4. Lectures on the Subjects and Mode of Baptism, two editions; 5. A Key to the figurative Language of the Bible; 6. Memoirs of Mrs. Abigail Bailey; 7. A Key to the Revelation, 2 editions; 8. Prophetic Catechism; 9. Two Sermons on Episcopacy; 10. Farewell Sermon at Haverhill, N. H.; 11. First Sermon after installation at Hopkinton; 12. Two Sermons on the Vain Excuses of Sinners, preached at Washington, N. H.; 13. Sermon on the Moral Perfection of God, preached at Newburyport, Mass.; 14. Sermon on the daughters of Zion excelling, preached before a Female Cent Society; 15. Sermon on the happy Transition of Saints, preached at the funeral of Mrs. Jemima, consort of Rev. Dr. Harris, of Dunbarton; 16. Sermon at the ordination of Rev. Stephen Martindale, at Tinmouth, Vermont; and 17. Sermon at the ordination of Rev. Harvey Smith, at Weybridge, Vermont. His children were Myron, born at Haverhill, N. H., 1794, and died 1818, aged 24; Lyndon Arnold, born at Haverhill, 1795, graduated at Dartmouth College, married a daughter of Rev. Dr. Griffin, and settled as a physician, in Newark, N. J.; Stephen Sanford, born at Haverhill, 1797, and settled as pastor of the Congregational Church, Westminster, Mass.; Laura, who died in infancy; Carlos, born in Hopkinton, 1801, graduated at Union College, and settled as pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Massillon, Ohio; Grace Fletcher, wife of Rev. Job H. Martin, died in Haverhill, Mass., 1840; Sarah Towne, second wife of Rev. J. H. Martin, of New York; Harriet, wife of William H. Sanford, of Boylston, Mass.; and Ellen, wife of C. B. Sedgwick, Esq., of Syracuse, died May 23, 1846, aged 33. The wife of Mr. Smith, died in Pompey, N. Y., April 5, 1835, aged 64. He was living, in 1847, in Boylston, Mass.,<sup>1</sup> but has since deceased.<sup>1</sup>

During the ministry of Mr. Smith, the second meeting-house was torn down, and the third, or present house erected ; which stands in the centre of the town, facing the East, and is a modest structure, surmounted by a steeple, and in the belfry hangs the old bell, given by Mr. JosseLYnn, in 1785, and re-cast in 1788.

Rev. Abel G. Duncan, the present pastor of the Society, graduated at the Bangor Theological Seminary, in 1828, was settled for four years at Jackson and Brooks, Maine, and was installed in Hanover, August 22, 1833. He has proved himself a faithful minister, and an excellent citizen ; having had the honor to Represent the town, for six years, in the State Legislature, and having been, for many years, Chairman of the School Committee.

The Central Society, like all others that have been long established, has seen its days of prosperity, and its days of adversity. As the oldest society in the town, it has enjoyed great advantages, and has done much to maintain the ordinances of the gospel. We are happy to say that the annals of the Town are but little stained with the records of protracted controversies, and bitter animosities. A few such unpleasant memorials occur, but we have chosen to leave them unnoticed, rather than to make our pages the vehicle of perpetuating events of so little consequence in themselves, and so unprofitable to the present, or to future generations. The virtues of our fathers, should ever be remembered. And among these, by no means the least conspicuous, are their reverence for God, their zeal for his worship, and their devotion to the interests of learning and piety. May we, their children, endeavor to follow them in everything good, and may we transmit, to our children, blessings as great as have descended to us from them.

ST. ANDREWS CHURCH.

About the year 1725, Episcopal service was first performed in the town of Scituate, by Rev. Timothy Cutler, D. D., Rector of Christ Church, in Boston. According to Deane,<sup>1</sup> the statement if made in Nichols's collection of anecdotes, that "Mr. Cutler, with several attendants, came to Scituate, during the absence of Mr. Bourne, minister of the north parish, by the invitation of Lieut. Damon, (then at variance with Mr. Bourne,) and another gentleman of large estate, and performed divine service in the Church form, in the north Meeting-house."

This statement, in its leading features, is copied by Mr. Cutler, into his "Sermon on the origin, progress, and present condition of St. Andrews Church, Hanover, Massachusetts," which was published in 1848;<sup>2</sup> to which he adds, "Whether any minister of the Church of England had previously visited or resided as a missionary," in Scituate, "does not appear. The Society for Propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts, which is connected with the Church of England, and to whose assistance this Church was subsequently indebted for aid, had missionaries located in New England, some years prior to this visit of Dr. Cutler, in 1725, and it is not impossible that their labors may have been held in this region."

In a communication, received from John Barstow, Esq., of Providence, R. I., he speaks of the Rev. Mr. Miller, of Braintree, Mass., as one of these Missionaries, and says, that, in his annual Report to the Society, in 1731, he observes that "he had preached from time to time to the people of the Church of England, in Scituate, and the neighboring towns, that the services were held in a private house, and that the auditory was so large that the house could not contain them."

The first meeting-house belonging to this Church, was erected in 1731, on the central part of Church hill, in Scituate, and enlarged in 1753;<sup>1</sup> and, though not entirely finished at the time, it "was opened for divine service, October 11, 1731, when Mr. Miller preached a sermon, and baptised eight children. More people were present than the church could contain. Mr. Miller preached again, on the last day of November, being St. Andrew's day, from which the Church takes its name. The members of the Church sent an earnest request, to the Society in England, to provide them a missionary, and the Rev. Mr. Davenport was sent them, with an allowance, from the Society, of £60 per annum, and an allowance of Books, for Libraries, and devotional books, for distribution among the poorer members. Mr. Davenport continued their Rector, from 1733, to 1736, inclusive."<sup>2</sup>

Deane states, that Mr. Davenport, who graduated at Harvard University, in 1719, and also received a degree at Oxford, England, gave, in 1743, "his house and land in Scituate, to the Society for propagating the gospel in foreign parts, in trust, towards the support of the ministers of St. Andrew's Church in Scituate, in perpetuity; and in this conveyance, he adverts to the fact of his having been their first rector.”<sup>1</sup> We shall have occasion to refer to this gift hereafter.

Rev. Mr. Brockwell, the next Rector, had charge of the society “from 1737, to the early part of 1739. He then left Scituate, and accepted a call from a Church in Salem. While he preached at St. Andrews, he received £60 per annum, from the Society in England.”<sup>2</sup>

From the time Mr. Brockwell left Scituate, the church was destitute of a regularly appointed minister, until 1743, when the mission was re-established, by the appointment of Rev. Ebenezer Thompson, of New Haven, as Rector, with a yearly allowance from the society, in England, of £40 per annum; and he continued in his office until his death, November 28, 1775, aged 64.<sup>3</sup> The request for this renewal of the mission, came not only from Scituate, but from citizens of Hanover, Pembroke, and Marshfield.

During the settlement of Mr. Thompson, he resided, for about thirty years, on the glebe which had been given by Mr. Davenport; but for a year or two before his death, he purchased and occupied the house now owned and occupied by Mr. John Gardner, in Scituate, and there resided at the date of his decease. He is spoken of as a prudent, worthy minister, pleasing and interesting in his conversation and general deportment. He was buried in the burial-ground connected with the church, on the hill, in Scituate. His widow died, July 27, 1813, in the 99th year of her age,<sup>4</sup> and her remains are deposited by his side.

According to Mr. Barstow, Mr. Thompson was the son of Ebenezer Thompson, of New Haven, Connecticut, and was born in 1711, and married Esther Stephens, of New Haven. His children, born in New Haven, were Esther, who died young, and Ebenezer, born January 15, 1735. After his removal to Scituate, he had John, Amey, Anna, Lucy, Lois, Mary, and Jane. John, died in early life, at Bilboa, in Spain. Amey, married Benjamin Palmer, of Scituate, and died, May 16, 1813, aged 73. Her daughter married Dr. Freeman Foster, of Scituate. Anna, died May 2, 1816, aged 71. Lucy, died December 3, 1819, aged 72. Lois, died November 14, 1826, aged 76. Mary, married Lemuel Ransom, and died July 9, 1833, aged 81. Jane, married Rev. William W. Wheeler, and died July 30, 1821, aged 64. All the above lie in the burial ground on Church hill.

Ebenezer, the surviving son, settled in Providence, Rhode Island, in 1764, having previously married Lydia Kennicott, by whom he had Sarah, 1760 ; — Edward K., 1762 ; — and Mary, 1764. His wife, Lydia, died in 1770, and he married her sister Elizabeth, by whom he had five sons, and one daughter, viz : Ebenezer, John, Thomas, Joseph, Lydia, and Stephen.

Edward Kennicott, the son of Ebenezer and Lydia, went to Alexandria, Virginia, to engage in commercial pursuits, and there married Sarah Kuhn Swoope, daughter of Col. Michael Swoope, and removed soon after to Providence, Rhode Island, where he had five children, Mary Ann, 1789 ; — Elizabeth K., 1791 ; — Sarah Swoope, March, 1794, married John Barstow, Esq., 1828, now of Providence ; — Edward K., 1797 ; — and Esther L., 1802.

After the death of Mr. Thompson, the services of the Church, in Scituate, were suspended for a season, during the War with Great Britain, popular sentiment in New England then setting very strongly against the form of worship prescribed by the Church of England ; and, except the occasional services of Rev. Samuel Parker, from 1780, to 1782, the Church remained without a Rector, until the appointment of Rev. William W. Wheeler, May 15, 1783. During the time that Mr. Parker served the Church, Joseph Donnell, of Hanover, and Benjamin James, Jr., of Scituate, were Wardens, and Dr. Charles Stockbridge, and Benjamin Jacobs, of Scituate, and Elijah Curtis, Thomas Stockbridge, Jr., Mordecai Ellis, Stephen Bailey, and Benjamin Mann, of Hanover, were vestrymen.

We should have remarked, that Job Otis, Thomas Bardin, Jacob Bailey, Joseph House, Isaac Buck, Isaac Hatch, Henry Merriitt, and John Lane, all of Hanover, are spoken of as "Churchmen," on the town records, in 1736 ; so that citizens of Hanover have been connected with the Society, from about the date of its first formation.

Mr. Wheeler officiated as Rector, in Hanover, and elsewhere a portion of the time, until his death, which took place, January 14, 1810, at the age of 75. It was during his Rectorship, in 1797, that the church was incorporated, Charles Bailey, and Thomas Barstow, Jr. being wardens.

About the year 1810, owing to difficulties in the First Parish in Hanover, some of the members left, and joined the Episcopal Church.<sup>1</sup> This led to the proposition, for the erection of a new Church, in a more favorable location; and, at a meeting of the parish, held April 24, 1810, it was "Voted, that the Society are willing to attend public worship in Hanover, provided individuals will build a new Church in said Hanover."<sup>2</sup> This house was built in 1811, at an expense of $5,000,—the building committee consisting of Horatio Cushing, Esq., Reuben Curtis, and Edward Eells; Capt. Albert Smith, and Melzar Curtis, Esq., being the contractors for its erection; and it was consecrated to the worship of God, according to the usage of the Protestant Episcopal Church, June 13, 1811, by Bishop Griswold, being the first church in Massachusetts consecrated by him.

In the same year, 1811, a subscription for the endowment of a perpetual fund for the Church was made, amounting to $1236. 75, to which was afterwards added the sum of $188. 82, from the proceeds of the old church, and other items.<sup>3</sup> The Trustees of this fund were incorporated, in 1815, and in 1848, it consisted of 22 shares in the State Bank, Boston, valued at $1,320. This is now invested in the Parsonage, occupied by Mr. Cutler.

After the erection of the Church, in Hanover, which stands near the Four Corners, Rev. Joab G. Cooper, was elected Rector, and held that office until 1816, when he retired. According to Deane, he was from Long Island.<sup>4</sup> Rev. Calvin Wolcott, the next Rector, was chosen in 1818, and continued to serve until 1834, when he resigned. He is now settled as colleague, with the Rev. Dr. Tyng, in New York, and during his settlement in Hanover, the affairs of his Society were in a prosperous condition. An account of his family will be found in our Genealogical Sketches.

In 1835, Rev. Samuel G. Appleton, took charge of the parish, and continued with it until November, 1838; and during his Rectorship, a new organ was purchased, at an expense of $450. Eleazer A. Greenleaf, the next Rector, took charge of the Parish in 1839, and remained until 1841, in which year the present Rector, Rev. Samuel Cutler, came to the place, and here he has since remained, now residing in the fine parsonage house, built for him in 1849, which stands on Washington street, near the Four Corners.

It is remarked, by Deane, that the Episcopal Church in Marshfield, established as early as 1745, was for many years connected with St. Andrews, the rector of the latter officiating there one Sabbath in four; — also the Church in Taunton, where the rector of St. Andrews likewise officiated one Sabbath in four.<sup>1</sup>

For a fuller account of this Society than our limits permit us to give, we must refer our readers to the valuable discourse of Mr. Cutler, from which we have largely quoted, and to which we have been greatly indebted for many of the facts herewith presented.

We are happy to say, in concluding this sketch, that the Church at the Corners, is in a prosperous condition, under their present Rector, and as an indication of their outward progress, we may remark, that their temple has lately changed its appearance somewhat, by the removal of the old steeple, and the erection of a new one; and this Society, like that in the centre of the town, numbers among its members many of our most valuable and enterprising citizens.

UNIVERSALISTS.

There is no Universalist Society properly within the limits of Hanover, although one has existed, for many years, in the westerly part of Scituate, whose house of Worship stands within less than three rods of the boundary line of Hanover.

This parish was commenced as early as 1766, and is referred to, not only on the records of Scituate, of that date, but also of Hanover; and many items relating to its history, are found on the books of the latter town. Besides, as quite a number of our citizens are connected with the Universalist Society, and as three of its pastors have resided in Hanover, — two of the number being still citizens of the town, of whom the Author is one, — he feels that if full sketches of the First Parish, and of St. Andrew's Church, have been given, a few words, with reference to the denomination with which he is personally connected, may be permitted him.

The petition of the inhabitants of the northerly part of Hanover, praying to be set off as a separate district, or parish, which was presented in 1766, did not ask that the new parish should be of a different faith from the old ; although, doubtless, there was not an entire sympathy between the views of the petitioners, and those of the rest of the inhabitants. The town, however, refused to grant the request. In 1767, the signers of the first petition, with others, from Hanover, and Scituate, petitioned the General Court to be set off as a Parish by themselves ; and the Town chose a Committee to oppose them. In 1771, this petition to the General Court was renewed, but without success.

In 1792, the Town voted to permit Mr. Mellen to preach a few Sabbaths in the house which the petitioners had erected in Scituate, as early as the date of their first movement towards being set off.

December 12, 1796. A new petition was presented to the town "for a parish in the North part of Hanover," which was signed by David Jacobs, Elisha Barrell, Jesse Curtis, Nathaniel Jacobs, Eells Damon, Elisha Simmons, David Jacobs, Jr., Ezra Damon, Thomas Hatch, Curtis Brooks, Amos Curtis, Ezra Briggs, Jr., Benjamin Mann, Jr., Peres Jacobs, Joshua Simmons, and Ebenezer Curtis ; — but this petition met with the same fate as those which had preceded it, being rejected.

Finally, in 1812, petitioners, from Scituate, and Hanover, were incorporated as a "Universalist Society," and from that day to this, the Society has continued in existence, and is still in good standing with the denomination.

This Society was one of the first of the Universalist order, established in Plymouth County ; its members being residents of Scituate, Hanover, Abington, Halifax, Duxbury, and other towns ; and Rev. John Murray, an early apostle of Universalism, preached in the old meeting-house 60 years ago. The present neat and commodious edifice, was erected during the pastorate of Rev. Robert L. Killam, in 1832, and stands on a beautiful eminence, near Barstow's hill, just on the line between South Scituate and Hanover, — the Church itself being in South Scituate.

The old meeting house, which stood on the same site as the present house, was two stories high; the roof pitching East and West; with a porch on the East, extending from the ground to the eaves, having doors, in front, and on each side of the same, with stairways within, leading to the galleries. There were doors on the North and South ends of the house, about the centre of the same; and two rows of windows, the lower row lighting the body of the house, and the upper the galleries. There were pews in the floor, but the galleries were furnished with long seats, or benches, as was the custom in those days. The house had neither steeple nor bell, was unplastered for a long time; nor had it a chimney, until after the commencement of the present century. It was a venerable structure, and beneath its roof, the members of the Society enjoyed, for many years, the ministrations of the gospel, according to their own views of its teachings, though at first the parish was in a measure an off-shoot from the older parishes, in Scituate and Hanover.

The names of those who have preached to the Society, from time to time, are, David Pickering; Samuel Baker; Elias Smith; Joshua Flagg; Benjamin Whittemore; Robert L. Killam, from 1829 to 1838; H. W. Morse, 1838; John F. Dyer, 1839; J. E. Burnham, 1840; John S. Barry, 1841—1844; M. E. Hawes, 1844 & 5; Horace P. Stevens, 1846 & 7; and Robinson Breare, the present pastor, settled in 1849.

The names of the original members of the Society, appended to the Act of Incorporation, granted June 18, 1812, are, *Enoch Collamore, *Loring Jacobs, Ichabod R. Jacobs, John Jones, Jr., Calvin Wilder, *James H. Jacobs, *Charles Totman, Charles Jones, (in Illinois,) *Isaac N. Damon, Joshua Bowker, *James Jacobs, Abel Silvester, *Charles Simmons, *William Hyland, *David Turner, *Samuel Randall, Jr., *Samuel Randall, *Joshua Damon, Ebenezer Totman, *Jonathan Turner, *Enoch Collamore, Jr., *Benjamin Bowker, John Gross, *Josiah Witherell, *Samuel Simmons, *John Jones, *Peleg Simmons, Jr., *Seth Stoddard, *George Litchfield, *Elisha Gross, *Reuben Sutton, Theophilus Cortherell, Edward F. Jacobs, *Elisha Barrell, Elisha Barrell, Jr., Stephen Jacobs, and *Edward Curtis.

BAPTIST MEETING HOUSE.

Those to whose names an asterisk is prefixed, have since deceased ; some have removed ; and of the original number, but ten remain, all of whom still " hold fast to the profession of their faith without wavering."

This Society is in a prosperous condition, and free from debt ; and though many of its older members have deceased within a few years, whose familiar faces are seen no more, yet those who remain can be relied upon, we think, for its future and permanent support.

BAPTIST SOCIETY.

The First Baptist Church, in Hanover, was constituted Feb. 11, 1806, and was composed of members from the First Church, in Marshfield, residing in Hanover, and Scituate, favorable to the religious opinions held by that denomination. Rev. Barnabas Perkins, was the first pastor ; and from 1807, to 1809, William Curtis served the infant Society. In 1810, Rev. John Butler was settled, and ordained to the work of the Gospel Ministry, in December of the same year. Mr. Butler continued to labor with this Church about 14 years, serving them with much ability, and with good success. During his ministry, their house of worship was erected, in 1812, which stands on Main Street, and is a small, but neat edifice, in good repair, and of fair proportions.

From 1824, to 1832, the Church passed through seasons of trial and discouragement, and did not enjoy, for much of the time, a stated ministry. Mr. Darius Dunbar, was ordained to the pastoral office, in 1833, remained about two years, and was succeeded by Rev. Robert B. Dickie, from Nova Scotia, who entered upon his duties, July 1, 1834, and remained until Sept. 3, 1836. Rev. Horace Seaver, of Maine, was the next pastor, preached about two years, and was followed by Rev. Nathan Stetson, whose name appears on the Minutes of 1839.

From 1840, to 1842, Rev. Thomas Conant, now of Scituate, served the Society ; and after his removal, for a period of between two and three years, the Society was destitute of a pastor. In 1845, Rev. Nathan Chapman entered upon its charge, but remained only one year, and was followed, in 1846-7, by Rev. B. N. Harris. In June, 1849, Rev. William N. Slason, the present pastor, took charge of the Society, and his services, we believe, have been acceptable and profitable.

This Society, though small, is highly respectable in its character; its members are zealous; and the earnestness with which they have engaged in the cause of religion, is worthy of all praise. Its officers, have been men of excellent standing in the community; and to their energy, is doubtless to be attributed much of the Society's success. The present Deacons,—Col. John Collamore, of South Scituate, and John Brooks, of Hanover, (the former of whom was long and favorably known as one of the Board of County Commissioners,) have long held the office which they now sustain, and are men never weary in well doing.

CHAPTER VI.

EDUCATION.

“ From education as the leading cause,
The public character its color draws ;
Thence the prevailing manners take their cast,
Extravagant or sober, loose or chaste.”

COWPER.

Early laws for the support of education — Our Common School System — Schoolmasters — Schools established in Hanover — Mr. Fitzgerald — Joseph Cushing — Luke Stetson — Sketch from 1750 to 1840 — Table of appropriations — Academy, Mr. Chaddock's — Removal to the Four Corners — Second building — New Edifice, built in 1852 — Proprietors.

Very early in the history of the Plymouth Colony, it was “ proposed by the Court unto the severall Townshipes of this Jurisdiction as a thinge they ought to take into their serious consideration That some course may be taken that in every towne there may be a Scoolmaster sett up to traine up children to reading and writing ; ”<sup>1</sup> and in 1677, we read, that “ Forasmuch as the maintainance of good literature doth much tend to the advancement of the weale and flourishing estate of societies and Republicques — This Court doth therefor order ; That in whatsoever township in this Govrment consisting of fifty families or upwards ; any meet man shall be obtained to teach a Gramer Scoole such townshipp shall allow at least twelve pounds in currant marchantable pay to be raised by rate on all the Inhabitants of such Towne, and those that have the more emediate benefitt thereof by theere Childrens good and general good shall make up the resedue necessarie to maintain the same, and that the profitts ariseing of the Cape Fishing, heretofore ordered to maintaine a Gramer Scoole in this Collonie, be destributed to such Townes as have such Gramer Scooles for the maintainance thereof ; not exceeding five pounds per annum to any such Towne, unless the Court Treasurer or other appointed to manage that affaire see good cause to adde therunto to any respective Towne not exceeding five pounds more pr anum; and further this Court orders that every such Towne as consists of seaventy families or upwards and hath not a gramer seoole therein shall allow and pay unto the next towne which hath such Gramar seoole kept up amongst them, the sum of five pounds p annum in eurrent merchantable pay, to be levied on the Inhabitants of such defective townes by rate, and gathered and delivered by the Constables of such Townes as by warrant from any Majestrate of this Jurisdiction shalbe required.”<sup>1</sup>

In 1672, it was ordered, that “every County Town shall have and maintain a Latine School; which if they do and the Master (be) judged by the major part of the ministers of the County a Person capable to bring up Youth fitt for the Colledge; then such Town for their eneouragement shall have one third part annually of the money raised on the aceount of the Cape Fishery, &c.”<sup>2</sup> Those who enjoyed the benefit of this school, by sending their children, were “to pay three pence a week for Writing and Reading, and six pence a week for a Schollar after he comes to his Grammar;” and every such schoolmaster was “to be eapable to teach to Write and Cypher,” and was “to receive children after they are fit to begin in their Psalter,” &c.<sup>3</sup>

This was the foundation of our justly celebrated system of MASSACHUSETTS COMMON SCHOOL INSTRUCTION;—and from this policy, the people have never departed. One of the bright spots in our history is, that through all reverses of fortune, and in all times of danger and peril, the edueation of the young has always been properly attended to. It is this that has given suecess to our enterprise, prosperity to our commerce, and stability to our institutions.

In early days, we are told, “the only schoolmasters were the clergy of the towns, who exercised this office in many instances in addition to the arduous duties of their peeuliar avocation. Youths were received into their families to receive a preparation for college, and over the whole body of the younger portion of the inhabitants they extended their care.”<sup>4</sup>

Many of the first settlers of Scituate, according to Deane,<sup>1</sup> were men of intelligence and education. "It was an object of high emulation," he remarks, "as well as of religious principle with the early Congregational Churches, to be supplied with a thoroughly educated ministry; and such, without exception, were those pastors who, having been silenced in England, came hither to minister to the little flocks in the wilderness: nay, men of education and talents were selected for the subordinate offices in the Churches. . . . Professional school-masters were few, and there was no public provision for their remuneration. Not only the pastors, but other men of learning must have given instructions, and almost gratuitously, in their own houses. It is known that Mr. Chauncy prepared his own sons, and others, for college, and also several young men for the ministry, between 1640 and 1650. Mr. Witherell had been a Grammar school-master by profession, before leaving England, and many proofs are left of his skill in the languages."

By the enactment of the Colony Laws, to which we have referred, school-teachers, as a class, were encouraged; and many men, of learning, and virtue, attached themselves to this profession.

In the Act incorporating the Town of Hanover, the customary stipulation, of the establishment and support of a school was inserted; and accordingly, March 2, 1727-8, it was "voted to keep a school this year at three places, where the selectmen shall think best;" and £27 10s. old tenor, were assessed for its support. Who the teacher was at this time, does not appear. The school was kept in private houses, and those of Joseph Cornish, and John Bailey, were used for the purpose.

1729, May 29, it was "voted to have a school at or near the meeting-house."

1730, April 17, a standing school was voted, "at or near the meeting house;" and May 18, provisions were made for building a school house of wood. This first school house stood near the centre of the town, and tradition says it was opposite the present gun-house.

1734, May 14, RICHARD FITZGERALD was voted "school-master;" and he continued to teach in the town until his death, in 1746. From whence Mr. F. originated, I have been unable to learn. He seems to have been a man of talent, well skilled in the languages, especially the Latin, and to have taught with good success. He was an instructor in Scituate, before his settlement in Hanover, and had the honor of preparing for the University the Hon. William Cushing, LL. D., who graduated at Harvard College, in 1751, and was educated for the bar under the care of the celebrated Jeremy Gridley, of Boston, for many years Attorney General of the Province of Massachusetts.<sup>1</sup> We consider the town highly favored, in securing the services of so valuable a man, early in their municipal career; and under his judicious training, many were reared, who afterwards became distinguished, in the Town and the State.

1746, March 16, a moveable school voted, "to be kept the first three months at the school-house by the meeting-house; the next three, at or near the house of John Studley ( who lived near the Four Corners ); the third term at or near the house of David Jenkins ( probably in the Salmond District, ) ; and the last term, at or near the house of Isaac Hatch, ( in the Westerly part of the town, or what is now the King Street District. ) "

1748, June 27, a moveable school voted, to be kept from December 16, to March 16, at the new school house near Silvanus Wing's ( on Circuit Street, ) ; from October 1, to December 16, at or near the dwelling house of Benjamin Stetson, the residents of that quarter to provide the place; from August 1, to October 1, at or near William Dwelley's, the residents of that quarter to provide the place; and the remainder of the year at the school-house by the meeting-house. October 31, £6 10s. were voted to John Barker, for boarding the school-master in 1747, and £4 10s. to Silvanus Wing, and £6, to John House, for the like purpose.

1750, A moving school voted for this year. Nov. 27th, Voted to Margaret Fitzgerald 18s. 8d, "for boarding JOSEPH CUSHING school master, last winter." This is the first time Mr. Cushing's name appears on the records, as a teacher; and he continued to serve the town in that capacity, a part of the time, for several years. He is the gentleman, who afterwards became distinguished in the history of the State, and whose services we shall sketch in our Chapter on the Revolution.

1752. LUKE STETSON, is named as one of the masters for this year; bills of board, for twenty-six weeks, being audited and allowed, and his own bill of services; and he continued to teach for several years. Mr. Stetson was a native of Hanover; and he, with Mr. Cushing, were both, probably, pupils of Mr. Fitzgerald, and received from him valuable aid, qualifying them for the posts they held.

It would seem, from our records, that a school was taught throughout the year, both summer and winter. The attendance of girls, was greatest in the summer season; that of boys, in the winter; many being kept at home, by their parents, a portion of the time, to assist in the labors of the farm. In this respect, boys in the city then, and always have, enjoyed advantages far superior to those in our country towns.

1763. The selectmen were authorised to hire a school-master for one year, "to keep the school in each quarter of the town, three months at a place."

1772, March 9. A committee was chosen to divide the town into four quarters, and to determine where each school-house should stand; and] they reported, "First, that the school-house by the meeting-house, in the middle quarter, so called, stands as conveniently to accommodate said quarter as we can place it. Second, the school-house in the East quarter is equally convenient in location. Thirdly, in the North quarter, or on Curtis Street, we recommend the removal of the house Northward, between the dwelling houses of Joseph Bates and Caleb Sylvester. Fourthly, in the Westerly quarter we recommend either the removal of the present school-house to a spot of plain ground between the dwelling-houses of Isaac Hatch and Stephen Randall, or the erection of an additional house between the dwelling-houses of Eliab and Benjamin Studley, the time to be equally divided between said two school-houses."

1773, October 26. Voted to Isaiah Josselynn £3 15s., for keeping school one month, from December 9, 1772, to January 16, 1773.

1774. March 14. £11 were voted to support a Grammar school this year. Also, "voted to give the old school-house by the meeting-house, to the middle quarter of the Town, they repairing the same, or building a new one on the same spot."

1777, May 19. The Selectmen instructed to provide a school for the town as usual.

1778, March 20. Voted to postpone the school till October next.

1781, April 2. £600 in continental bills, voted for the use of a school; and October 29, the selectmen were instructed to "hire a school-master as soon as may be."

1784, March 15. The selectmen were instructed to hire a grammar school-master for three months; and Mr. THOMAS, is named as one of the teachers for this year. At the same meeting, Joseph Brooks, Joseph Ramsdell, Jr., Robert L. Eells, and Timothy Robbins, with the three selectmen, were chosen to divide the town into four quarters; and it was voted "that one quarter shall not send their children into another school." For some years before this, it had been a custom, with those parents most anxious for the instruction of their children, to keep them at school as much as possible; and hence they travelled from quarter to quarter, as the school was moved, to enjoy this advantage. Complaints having been made against this course, by the above vote it was stopped.

1800, January 6. The School money to be divided into four parts, "according to the number of scholars in each quarter of the town."

1801, April 6. A Committee chosen to number the scholars in each school district.

1802, March 8. A Committee of two from each district chosen to report how the money should be divided in the several districts, and they recommended to district the town anew, and divide the money equally in the districts, and their report was accepted.

1804. Capt. Daniel Barstow, Calvin Bailey, Snow Curtis, Robert Eells, Elisha Barrell, Jr., Joshua Mann, and Clement Bates, were chosen to divide the school money; — from which it appears that there were then seven districts in the town.

1803. The school districts were numbered as follows: — The Meeting-house District, No. 1; Broad Oak District, No. 2; Upper Forge District, No. 3; Drinkwater District, No. 4; Beech

Woods District, No. 5; Curtis Street District, No. 6; Snappet District, No. 7. The Curtis street District was divided in 1831-2, the Southerly part being called No 8; and this is the number into which the town is now divided.

1812. The three selectmen, and the three ministers were chosen a School Committee. Petitions were presented this year for aid to the small districts, and the town voted that "no district should draw a larger sum than $105, nor any less than $45, or in that proportion according to the sum raised."

1819, March 8. A School Committee was chosen, consisting of "the three selectmen, and all the ministers in the town, together with Ebenezer Curtis, John B. Barstow, Robert Salmon, Caleb Whiting, Elisha Barrell, Jr., and Elijah Wing." November 1:—This Committee was discharged, and a new one chosen, consisting of Rev. John Butler, Rev. Calvin Wolcott, Rev. Seth Chapin, Aaron Hobart, Esq., and Dr. Joshua Studley.

1822, November 4. The Committee chosen to divide the school money were instructed to make out a list of the scholars from four to sixteen years of age, with the names of their parents or guardians.

1827. A general Committee of seven chosen, and seven persons as a prudential Committee, one for each district.

1836. Voted to divide the school money, one half on the districts, and the other half on the scholars; and this course, with but few exceptions, has been pursued to the present time.

1837. Voted to apply $200 of the surplus revenue to schools this year.

We have no means at hand, for ascertaining the names of the school books used in the town one hundred years ago. From our oldest citizens we learn that the Psalter, the New England Primer, and the Testament, were the principal reading books in their school days, and the Young Man's Companion, and Pike's were the most common Arithmetics. There was one spelling book before Noah Webster's; this last was introduced nearly seventy years ago. There was also a small Geography used in some of the schools. Text books were not so numerous as now.

Among the female teachers "Ma'am Mann," as she is called, was one of the most celebrated, and taught, in Hanover and Scituate, seventy years ago. Girls carried their "samplers" to be wrought, and their "knitting and sewing." It sometimes taxed the patience of our worthy pedagogues severely, to have little misses come up and ask questions about their knitting. Luke Stetson, it is said, told one of his pupils to "widen,—widen,"—until she had knit her stocking "as wide as a meal bag."

Considerable improvement has been made of late in our school-houses. The old, dilapidated structures, which were visible in all the districts a few years since, are gradually giving way to more commodious and tasteful edifices. The houses in Districts No. 2, 3, and 4, are quite neat. In 1847, the question of the town's purchasing the existing school houses, and erecting new ones in the several districts, began to be agitated, and eventually the course was adopted, and is now being carried out.

The following table exhibits the amount appropriated for the support of schools at different periods.

1728.	Old Tenor.	£27 10s.	1782-'91.	In Silver.	£60 00s.

1779.	In Bills.	200 00s.	1851-'52.	"	1300 00

From the foregoing table, it appears that the amount, appropriated by the Town for the support of Schools, has been doubled within the last 20 years. This fact, we think, speaks well for our citizens, and shows a commendable interest in the cause of Education.

Our schools, we think, will not suffer in comparison with those of equal size in the neighboring towns. A desire is felt to procure good teachers, and to pay them liberally for their services. We hope this interest, in so vital a cause, will continue to increase; and that the amount appropriated, will keep pace with the wants of our children, and the ability of the people.

ACADEMY.

In 1792, the State of Massachusetts encouraged the establishment of Academies within its limits, by grants of tracts of land in the District of Maine. In consequence of these grants, many such institutions sprung into existence, and contributed greatly to aid the cause of education, by giving more thorough instruction in the different branches taught in the public schools. In 1798, the attention of the citizens of Hanover was turned to this subject, and March 7, a Committee was appointed to draw up a petition to the General Court, probably for an Act of Incorporation. We hear no more of the matter, however, until after the settlement of Rev. Calvin Chaddock, in 1806, and he, having been for some years preceptor of an Academy in Rochester, Massachusetts, which he built at his own expense, and where, in the short space of six years, nearly 1300 different pupils were taught by him, soon took measures for establishing one in Hanover; and so well was he seconded in his efforts, that before 1808, a building was erected for that purpose, and was ready for occupancy. It stood on the common, a little West of the Centre Meeting House, and was two stories high, of fair proportions, neatly painted, furnished with venetian blinds, and crowned with a cupola and bell. A respectable number of pupils of both sexes attended the school, from towns both of Plymouth and Norfolk counties. Beside the common English branches, instruction was given in the Latin and Greek languages, the higher mathematics, navigation, surveying, &c.; and in the female department, under the charge of Mrs. C., considerable attention was given to embroidery, and painting in water colors; and all the pupils took part in weekly declamations, on Wednesday afternoons, in the hall above the school-room. Many young men were fitted for college here, some of whom were subsequently distinguished for eminence in their professions; and of the "honorable women not a few," Mrs. Almira Little Torrey, is named, as one "whose amiable disposition, high intelligence, and devoted piety, have embalmed her memory in the hearts of a numerous circle of friends; and who, by means of her interesting and published mémoires, being dead, yet speaketh."<sup>1</sup>

"The venerable founder of Hanover Academy," says Mr. A., "will not be forgotten, either by those 'who sat at his feet,' as pupils, or were his hearers as a preacher of the Gospel." The town has reason to remember him with gratitude, for his patient and earnest efforts for the improvement of the young.

This school continued in a flourishing condition, throughout the period of the settlement of Mr. C.; but soon after his departure, it began visibly to decline, and was finally suspended for a season. The first Sabbath School was held in this building, during the ministry of Mr. Chapin,—the Assembly's Catechism being the instruction book placed in the children's hands. At length, about the year 1822, the building was sold, moved to the Four Corners, and is now occupied as a store, and shoe-manufactory, by Mr. Stephen Josselynn.

The second Academy, was erected in 1828, and stood on Broadway, not far from the Episcopal Church. It was built, in shares of $25 each, at an expense of about $1200;—the Trustees were Incorporated in 1829; and the names of the original shareholders were, Alexander Wood, Esq., Capt. Haviland Torrey, Joseph Eells, Ephraim Stetson, Dr. Ezekiel D. Cushing, Rev. Calvin Wolcott, Sarah Gardner, Robert Eells, Asaph Magoun, Horace Collamore, Esq., Gen. A. W. Oldham, Capt. Tilden Crooker, Benjamin C. Pratt, Ethan A. Stetson, Capt.

Pratt, Luther Howland, James Waterman, Samuel Waterman, Samuel Stetson, Elias Magoun, John Barstow, Esq., Albert Clapp, and John Wilder.

The preceptors at this Academy, from its erection in 1828, were, Zephaniah Bass, 1828; Horace H. Rolfe, 1829; Rev. Cyrus Holmes, 1830; Ethan Allen, 1830; Rev. Calvin Wolcott, 1831; John P. Washburn, 1832; Dr. Ira Warren, 1833; Thomas F. White, 1834, and 1835; Herman Bourn, 1837; Josiah Fuller, 1838, and 1839; and Rev. Cyrus Holmes, 1840, to the year previous to his death.

Since then, the Instructors have been Charles Hitchcock, who taught two terms; George Wolcott, who taught one term; and M. P. McLauthlin, Esq., the present Principal. There have been female teachers connected with the Academy, a portion of the time; and the number of pupils, in 1832, was 56; in 1833, 34; and in 1834, 66.

In 1843, the Dorcas Society held meetings in the upper hall, and the Episcopal Society also held evening prayer meetings in the hall, once a week, during the same year.

Finally, in 1851, the friends of Education in the vicinity, thinking a better building was needed, endeavored to raise, in shares of $25, each, a sum sufficient for that purpose; and in a short time $2,750 were subscribed, including a liberal donation of $1,000 from Mr. Samuel Salmond, to which was added $375 received for the old house; and the present beautiful edifice, which stands a few rods south of the old one, was built at an expense of about $3,500, including the bell, which was a gift from Miss Salmond, — and was dedicated, by appropriate services, March 2, 1852; the address being delivered by Rev. E. Porter Dyer, of Hingham, the invocatory prayer by Rev. A. G. Duncan, the dedicatory prayer by Rev. Samuel Cutler, and hymns, composed by Miss Lucy S. Delano, Rev. E. Porter Dyer, and Rev. A. G. Duncan, being sung, under the direction of Mr. Benjamin Frost.

Other impromptu addresses were delivered, by Rev. H. D.

Walker, of East Abington, Rev. Mr. White, of North Abington, Rev. W. N. Slason, of Hanover, and M. P. McLauthlin, the Principal of the Academy.

The board of Trustees consists of Rev. Samuel Cutler, President, Alfred C. Garratt, M. D., Secretary, Rev. Abel G. Duncan, Samuel Salmond, Seth Barker, Elijah Barstow, Treasurer, and M. Parris McLauthlin, ex officio.*

Mr. McLauthlin has had charge of the Academy for a few years past, and his services have given general satisfaction, and have been attended with a good degree of success. The institution has no fund invested for its support, but its income is derived from

LAWYERS.

Previous to the Revolution, and for some years afterwards, there was no regularly educated lawyer settled in Hanover; the business usually transacted by the members of this profession, being attended to by Elijah Cushing, Esq., Joseph Cushing, Esq., David Stockbridge, Esq., and a few other enterprising and educated Justices of the Peace, and by the Selectmen of the Town.

The first lawyer who settled in the town, so far as our records show, was Benjamin Whitman, Esq., son of Zachariah Whitman, of South Bridgwater, who was born in 1768, graduated at Brown University, in 1788, and resided in Pembroke, and then in Hanover, to which town he moved about the year 1792. He lived on Broadway, for a season, in the house now occupied by Samuel Eells, but afterwards purchased the Nathaniel Sylvester house, near North River Bridge, which is now occupied by Rufus Farnum. In 1799, he built the house in which Seth Barker, Esq., resides, — on a spot of elevated ground, commanding a fine view of the river, and of the ship-yards, which were then in active operation. His office, was on the opposite side of the road, and is still standing, near the house of Mr. Sylvanus Percival. He was Post Master for several years. He left the town about the year 1806, moving to Boston, of which city he was subsequently one of the Representatives, and of whose Police Court he was for many years Chief Justice. He was an able lawyer; a man of great business enterprise; an active politician; and his services were of great value to the town during the period of his residence in it. John Holmes, of Kingston, was one of his students while in Hanover, who subsequently settled in Maine, while that State was part of Massachusetts, and from which he was a Representative to the General Court of Massachusetts, and afterwards a Member of Congress. Barker Curtis, a native of Hanover, and a son of Simeon Curtis, Esq., was also one of his students, and had an office, for a time, in the North Easterly part of the town, where Hiram Curtis resides, but finally settled in Maine. Wm.

G. Curtis, a native of Hanover, was also a student with Mr. Whitman, but died before entering upon his professional career.

The next lawyer settled in Hanover, was John Winslow, Esq., only son of Dr. Isaac Winslow, of Marshfield, grandson of Gen. John Winslow, of Marshfield, and great grandson of Col. Isaac, who was the only surviving son of Governor Josiah Winslow. John, son of Dr. Isaac, graduated at Brown University, in 1795, and settled in Hanover about the year 1810. He lived first in the house now occupied by Stephen Josselynn, but soon after built the house recently occupied by Capt. John Cushing, near St. Andrew's Church, at the Four Corners. He was a thorough lawyer; gentlemanly in his manners; and one whose professional practice was very extensive. He died at Natchez, Mississippi, about the year 1830, and his widow and children moved to Hingham, where she died. He has sons in Boston.

Isaiah Wing, a native of Hanover, was, it is said, a pupil at the Academy of Mr. Chaddock, after he was a married man; and he subsequently studied law with Mr. Winslow, and practiced for a time in Hanover; but finally moved to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he died.

Jotham Cushman, Esq., was in Hanover, about the same time as Mr. Winslow, and built and occupied the long house at the Four Corners, now owned by the widow of Thomas Turner. Jabez Crooker was one of his students, and went into the Army during the war of 1812.

Aaron Hobart, Esq., son of Aaron, Esq.; and grandson of Col. Aaron, of Abington, graduated at Brown University, in 1805, and settled in Hanover about the year 1812, residing at the Four Corners. Whilst in Hanover, he was chosen to the Senate of Massachusetts, from Plymouth County, in 1820, and was a member of Congress in 1826-7. He moved to East Bridgewater, and was soon after appointed Judge of Probate for Plymouth County, which office he now holds. His public services have at all times been of great value to the community; upon his judgment great reliance is placed; and his demeanor as a citizen, and in the walks of private life, have gained for him the confidence and esteem of all who have the pleasure of his personal acquaintance.

Alexander Wood, Esq., of Middleboro', studied law with Judge Wood, of Middleboro', and practiced in Hanover for a short time; but afterwards relinquished the duties of his profession, and for some years past has been engaged in trade, at the Four Corners, with Capt. Haviland Torrey.

Perez Simmons, Esq., a native of Hanover, graduated at Brown University, in 1833, and settled first in Providence, Rhode Island, but came to Hanover, in 1843, and has since resided in the town, in the practice of his profession. He has been for some years past a member of the board of Selectmen, and was chosen to represent the town in the State Legislature, in 1851-2.

PHYSICIANS.

For about twenty years after the incorporation of the town, no physician resided within its limits; but Drs. Joseph Jacobs, and Charles Stockbridge, who were both of Scituate, extended their practice into Hanover, and the former resided quite near the Northerly bounds of the town.

Dr. Jeremiah Hall, settled in Hanover, about the year 1749, married Keziah Bailey, and remained until 1764, when he moved to Pembroke, of which town he was chosen delegate to the Provincial Congresses of 1774-5. He was a valuable citizen; a man well qualified for the duties of his calling; and he left behind him the memorials of a life of usefulness and virtue.

Dr. Lemuel Cushing, was a resident of Hanover, about the time of the Revolution, and was appointed by the Provincial Congress, a surgeon in the army. The precise time when he came to town is unknown, as also the date of his leaving.

Dr. Peter Hobart, of Hingham, came to Hanover in 1783, and here resided until his death, in 1793. His house was on Main Street, not far from the residence of the late Gideon Studley. His widow moved to New York State, and there died.

Dr. Marsh, of Hingham, was in Hanover for a few years, about the same time as Dr. Hobart.

Dr. Melzar Dwelley, previously of Ashburnham, came to Hanover, about the year 1798, and resided here, until his death, in 1828. He lived on Hanover Street, in the house now occupied by Norman Chamberlin. As a Physician, his abilities were highly respectable, and his professional services were in great demand. His descendants are in South Boston, and in Ashburnham.

Dr. Cartier, a Frenchman, from the island of Martinique, came to Plymouth, where he remained for a period ; and about the time of the last war, he settled in Hanover, remained seven years, and boarded at the house of Mr. Reuben Curtis. He was subsequently of Hanson, and finally, it is said, returned to Martinique, where he died. He was a man thoroughly educated, but eccentric in his manners.

Dr. Joshua Studley, a native of Hanover, practiced medicine from 1808, until 1848.

Dr. Ezekiel D. Cushing, was in Hanover from 1827 to 1828, when he deceased. He lived at the Four Corners. He was a man of eminent abilities ; had practiced in the best hospitals in France ; and was every way qualified to prosecute with distinguished success the brilliant career which opened before him. His early death was a melancholy event to his friends ; and in him, the public lost one who, had he lived, would doubtless have made himself conspicuous, and have ranked among the greatest and best physicians and surgeons of the age.

Dr. Henry Wade, was in Hanover, in 1829, and died in 1830.

Dr. Jacob Richards, now of Braintree, practiced in Hanover from 1834 to 1836. An account of his family will be found in our genealogical sketches.

Dr. Calvin B. Pratt, now of Bridgewater, was in Hanover, from 1836 to 1838.

Dr. Joseph B. Fobes, his successor, remained in the town until 1851. His practice was very extensive, and very successful.

Drs. Benjamin Whitwell, and Alfred C. Garratt, are at present settled in Hanover, and both reside at the Four Corners.

CHAPTER VII.

MILITARY HISTORY.

“ After years the tale shall tell,
In words of light revealed,
Who bravely fought, who nobly fell.”

Mrs. E. T. DANIELS.

Military training of our ancestors—Town's stock of powder, &c.—Expedition to the Spanish West Indies—Expedition to Cape Breton—French Neutrals—French War, with extracts from the Muster Rolls.

The circumstances in which the early settlers of New England were placed, rather than their inclination, or natural desire, led them to engage, more or less, in military pursuits, and the study of the art of war. Not only were they exposed, from the outset, to deadly encounters with the Indians who surrounded them; but after these foes were vanquished and subdued, others sprung up, in the neighboring provinces, of their own color, though not of their own nation; and the French and Spanish wars, called into active service the able-bodied citizens of Massachusetts, and perhaps contributed, in a measure, to prepare the way for that successful resistance to the encroachments of the mother country, which led to the establishment of our National Independence. Had it not been for these wars, and for the discipline which our troops received in them, and the military experience gained by our officers, it is doubtful if the war of the Revolution would have been so successfully prosecuted, had our fathers dared even to engage in it. We do not, however, appear as the advocate of war. It is a great calamity;—a frightful evil;—and under the influence of Christian truth, we hope the time may soon arrive, when swords shall be beaten into ploughshares, and spears into pruning hooks, and PEACE shall reign over all the earth.

But, as a faithful historian, it becomes our duty briefly to chronicle those events, which, when transpiring, were of so much consequence to the welfare of the people, and to their national existence. We give, therefore, not an extended account, but the simple incidents, alluded to on the records of the town, and contemporary papers, in the Archives of the State, and the possession of individuals.

1734, Sep. 9. £35 were voted for a "town stock of ammunition." Such a stock, every town was required by law to keep on hand.

1740, Mar. 2. It was voted that the Town's stock of powder and shot, should be kept "in the meeting-house chamber;"—a small room, over the womens' gallery;—and the Treasurer of the Town was authorised "to take out of the lease of the flats as much money as will purchase said stock, agreeable to the Law, with what Thomas Josselynn already has."

It was during this, and the following year, that the expedition to the Spanish West Indies, to which we have alluded on p. 20, was undertaken; but the only references to this expedition, which we find on the Town records, are the following under date of Dec. 28, 1741.—"Voted Dea. Thos. Josselynn, £13 16s. 4d. for mens rates gone to Cuba and elsewhere." Six other similar votes occur under the same date. The names of those who went from Hanover, are not given, nor are the tax bills in existence, from which to learn whose rates were remitted; but, from scattered hints, we think we may venture to name, besides Samuel Eells, who was an Ensign, and who died in the service, John Stoddard, Joshua Turner, John Whitcomb, and Ezekiel Ladd, alluded to on Town records as having had their taxes remitted; and perhaps Robert Young, whose widow Margaret received aid from the town this year. There must have been quite a number from Hanover, the whole sum remitted in taxes, being about £50, and not less than seven allusions being made to those "gone to Cuba."

The manuscript in the possession of Rev. Benj. Kent, of Roxbury, gives the names of only the 55, who survived in May, 1741. Over 400 men died in the expedition.

1744, Oct. 30. Capt. Elijah Cushing was instructed "to inform his Excellency concerning Dea. Thos. Josselynn's making way with the Town stock of gunpowder;" and Nov. 5, Capt. Cushing was appointed "to take care of the Town's powder and bullets."

In 1745, the expedition to Cape Breton, was undertaken, at the instance of Gov. Shirley; the forces from Massachusetts, consisting of upwards of 3,200 men, aided by 500 from Connecticut, and 300 from New Hampshire.<sup>1</sup> This may be considered as the commencement of the French war, which with various fortune, was carried on until the peace of 1763, and the reduction of the provinces to the dominion of Great Britain.

We have been at some pains to examine the huge folios of Muster Rolls, relating to this war, which are deposited in the State House, at Boston; and though our gleanings from this source are not very extensive, and may not embrace the names of all who enlisted from Hanover, yet such as they are, we present them as an attempt towards collecting facts, which, owing to the want of more thorough information, can only be regarded as an approximation to the truth.

In 1755, preparations were made for dislodging the French from Nova Scotia; and the Massachusetts forces, formed into a regiment of two battalions, of which Gov. Shirley was the Colonel, were commanded by Lt. Col. John Winslow, of Marshfield, who raised 2000 men, for one year, or longer, if required.<sup>2</sup> The French Neutrals were taken prisoners in this expedition, and torn from their country, and sent into banishment, being scattered over Massachusetts, and other provinces. In all, 1923 suffered this fate; viz: 483 men, and 337 women, heads of families, and their sons and daughters, 527 of the former, and 576 of the latter. Their stock was upwards of 5000 horned cattle, 493 horses, and 12,887 sheep and swine.<sup>3</sup>

The history of this unfortunate race, is one of melancholy interest, but we cannot pursue it to any extent. In Abington, there were a few settled, and in other towns of Plymouth county. We have heard of one or more in Hanover, who settled somewhere on Broadway, but cannot give their names.

The following notices of enlistments from Hanover, during the progress of this war, are all we have been able to find. A few of the names given, were residents of Scituate, referred to in other places of this work.

In 1755, Col Ezekiel Turner served in the expedition to Crown

In 1762, the town was divided into two districts, and a military company was raised in each district. Of the North Company, David Stockbridge, was Captain; Joseph Cushing, 1st Lieutenant; John Bailey, Jr., 2nd Lieutenant; and David Jacobs, Ensign. Of the South Company, Joseph Josselynn, was Captain; Simeon Curtis, 1st Lieutenant; Joseph House, 2d Lieutenant; and John Josselynn, Ensign. Of the Division to which these companies belonged, David Stockbridge, was Lieutenant Colonel, and Joseph Josselynn, was Major. Robert L. Eells was second Quarter Master in the Troop of Horse.

These men were of Scituate, though their names occur on the Hanover Records; and at a subsequent date, or after the close of the war, some of them resided in the town.

1774, November 21. Paid Capt. John Bailey for four quarter barrels of Powder, £9 8s.

These are all the minutes which occur previous to the Revolution. Of the incidents of this war, we shall make a separate Chapter; as also of the War of 1812, in which we shall include a sketch of the Hanover Artillery Company.

The story of the Revolution, will ever be read with interest by the citizens of this growing republic. The simple recital of our father's wrongs; of their peaceful remonstrance against those wrongs, until forbearance ceased longer to be a virtue; of their calm deliberation upon the course next to be pursued; of their reluctant, but firm conviction, that an appeal to arms was their only alternative; of their solemn consecration of their lives, and fortunes, and sacred honor, upon the altar of liberty; and of their accompanying deeds of heroism, until their INDEPENDENCE was acknowledged; if these events, which, viewed in their broadest light, are calculated to make every heart glow, ever become to us as a "thrice told tale," or cease to arouse us to emulate their virtues, then may we be assured that the day of our downfall is approaching, and that we are becoming unworthy of the continued enjoyment of those inestimable blessings, now so freely and widely diffused throughout our land.

In a work like the present, however, which is local in its character, it will not be expected that we should give an extended notice of these events. We shall confine ourselves to the part which the citizens of Hanover took in the great drama then performed, only giving such general details, as may serve to render our sketch intelligible, and complete.

The principal causes which led to the War of the Revolution, were the adoption of measures, and the enactment of laws, by the Parliament of the mother country, which were deemed oppressive in their character, and an invasion of the rights of the people of the colonies.

Indeed, quite early in the history of our country, we find the right of England to Legislate for the colonies, questioned by many. We could bring abundant proofs to sustain this position, were it necessary. Not only do the laws of Plymouth and Massachusetts show this, but the writings of the most eminent men of those days, furnish clear and decisive evidence of the fact.<sup>1</sup> Hence when, in the reign of George the II, an act of Parliament was passed, imposing a duty on sugars, &c., which, in the reign of George the III, in 1764, was continued and enforced, and the duty increased, and an impost also laid on molasses, brought to the colonies from any other than British plantations in the West Indies, and the jurisdiction of vice-admiralty courts was enlarged, by which the people were deprived of trial by juries, in all cases relating to revenue arising from these duties, and made liable to unreasonable and oppressive suits; — these acts were all resisted, and all tended to foster a feeling of injury, and a spirit of resentment, among the people.

But the famous Stamp Act, passed in 1765, awakened the most general indignation; and as soon as it arrived at Boston, the bells were muffled, and rung a funeral peal, and the act itself was hawked about the streets, with a Death's head affixed to it, and styled the Folly of England, and the ruin of America, and afterwards publicly burnt by the enraged populace;<sup>2</sup> and throughout the province, meetings were held, and the act denounced. The new act of 1768, imposing a duty on tea, papers, painters' colors, and glass, caused, if possible, a ferment greater than that caused by the Stamp Act; and so thoroughly were the people aroused, that it was finally resolved to call a Convention, to meet in Boston, September 21, "to consult upon measures for the safety of the Province." Delegates to this Convention were sent from a large number of towns. Hanover deputed Joseph Cushing, Esq., to act as its Representative; a gentleman who had been long and favorably known to his townsmen, and who was distinguished for his unbending integrity, and affable deportment; — who afterwards held an honorable rank in the Conventions of the County, and the Congresses of the Province; and who, at a still later period, when peace had been declared, and order restored to our disturbed civil institutions, as a token of gratitude, and esteem for his services, was elevated to the office of Judge of Probate for the County of Plymouth, and received a military commission, with the rank of Brigadier General.

But the oppressions of England did not cease with the Act of 1768. Farther encroachments were made upon the rights of the Colonies; and the public mind was kept in a constant state of feverish excitement; until, all over the land, the necessity for an appeal to arms was beginning to be felt, and even to be advocated, by the most bold and resolute. Monday, September 26, 1774, a meeting of delegates from every town in Plymouth County, was held at Plympton, and by adjournment, at the court house in Plymouth, on Tuesday the 27th; and Hanover sent as its Representatives, Capt. Joseph Cushing, Joseph Ramsdell, Joshua Simmons, Capt. Robert L. Fells, and Dr. Lemuel Cushing; and the first named gentleman was chosen one of the committee of nine, to prepare an address expressive of their feelings in view of the aggressions of the British Government. The proceedings of this Convention are given in full in the Journal of the Provincial Congress, pp. 621-625, but are too long to be inserted here.

On the 7th, of October 1774, the First Provincial Congress was convened at Salem; on the 11th, at Concord; on the 17th, at Cambridge, and again at Cambridge, November 23d, and dissolved, December 10th. The Second Congress was convened at Cambridge, February 1, 1775; at Concord, March 22d, and April 22d; and at Watertown April 22d, and dissolved May 29th. The Third Congress convened at Watertown, Wednesday, May 31st, 1775, and was dissolved Wednesday, July 19th, 1775.

To all these, Col. Cushing, as he is called on the Journals, was sent as a delegate from Hanover, and in all he took an active and prominent part. We could enumerate many instances, in which he was appointed on important committees; and that his services were held in the highest esteem, may be inferred from the fact that his associates were ever ready to assign to him new trusts.<sup>1</sup>

During the session of the First Congress, the importance of the improvement of the militia was urged, and the several towns and districts in the colony were advised "to see that each of the minute men not already provided therewith, should be immediately equipped with an effective fire-arm, bayonet, pouch, knapsack, and thirty rounds of cartridge and balls, and be disciplined three times a week, and oftener as opportunity may offer;" and in the Second Congress, where any deficiency in arms or accoutrements was found, the Selectmen were instructed to supply the same "out of the town stock, and in case of a deficiency there, to apply to such inhabitants as can best spare their arms or accoutrements, and to borrow or purchase the same for the use of the inhabitants so enlisting;"<sup>2</sup>

In accordance with these votes, companies of minute men were formed in all the towns in the province,—indeed this work had commenced as early as 1773,—and these companies furnished efficient aid in procuring recruits for the Army, communicating intelligence on sudden emergencies, and forwarding the war. According to Col. J. B. Barstow, Hanover was divided into two districts, by the road running from the North River bridge past the Four Corners, to what is now Hanover Street, and thence to the Meeting House, and on West to the Drinkwater Forge, and to Abington. The inhabitants of the Southerly part of the town were in one district, and the company formed here was commanded by Colonel, then Capt. Amos Turner, and Lt. Samuel Barstow; and those to the North, were in the Second District, and their Company was commanded by Capt. Joseph Soper, and probably Lt. Lemuel Curtis. In the County, a regiment was formed of companies of minute men, and Theophilus Cotton, of Plymouth, was chosen Colonel; Ichabod Allen, of Duxbury, Lt. Colonel; and Ebenezer Sprout, of Middleboro', Major.<sup>1</sup> January 16, 1775, The town procured a stock of thirty-five fire arms, as a public supply, to be furnished to those who had not the means, or were not able to provide for themselves.

One of the earliest acts of the Provincial Congress was to provide funds for the expenses of Government, and the conduct of the war. Harrison Gray, Esq., was the treasurer appointed by the old authorities; but as funds in his hands were not available to the public, the Congress advised all constables and collectors of taxes "who have or shall have any money in their hands collected on province assessments," not to pay the same to Mr. Gray, but to retain them in their own hands until otherwise instructed; and they soon made choice of Henry Gardner, Esq., as Treasurer, and directed all monies to be paid to him.<sup>2</sup> Accordingly the town of Hanover, having voted, Jan. 16, 1775, to raise £43 15s. 2d. "for purposes of defence," instructed Israel Perry, collector for 1773-4, to pay over the same to Mr. Gardner, "with the remainder of the Province tax in his bills not then collected," and agreed to "indemnify and hold him harmless in so doing."

Another of these preliminary steps, was the appointment of Committees of Correspondence and Safety; and the committee of Hanover, for the year 1775, consisted of David Jacobs, Lieut. Whiting, Joshua Simmons, Abner Curtis, Ezra Briggs, Dr. Cushing, Seth Bates, Lemuel Curtis, Capt. Curtis, Capt. Eells, Joseph Ramsdell, Amos Turner, Michael Silvester, Lieut. Barstow, Bezaleel Curtis, Benjamin Bass, Israel Perry, Benjamin Studley, John House, jr., and Seth Josselynn; and they were instructed "to see that the resolves of the Continental Congress relative to trade, &c., are strictly adhered to."

By the operation of the Boston Port Bill, the inhabitants of that town were thrown into great distress, and provisions for their relief were made, not only throughout Massachusetts, but in several of the other Colonies. In Hanover, Dea. Barstow, and Thomas Rose, were chosen to receive donations, and forward them to the proper authorities, to be distributed.

In the winter of 1774, the tories of Massachusetts, were active in forwarding their schemes; and the Hon. Timothy Ruggles, of Hardwick, one of the most conspicuous, drew up a document, called the Ruggles Covenant, intended for the signature of all favorable to the royalist cause. This paper found its way to Hanover, and suspicions of its presence being entertained, the town instructed the Committee of Correspondence, "to inquire into the ground and foundation of a report that a covenant called the Ruggles Covenant is signed and circulated among some of the inhabitants." This incendiary document is given at large on the Journals of the Provincial Congress, p. 68.

It will hardly be necessary to say that such a compact found but few signers in Hanover. Indeed, in a town so loyal to freedom, tories were rare. When, in 1777, Israel Perry was chosen to collect "the evidence relative to those persons supposed to be inimical to their country," after the most diligent search, he reported but seven names, and these were either peaceable members of the Society of Friends, whose principles caused them to look upon all war as wrong, or members of the Episcopal Church, who, from that fact alone, were supposed to be friendly to the King. The names reported were Charles Bailey, Peleg Ewell, Mordecai Ellis John Bailey 3d., Joseph Donnell, and William and Jane Stockbridge.

All who did favor the royalists, were everywhere treated with a severity proportioned to the magnitude of their offence. They were ingloriously tipped from the cart's tail, and commanded forthwith to depart from the limits of the town, under the threat of heavier penalties, should they dare to appear within its borders again. Of all crimes, that of aiding and abetting the enemies of America, was most heartily despised, and treated with the sternest rebuke.

Previous to the commencement of the hostilities of the 19th of April, 1775, which may be regarded as the opening scene of the war of the Revolution, there were found, in Marshfield, a large number of friends of England, and signers of the Ruggles Covenant; and these, as appears by a letter dated Jan. 26, 1775, sent an express to Gen. Gage, acquainting him with their situation, and begging support.<sup>1</sup> This led to the forwarding of a body of one hundred troops, under the command of Capt. Balfour, and three subalterns, with two field pieces, and three hundred stands of arms, to be put into the hands of the loyalists. The troops were detached on board two small vessels, and landed quietly, and without disturbance. But the presence of such a body of men could not fail to be attended with some murmurings, and dissatisfaction, on the part of the people of the adjoining towns, although the signers of the covenant made their boast that "every faithful subject to his King dare fully utter his thoughts, and drink his tea, and kill his sheep as profusely as he pleases."<sup>2</sup>

Accordingly, in the Boston Evening Post, of Feb. 27, 1775, there was published an address to Gen. Gage, signed by the selectmen of Plymouth, Kingston, Duxbury, Pembroke, Hanover, and Seitate, protesting against the course he had pursued, in which, after declaring that the fears and intimidations of the people of Marshfield were entirely groundless, they proceed to say, "It appears as evident as if written with a sunbeam, from the general tenor of the testimony, which we are willing to lay before your excellency, if desired, that their expressions of fear, were a fallacious pretext, dictated by the inveterate enemies of our constitution, to induce your excellency to send troops into our country, to augment the difficulties of our situation, already very distressing; and what confirms this truth, if it needs any confirmation, is, the assiduity and pains which we have taken to investigate it. We have industriously scrutinized into the cause of this alarm, and cannot find that it has the least foundation in reality."<sup>3</sup>

The Congress, on the reception of the above—a copy of which was forwarded to them — passed a vote highly approving the vigilance of the selectmen and committees of correspondence of the towns named in the address, and recommended to them "steadily to persevere in the same line of conduct, which has, in this instance, so justly entitled them to the esteem of their fellow countrymen, and to keep a watchful eye upon the behavior of those who are aiming at the destruction of our liberties." <sup>1</sup>

The troops under Balfour, however, did not remain long in the county. On the 21st of April they departed, as they came,—in their hurry leaving behind them most of their camp equipage and stores,—and being engaged in the battle at Bunker Hill, on the 17th of June, all but their commander, and five of the soldiers, perished, although they entered the field "with as fine a company as was in his Majesty's service." <sup>2</sup>

Before their departure, the military companies in the vicinity were on the alert, and were contemplating an attack. Col. John Bailey ordered his troops to march to the spot, but they did not arrive until the enemy had left. Mr. Jabez Studley was among the soldiers engaged in this expedition, according to his son, the present Mr. Jabez Studley, of Hanover.

We have now reached that period when actual hostilities commenced, and the struggle for liberty, at the point of the bayonet, began in earnest.

April 8, 1775. The Provincial Congress resolved "that the present dangers, and alarming situation of our public affairs, renders it necessary for this colony to make preparations for their security and defence, by raising and establishing an army." <sup>3</sup> This army, as appears by a subsequent report, was raised, and consisted of twenty-two regiments complete, of ten companies each, containing sixty men; and three regiments incomplete. But all the privates were not properly equipped, and of military stores, of some descriptions, the supply was very small. <sup>4</sup> John Bailey, of Hanover, was Lieut. Col. in the regiment of Gen. Thomas.

On the first of May, 1775, or about two weeks after the battle of Lexington, according to Winsor, four companies were ordered to Plymouth "to guard the sea-coast," where they were stationed until the first of September. <sup>5</sup> Of this order I find no record ; but on the first of July, a memorial having been presented from Plymouth, stating that the people in that neighborhood were "in danger of being attacked by the enemy," it was resolved by the Congress "that General Ward be and hereby is directed, immediately to issue his orders that two full Companies from Col. Cotton's regiment, under proper officers, march without delay, to Plymouth, and there remain for the guard and defence of the inhabitants, until they can be relieved by such Companies as are to be raised for the defence and protection of the sea-coast, and to be stationed there for that purpose."<sup>1</sup>

Among those who thus guarded the sea-coast, "Samuel Eells and others" are spoken of, on the records of the town, and Oct. 30th, there was paid to him, and to Nathaniel Torrey, for their services, £1 12s. 8d. ; and in the "Pay Roll of the Company stationed on the sea-coast in the Massachusetts service till the last of December, 1775, occur the names of "Samuel Eells, jr., Fifer ; and Eliab Studley, Benjamin Studley, Ezra Briggs, Solomon Bates, Jabez Studley, Henchman Silvester, Clement Bates, and Seth Curtis, Privates," — all of whom were citizens of Hanover.<sup>2</sup>

On the third of July, 1775, General Washington, by appointment of the Continental Congress of June 14th, took command of the American troops in the vicinity of Boston, which were then estimated at 15,000. Of these, more than 9,000 belonged to Massachusetts, — the rest having been furnished by Connecticut, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island.<sup>3</sup>

These troops were in a comparatively undisciplined state, and almost destitute of clothing, and ammunition. But a few days after Washington's arrival, the alarming discovery was made, that the actual quantity of powder on hand, was not more than sufficient to furnish each man with nine cartridges.<sup>4</sup> The main body of the British army, at this time, under the immediate command of Gen. Howe, was entrenching itself strongly on Bunker Hill. Three floating batteries lay in Mystic river, near the camp, and a twenty gun ship below the ferry, between Boston and Charlestown. A strong battery on the Boston side of the water, on Copp's hill, served to cover and strengthen the post on Bunker Hill. Another division was entrenched on the Neck. The light horse, and a small body of infantry, were stationed in Boston. The American army lay on both sides of Charles river. The right occupied the high grounds about Roxbury; whence it extended towards Dorchester; and the left was covered by Mystic or Medford river, a space of at least twelve miles. A change was afterwards made in the position of the American troops, and Washington himself took up his head quarters at Cambridge.<sup>1</sup> A rigorous blockade was thus kept up over the British army, and Boston itself was in a state of siege, and so continued until the spring of 1776.

1776. The Committee of Safety for this year consisted of Joseph Cushing, Joshua Simmons, Capt. Robert L. Eells, Joseph Ramsdell, Lemuel Curtis, David Jacobs, Benjamin Bass, Benjamin Studley, Capt. Amos Turner, Capt. Joseph Soper, Samuel Barslow, jr., Michael Silvester, Calvin Curtis, Lt. John Hatch, Ezra Briggs, Seth Stetson, John Curtis, jr., Joshua Barstow, and Thos. Whiting.

Feb. 12, 1776. Capt. Nathaniel Winslow's Company marched to Roxbury, and other troops from Hanover had joined the army at that place, in preparation for the contemplated attempt to dislodge the British army from Boston. This was in accordance with a resolution of the Provincial Congress of the previous January, "that a vigorous attempt ought to be made on the ministerial troops in Boston, before they can be reinforced in the spring; and that thirteen regiments of militia should be asked for from Massachusetts and the neighboring colonies, in order to put the army in a condition to make the attempt."<sup>2</sup> To effect this object, it was determined that entrenchments should be thrown up on Dorchester heights; and Major General Thomas had the command of the troops detached for this arduous service; and Col. John Bailey, and the troops from Hanover were among the number. They passed from the camp at Roxbury, to the place of their destination, with great caution, under cover of the night; and when the light of day exposed them to the view of the British in Boston, they had thrown up a sufficient breastwork for protection and security in prosecuting the object of their enterprise.<sup>1</sup> Gen. Howe, in order to frustrate the intentions of the Americans, sent a picked body of 3,000 men, commanded by Lord Percy, to assault the works which had been thus commenced; and they embarked, and fell down to the castle, to proceed to the intended scene of action, but were scattered by a furious storm, which disabled them from immediately prosecuting the enterprise, and before they could be again in readiness for the attack, the works were made so strong, that the attempt to storm them was thought unadvisable, and the evacuation of the town soon afterward took place.<sup>2</sup>

A part of the glory of this enterprise belongs to Hanover; and among those who were thus engaged, from the Pay Roll of Capt. Nathaniel Winslow's company, which marched for Roxbury Feb. 12, 1776, we gather the names of Benjamin Studley, 1st Lieut.; Joseph House, 2d Lieut.; Timothy Rose, Sergeant; David Torrey, Drummer; and Stephen Torrey, Job Tilden, Robert White, Elijah Silvester, Elisha Palmer, Seth House, Samuel Eells, Samuel Gross, Nathaniel Torrey, Jonathan Pratt, Benjamin Bates, Joseph Bates, Benjamin Silvester, Adam Perry, James Whiting, Nathaniel Josselynn, Seth Bates, Nathaniel Stetson, Isaac Turner, Seth Bates, Jr., Joseph Brooks, Gideon Studley, Benjamin White, James Torrey, Benjamin Stetson, Laban Rose, and Ebenezer Eddy, Privates.<sup>3</sup> Tradition says that Clement Bates was also at Dorchester heights, and aided in filling with sand, the barrels which were to be used for the defence of the breastwork. As all Col. Cotton's regiment, which had been stationed at Plymouth, moved to Roxbury, and formed part of the detachment which threw up these entrenchments,<sup>4</sup> there were probably other citizens of Hanover engaged in the enterprise, but the foregoing are all the names we are able to give authentically.

In March, 1776, there was an alarm of "danger at Cohasset," probably arising from the British vessels which were hovering upon the coast, and troops were ordered to the spot to aid in its defence. From Hanover, the whole company under the command of Capt. Lemuel Curtis was detached; and in the Pay Roll of the same, which was sworn to before Joseph Cushing, Esq., Jan. 20, 1777,<sup>1</sup> occur the names of Lemuel Curtis, Captain; John Hatch, 1st Lieut.; Abner Curtis, 2d Lieut.; Calvin Curtis, Michael Silvester, James Curtis, and Israel Perry, Sergeants; and Elijah Curtis, Jabez Studley, Joseph Curtis, Prince Curtis, Thomas Hatch, David House, Snow Curtis, Joshua Dwelley Jesse Curtis, John Totman, Eliab Studley, Marlboro' Turner, Joseph Randall, Abel Curtis, Seth Bailey, Ezra Briggs, Elisha Simmons, Abner Curtis, jr., Robert Corthrell, Gershom Curtis, Job Curtis, Isaac Hatch, Simeon Curtis, Seth Curtis, William Gilbert, Elijah Stetson, Melzar Curtis, Ebenezer Curtis, Job Barstow, Solomon Bryant, Benjamin Bass, Seth Josselynn, Lemuel Bates, and Gamaliel Bates.

Whilst these events were transpiring, the Continental Congress was in session, and the declaration of Independence was under discussion; and June 20, at a meeting in Hanover "held to take into consideration a resolve of the Honorable House of Representatives of the Massachusetts Bay, relative to advising the person or persons chosen to represent them in the General Court, whether, if the Honorable American Congress should for the safety of the American Colonies, declare them Independent of the Kingdom of Great Britain, they the said inhabitants, will solemnly engage, with their lives and fortunes, to support them in the measure, Voted, to instruct their Representative, that if said Congress, should think it safest to declare them Independent of the Kingdom of Great Britain, they the inhabitants will support them in the measure."

During the summer of 1773, the soldiers from Hanover were mostly stationed in the vicinity of Boston, and fortifications were erected at Noddle's island, and at other places in the harbor; twenty British vessels were driven from the coast; and two regiments, and the battalion of artillery were kept in the service of the province throughout the season.<sup>2</sup>

The references to the enlistments from Hanover, during this period, are quite numerous. In the Pay Roll of Capt. Nathaniel Winslow's Company, in Col. Whitney's Regiment, for one month's advance pay, &c.,<sup>1</sup> are the names of Calvin Curtis, 2d Lieut.; Joseph Curtis, Corporal; and Stephen Torrey, Sergeant. The same men were paid for services in August and November, 1776,<sup>2</sup> and Clement Bates was in their company.

In the Rolls for September and October, besides the foregoing, are the names of Abner Dwelley, Abner Curtis, Seth Bates, Joel Silvester, Nathaniel Torrey, Isaac Turner, Samuel Eells, Edward Ramsdell, Benjamin Studley, Elijah Silvester, and Reuben Curtis.<sup>3</sup>

In the roll of Capt. Stetson's Company, in Col. Dike's Regiment, for three months service, are the names of Benjamin Studley, 1st Lieut.; Solomon Bates, Corporal; and Benjamin Studley, Jr., Warren Torrey, Amos Berry, Cornelius Silvester, and Seth Bates; and in the pay roll of Capt. Stetson's Company, for three months, to Nov. 1776, are the additional names of James Whiting, Stephen Randall, Dowty Bates, Thomas Gross, Francis Josselynn, and Adam Perry.<sup>4</sup>

On the town records, under date of Oct. 1, 1776, five men are spoken of, as having been engaged for the expedition to Ticonderoga this year, and £13 bounty per man was voted them. Fifteen men were also hired to go to New York to reinforce the Continental Army, and a bounty of £5 15s. was voted to each. Sixteen men also went to Rhode Island for two months, to whom a bounty of 20s. each per month, was voted: and a like bounty to fifteen men who went to Bristol for three months.

Of the first named expedition,—that to Ticonderoga,—the only record I find, is in the "Pay Roll of Capt. Christopher Bannister's Company, which went to Ticonderoga for two months and seven days," where may be found the names of David Studley, Corporal, and Abner Dwelley, Private.

The names of the fifteen, who went to New York, I have not been able to learn.

Of the sixteen, who went to Rhode Island for 2 months, and the

In March of this year, the town's quota of every seventh man was called for, and it was voted to give those that enlisted £14 each, in addition to the Continental and State bounties; and a committee of twenty was chosen, to hire the money and the men. This measure, of offering bounty to soldiers, was adopted at the urgent solicitation of Washington, and was deemed by him of great importance, to encourage enlistments, and to secure their permanence.<sup>1</sup>

In the early part of this year, there was another expedition to R. I. ; and in the muster roll of Capt. Amos Turner's company, are the names of<sup>2</sup> Amos Turner, captain ; Reuben Rose, lieutenant ; William Eells, sergeant ; Leonard Hill, corporal ; and Ezra Briggs, Elisha House, John Hatch, John Bates, Solomon Bryant, Samuel Brooks, Samuel Eells, Jr., Luther Torrey, Shuble Munroe, Jr., Joseph Robbins, Samuel Torrey, Melzar Stoddard, Reuben Curtis, and Henry Dillingham, privates. Of this number, Shuble Munroe died in Hanover, in 1851, at the age of 90.

In Hayward Pierce's company, which marched on a secret expedition to Tiverton, in Rhode Island, occur the names of<sup>3</sup> William Curtis, sergeant ; Laban Rose, corporal ; and Simeon Curtis, Elijah Sylvester, Joshua Dwelley, James Barstow, Elisha Stetson, Elisha Simmons, Seth Curtis, Jr., Jesse Curtis, Elijah Curtis, Samuel Brooks, Joseph Brooks, Seth Curtis, Elisha Silvester, Elisha Palmer, Lemuel Bates, Seth Bates, Nathaniel Joselynn, Nathaniel Torrey, Isaac Stetson, James Whiting, Joseph Nickerson, Josiah Mann, Elijah Gilbert, Zachariah Lambert, Benjamin Bowker, Japhet Crooker, Josiah Damon, Nathaniel Magoun, and others.

In the pay roll of the four independent companies, stationed at Hull, March 1, 1777, are the names of Caleb Silvester, sergeant ; and Henchman Silvester, Levi Mann, Joshua Mann, and Cuffy Tilden, privates.<sup>4</sup>

In the roll of bounty due Capt. Seth Stower's company, in 1777, are Calvin Curtis, Luther Robbins, Elisha Curtis, Reuben Curtis, Cornelius Silvester, and Ezra Briggs.<sup>5</sup>

There were doubtless others out during this year, but the names given, are all we have found.

Oct. 20, 1777, £490 were voted for the pay of the soldiers already enlisted ; and it was voted to purchase 105 lbs. of powder for a town's stock, "if it can be had for 5s. per lb." A committee of three was also chosen, agreeable to the orders of the Provincial Congress, to supply the families of soldiers absent on service.

The operations for 1778, were quite extensive. Jan. 26, a new quota was called for, and arrangements were made to obtain the men. April 6. £200 were voted to supply the soldiers' families.

A quota of shirts being called for, to supply the army, the town voted that the selectmen should purchase the same, also the "shoes and stockings called for by the Hon. Court of this State, as cheap as they can"; which was accordingly done, and the supply forwarded.

In April, meetings were held throughout the State, to act upon the draft of the CONSTITUTION which had been prepared; but this draft was so objectionable, that few towns voted in its favor. In Hanover, a committee of fifteen was chosen to take the subject into consideration, and report; and at a meeting held June 8, at which seventy-three persons were present, they "voted the plan null and void to a man."

The enlistments for this year were as follows:—The Records of the town speak of eleven men, as engaged April 11, to whom a bounty of £27 each per month was voted; of men who went to Hull the 3d of March last, to whom £88 bounty were voted; of sixteen men raised, June 22, to guard the New England States, to whom it was voted to give £15 each, per month, in addition to the State's pay,—these being for the secret expedition to Rhode Island;—of eleven men raised June 29th, for six months, "to join General Sullivan at Providence," to whom $4 per day were voted, "with the publick's pay"; and October 26th, the sum of £3317 12s. 6d. was voted, "to pay the men that are and have been raised since October last, in the different services of the Commonwealth."

From the Revolutionary Rolls, we gather the following particulars, relating to the service this year. In the "Pay Roll of Captain Calvin Curtis' company, in Colonel John Jacobs Regiment, of Massachusetts, from Jan. 1, 1778, to Jan. 1, 1779,"<sup>1</sup> are the following Hanover names, viz: Calvin Curtis, captain; and

Jabez Studley, Clement Bates, Neal Bates, Nathaniel Josselynn, and Abner Studley, privates. In the "Pay Roll of Captain Abraham Washburn's company, which did duty near Boston, six months, from July 1, 1778,"<sup>1</sup> are the names of Caleb Silvester, Seth Perry, Henchman Silvester, Thomas Torrey, Abner Curtis, Elijah Turner, John Turner, Asa Turner, and Job Curtis.

In the "Pay Roll of Capt. Ichabod Bonney's company, that did duty on Castle Island, agreeable to an order of Sept 7, 1778, discharged Dec. 11, and allowed four days to return home,"<sup>2</sup> are the names of Nathaniel Chamberlin, sergeant; Isaac Turner, corporal; Joseph Barstow, fifer; and Albert Smith, Elijah Silvester, Caleb Rogers, Luther Robbins, Nathaniel Torrey, Benjamin Studley, Job Curtis, Samuel Garnet, Josiah Mann, and John Bosworth, privates.

In Capt. Joseph Clift's company, in Col. Whitney's regiment, which went to Rhode Island, in July 1778,<sup>3</sup> occur the names of Joshua Dwelley, lieutenant; Snow Curtis, sergeant; and Benjamin Studley, Simeon Curtis, Job Tilden, Seth Curtis, Lemuel Bates, Jacob Silvester, Luther Robbins, Seth Bates, Job Barstow and Eells Damon, privates.

In the Pay Roll of Capt. John Turner's company, in Colonel Eleazer Brook's regiment, which was at Cambridge, from Feb. 8, to April 4, 1778,<sup>4</sup> are the names of Asa Whiting, Benjamin Bates, Seth Bates, Jonathan Pratt, Simeon Curtis, James Whiting, Henry Perry, Samuel Ramsdell, and Job Silvester. The same names are on the Rolls from Feb. 18, 1777, to June 2, 1777.

In the Rolls for eight months service in 1778<sup>5</sup> are the names of Calvin Curtis, captain; and Reuben Rose, lieutenant.

Finally, in the Muster Roll of Militia to serve in Gate's regiment, until January 1, 1779,<sup>6</sup> are the names of Amos Turner, and Joseph Soper, captains; and Nathaniel Josselynn, jr., Abner Studley, Joseph Neal Bates, Clement Bates, and Jabez Studley, privates.

On the Town Records, the names of the eleven men, raised April 12, are thus given:—Joseph Turner, Solomon Bryant, Gershom Curtis, Elijah Stetson, William W. Eells, Lot Ramsdell, 1779. The Committee of Correspondence for this year, consisted of Joseph Cushing, Esq., Benjamin Studley, John Curtis, Samuel Stetson, Timothy Robbins, John Hatch, Prince Stetson, and Marlboro' Turner. On the 9th of August, the Town voted to "stand by the doings of the State Convention that met at Concord, July 14;" and Joseph Cushing, Esq., was chosen, to "meet at Cambridge the 1st of September next, to draw a form of Government." On the 30th of August, the town voted to "stand by the report of the County Committee for two weeks;" and Sept. 13, it was voted "to abide by the regulations of the County Committee until further orders." The convention alluded to in the last two votes, was held at Mr. Caleb Loring's, in Plympton, Aug. 24.<sup>1</sup> The references to enlistments for this year, on the town records, are the following: March 23.—A committee was appointed to settle "with the eight and nine months' men, that went to the North River." July 5.—"Three men were raised for an expedition of nine months to Springfield, and £3 per month, in the old way, and the Continental wages," were voted them. Sept. 20.—"Five men" were raised for "two months, to go to Rhode Island, and £50 per man, were voted them." Oct. 4.—The officers of the companies in the town were instructed to hire two men "to go to Rhode Island, the first of January." Oct. 19.—"Voted to pay the four men that went to North River, and the three that went to Rhode Island."

From the Revolutionary Rolls, our gleanings for this year are but few. In the "Pay Roll of Lieut. Abner Dwelley's company, in an expedition to Manchester, in the Northern Department,"<sup>2</sup> are the names of Abner Dwelley, lieutenant; and John Skiffe, sergeant. In the "Abstract of pay due Captain Calvin Curtis' company, &c., July, 1779,"<sup>3</sup> for two months after arrival in camp, &c., are the names of Calvin Curtis, captain; Reuben Curtis, corporal; and Leonard Hill, Jabez Studley, and Joshua Palmer, privates.

It is to be regretted, that the names of all who served in the army, were not entered on the records of the town. Had this course been adopted, it would have been easy to ascertain who were out, and the time they were absent. But to the confusion incident to the general disturbance of the ordinary functions of government, we are to attribute this neglect; and when we consider the highly excited state of the public mind, and the anxiety which prevailed as to the result of the war, we should be thankful for the few items we may be able to glean.

1780. Committee of Correspondence: Joseph Cushing, Esq., Calvin Curtis, Joseph Soper, jr., Israel Perry, Benjamin Bass. David Jacobs, John Hatch, Robert L. Eells, and Snow Curtis.

March 9. Voted, to give the five men that went to Rhode Island, last Fall, for two months, £189, each.

April 10. £5,000 were raised for the use of the town, and the pay of soldiers.

June 16. A meeting held, to raise fifteen men for six months, to go to Springfield, and a Committee was chosen to engage them.

June 26. "Agreed to give the soldiers thirty silver dollars, per month, and the Continent's pay."

June 27. £1,000, hard money, voted, to pay the six months' men with; and a Committee chosen, to settle with the three men that went to North River, last Summer.

July 3. Voted, to give the three months' men, being eighteen in number, "one silver dollar, or one bushel of corn, per day, which ever they may choose." July 6. Voted, the eighteen men, called for June 22, the same that the six months' men had."

July 21. £500, in silver, raised to pay the soldiers with.

Oct. 23. A meeting held, to get a quantity of beef, for the use of the State; and it was voted to raise $35,320, to purchase the same.

Oct. 30. £3,160, voted, "to supply the soldier's families."

A glance at the foregoing votes, shows the confusion and distress which prevailed at this period.

The war had lasted over four years. The private business of the soldiers had been neglected. And though their families were comfortably supported, yet the prospect for the future was gloomy and threatening.

It was the country's dark hour. The currency was depreciated. The army was suffering. The most sanguine were becoming discouraged. Had it not been for the noble generosity of a few, and the determined energy of George Washington, the Commander-in-Chief, all would have been lost. Enlistments proceeded slowly. Patriotism, if not flagging, was beginning to despair. But, by desperate efforts, by earnest entreaties, and by liberal promises, the army was recruited, funds were procured, and the movements of the troops successfully conducted.

It is probable, that many of the soldiers named in the foregoing lists, served in the army this year, and, perhaps, to the close of the war. The policy of three years' enlistments had been adopted; and many were entered "during the war." Our extracts from the Rolls, for this year, are few.

In the Pay Roll of Capt. Amos Turner's Company, in Col. John Jacobs' Regiment,<sup>1</sup> &c., are the names of Amos Turner, Captain; Benjamin Stetson, first Lieutenant; Luther Robbins, Sergeant; and Amos Berry, Levi Bates, Job Tilden, Dowty Bates, Theophilus Witherell, Benjamin Bates, jr., Nathaniel Barstow, James Woodward, Elisha Palmer, and Samuel Baldwin, Privates.

1781, Jan. 8. A meeting held to raise eighteen men, for three years, or during the war, and a Committee chosen "to petition the General Court to lessen the number called for from this town." The sum of $100, in hard money, was voted to each man that shall engage, and Capt. Luther Bailey was directed "to get the men, if he could, for that encouragement."

March 5. Men raised for Rhode Island, for forty days. Committee of Safety: Capt. Joseph Soper, John Hatch, David Jacobs, Benjamin Studley, Timothy Rose, Jesse Curtis, Thomas Whiting, jr., Seth Bailey, Abner Curtis, Marlboro' Turner, John Stetson, Joseph Brooks, and Simeon Curtis.

July 9. A meeting held to raise two men, for Rhode Island, for five months, and a bounty of five shillings per day was voted to each, with a like allowance for every twenty miles' travel home, when discharged, — the same to be paid in silver money.

July 30. Voted, to raise £116. 7s., in silver, for the purchase of beef, and a Committee having reported that beef could be had for four pence per pound, it was voted, "that all those that turn in four silver dollars to the Committee, be allowed one hundred pounds of beef for the same."

August 8. Men raised for West Point, for three months, and six shillings per day were voted them, and ten dollars each, before marching.

The only entry I have found on the Revolutionary Rolls, for this year, is the following :

In the Pay Roll of Capt. Joseph Soper's Company, in Col. Theophilus Cotton's Regiment, for service done in the State of Rhode Island, in March, 1781,<sup>1</sup> are the names of Joseph Soper, Captain; John Hatch, and Michael Silvester, Lieutenants; Comfort Bates, Sergeant; Neal Bates, and Josiah Chamberlain, Corporals; Reuben Curtis, Drummer; Joseph Turner, Fifer; and Samuel Perry, Nathaniel Clarke, Cornelius Turner, Benjamin Bates, Jabez Studley, Ezra Briggs, Clement Bates, Gershom Curtis, Benjamin Bates, jr., and Edmund Silvester, Privates.

In the foregoing sketch, we do not claim to have presented the names of all who enlisted in the war from Hanover. We have, however, given as full a list as our means permitted. And what we have furnished, is sufficient to show, that the citizens of this town failed not of their duty in the great struggle for freedom, but performed their part with fidelity and zeal.

Our limits do not allow us to enter more at large into the general details of the war; neither can we narrate all the incidents of a traditionary character, which exist in the town. Many of these are of interest; but the fund of anecdotes already in existence, and published to the world, is such as not to require enlargement by us.

Of the incidents subsequent to the war, we have but little to say. In 1784, a Committee of nine was chosen to consider the offer of five years pay to the officers of the Revolution, and report; and February 9, the Committee reported, that "Seituate, Marshfield, Pembroke, and Abington, be invited to send a man or men from their town to meet a man or men from this town, at such time and place as they shall think proper, to consult what is best to be done, concerning the pay of the Continental Officers."

March 15, Lt. Benj. Studley, and Mr. Melzar Curtis were chosen to meet at the Widow Loring's, with the County Convention, to consult about the "officers pay."

1794, July 28. "Voted, that the town will take into consideration the law of the Congress of the United States, particularly as it respects the raising the men ordered to be procured in this town."

August 9. Chose a Committee to procure the men when called for into actual service. "Voted, that the town will give those men who are returned by the officers, six shillings per day, or three shillings for each half day, they shall be called upon for service. Voted, that the town will indemnify the Committee, they procuring the men as cheap as they can."

1795, November 9. A meeting was held to "take into consideration the loss of the Town's stock of powder, — the same having been stolen, — and to adopt such measures as may be thought best calculated to recover the same or the value thereof," and a Committee was chosen to "prosecute such person or persons as may appear to them expedient."

1797, October 23. Voted to give the men who shall be detached by the Commanding Officers of the two Companies, by order of Government, or such as shall voluntarily enlist, $1 per day, for each day they shall be called upon for service. Chose a Committee to procure men when called for, into actual service, to serve in their stead, and voted to indemnify them for all expenses accruing.

1799. Voted to allow the training band nine shillings compensation, for two days at the Brigade muster at Halifax, — the officers to send a list of the same to the assessors.

The foregoing notes bring us to the time when the Hanover Artillery Company was formed; and the History of this Company, and the sketch of the war of 1812, will form the subject of the ensuing chapter.

CHAPTER IX

Military Companies subsequent to the Revolution — Hanover Artillery Company — Hanover Light Infantry Company — Hanover Rifle Company — War of 1812 — List of Soldiers.

Although it has never been the policy of the American people, to encourage the formation of a standing army, for national defence, yet the military spirit, awakened by the Revolution, continued to animate the public mind for many years; and for some time after the war of 1812, military offices were held in much greater esteem than now, and military parades were frequent, and attracted considerable attention. Hence military companies have existed in almost every town, in New England, down to a comparatively recent period; but the Legislation of Massachusetts, for the past twenty years, has done little to revive or encourage the war spirit, and its concomitants.

From 1783 to 1794, we find but one regularly organized company in Hanover, which was commonly known as the "old militia company," and which was commanded by Col. John B. Barstow, prior to the year 1800.

During the administration of the elder Adams, a second company was formed, which was commanded by Capt. Timothy Rose; but this continued in existence for a few years only, and was eventually merged into the Hanover Artillery Company—the only company now in existence in the town.

This last company was established about the year 1798, under the auspices of Benj. Whitman, Esq., then settled as a lawyer in Hanover, of whose history we have elsewhere spoken. Mr. Whitman was the first Captain; his subalterns being, Dr. Melzar Dwelley, 1st Lieut., and Dr. Charles Turner, 2d Lieut.

The equipments of the members were, to each a white leather belt, with a brass breast-plate; coats of blue cloth faced with red, with brass buttons, and cord; pants and vest of a buff color; and the old fashioned chapeaux des bras, or cocked hats, of fur, surmounted with a black plume, tipped with red.

The Company, at its parades, is said to have made a fine appearance; its officers were gentlemen of high respectability; and no company, at the annual gatherings, on the muster field, attracted to itself more notice, or elicited warmer applause for the skillfulness of its manœuvres. A fine band of music usually attended it; and everything connected with the Company was such, that the few survivors, who were among its earliest members, speak of it with an enthusiasm, which age has not damped, nor time abated.

The Armory stood, in the first instance, on the rising ground, still known as "Gun-house Hill," near the residence of Mr. Robert Silvester; and during the Captaincy of Mr. Whitman, the Company often marched to the Four Corners, for review. Here, too, in the hall, over the store of Mr. Silas Morton, the festivities of election and parade days, were celebrated; — the collations served, and the "suppers" eaten. It is said, that, on one occasion, the Company was marched to the Corners for parade, and a large number of spectators were present at the review, — among others, Kilborn Whitman, Esq., a brother of the Captain, from the adjoining town of Pembroke. When seated at the dinner table, their guest was called upon for a "toast," as the glasses circulated; and, rising with much dignity and impressiveness, he gave, "The Hanover Artillery Company; may their pieces be loaded with true New England principles, wadded with Jacobinism, and pointed against every aspiring demagogue," — a toast, which, however exceptionable to some, and gratifying to others was drank with the usual cheers, perhaps for the sake of the New England in the glasses.

In 1806, Albert Smith was chosen Captain of the Company and, at his request, the town voted that "the Artillery Company may move the Gun-house on the Town's land near the meeting house," and Capt. John B. Barstow, Capt. Daniel Barstow, Israel Perry, Capt. Joshua Mann, and Capt. Clement Bates, were appointed a Committee to select a site for the same. The site chosen, was in the rear of the meeting house, on one corner of the old burial ground; and here the house stood until a new one was erected.

In October, 1806, the Selectmen were instructed to purchase "what powder is wanted for the company;" in Oct. 1808, they were instructed to purchase "four camp kettles for the company;" and in 1811, they were instructed to "complete the town's stock of military equipments."

In 1819, Elisha Barrell, jr., being chosen Captain, it was deemed advisable to erect a new Gun-house; and Captain Barrell applied to the Adjutant General, for aid from the State, and in November of that year, the Selectmen were appointed "agents to convey to the Commonwealth, land whereon to set a Gun-house," and the same was erected, being that now occupied by the Company, and standing near the centre of the town.

We do not know that we can give a complete list of the officers of this Company; but the names of the Captains, so far as we have learned, were as follows: Benj. Whitman, Esq.; Albert Smith, Esq.; Hon. E. F. Jacobs, of Scituate; Elisha Barrell, jr.; Edward Curtis; Levi Curtis; Elias W. Pratt; William Morse; Isaac H. Haskins; Wm. Thomas; Joseph Brooks, jr.; James House; Daniel Barstow, jr.; James Brooks; Benjamin N. Curtis; Charles Brooks; and Duncan T. Stoddard, the present Captain.

During the residence of Col. Jesse Reed, in Hanover, an Independent Infantry Company was formed, under his auspices, of which he was commander, which lasted for some years, but was finally disbanded.

About the year 1816, the Hanover Rifle Company was formed, of which Elijah Hayward, was the first captain; and after him, Hosea Whitman, William Josselynn, Nathan Dwelley, Samuel Bennett, and others, commanded it, until its removal to Hanson. It was annexed to the 2nd Regiment, 1st Brigade, 5th Division, of the Massachusetts Militia, and the Commissions of Captain Dwelley we have seen. The members of the Company were from Hanover, Scituate, Marshfield, Pembroke, Hanson, &c. Their uniform and equipments, consisted of green pants and coat; a felt cap, with a long green plume; and to each a rifle, knapsack, &c. The arms were kept at their own houses. The company met at the Four Corners, for review, near the Episcopal Church. Their band consisted of two fifers, two tenor drummers, one bass drummer, and sometimes performers on the clarionet and bugle. There was no practice of "target shooting," by the company; but it attended the musters held at Church-hill, in Scituate; in Pembroke, near Horace Collamore's; and elsewhere.

Mr. Dwelley was chosen Ensign in 1820; on which occasion, a standard was presented, and an address delivered, by one of the young ladies of the town. The clergy of the neighborhood were present on the occasion; and an assemblage of from two to three hundred spectators, among whom were the ladies, dressed in white, each with a green ribbon encircling the waist; and Miss Eliza Stetson, who delivered the address, was accompanied by Miss Eells, now the wife of Capt. Dwelley, and Miss Ruth Stockbridge. The standard being presented, and waved, the music cheered, and the company, with their guests, marched to the hall, opened right and left, the ladies entered, the refreshments were served, and the remainder of the day was passed in partaking of cake, tea, lemonade, and strong drinks, which, in some cases, proved a little too strong for those who partook too freely.

Having a copy of the address delivered by Miss Stetson, we present it as a memorial connected with the history of the company.

"Sir,—The Ladies of Hanover and its vicinity, impressed with a high sense of the merits of the Rifle Company, in their behalf, I present you this Standard, in full confidence that you will not suffer it to be wrested from you, nor its reputation sullied. To be a lover of peace while prepared for war, is a characteristic of the American soldier; but though peace is our anxious wish, we would not have it purchased or preserved by the surrender of any of those rights and privileges procured and transmitted to us by our Fathers. Should any insolent foe attempt to deprive us of these dear-bought, and invaluable blessings, then, Sir, think of this banner! Think of our ancestors! and you must be brave! Remember your friends, and you will conquer!"

WAR OF 1812.

Of the causes which led to the war of 1812, we need not speak at large here. Its history is so recent, that the materials for its investigation are ample and complete. We shall only notice the proceedings of the citizens of Hanover, and this but briefly, as many other matters yet remain to be treated, and our space is limited.

June 2, 1812. The town voted, "to make soldiers up $15 per month, with what the Government pay, when called upon for actual service." Also, "voted, to give them $1 per day, for every day they are called out of town to do duty."

Aug. 3. A committee was appointed to draft resolutions, expressing the views of the town concerning the war; and these resolves were recorded, and copies sent "for publication in the Republican newspapers in Boston."

The Committee of Safety for this year, consisted of Turner Stetson, Albert Smith, Aaron Hobart, jr., Joshua Mann, and Snow Curtis. The Selectmen were likewise instructed to purchase a town's stock of powder, and $50 were voted to pay for the same.

In 1814, the Selectmen were instructed to "hire such sums of money as may be necessary for the safety of the town during the war." Also, "voted, to make up the soldier's pay to $20 per month, until October 1, and those that have been called out before, and the non-commissioned officers to receive the same pay." The selectmen were likewise instructed, to "furnish the militia with a suitable number of cartridges."

The Committee of Safety for this year, consisted of Aaron Hobart, jr., Esq., Isaiah Wing, Esq., Elijah Hayward, John B. Barstow, and Benjamin Stockbridge.

A detachment of the Artillery Company of the town, under Lieut. Elisha Barrell, jr., was at Scituate harbor, for sixty-eight days, from July 1, to September 6, 1814; and the whole company, under Captain Edward F. Jacobs, was at Plymouth, from September 19 to October 19, 1814.

CHAPTER X.

MANUFACTURES AND TRADE.

“ Yet I exult,
Casting reserve away, exult to see
An intellectual mastery exercised
O'er the blind elements : a purpose given,
A perseverance fed, almost a soul
Imparted, to brute matter.”

WORDSWORTH.

History of Manufactures in the town — Forges and Furnaces — Bardin's, now the Curtis Forge — Barstow's, now Sylvester's Forge — Dyer's, now Perry's Tack Factory — Sketch of the Life of Col. Jesse Reed — The Drinkwater Works, now Bates and Holmes — Barker's Foundry — Salmond's Tack Works — Tolman's Mills — Saw and Grist Mills — Plough Manufacture, and Sketch of the Life of David Prouty — Other branches of Industry.

To attempt to give a full sketch of the history of manufactures and trade, in this town, would require far more space than we can spare for the subject ;—nor would such a sketch, which must necessarily be principally statistical, be generally interesting. We should be happy to give a list of the names of all, who have, at different periods, been owners of the forges, furnaces, saw-mills, grist-mills, &c., which have been erected ; as well as of those who have engaged in trade, and other branches of industry ; but, apart from the fact that authentic records are wanting, from which to draw these names, and the difficulty of obtaining them only from tradition, such a list, however gratifying as a memorial of family enterprise, could only be regarded as a sort of muster-roll, telling who had served, it is true, but not much of what they had accomplished.

We do not propose, however, to pass the subject by in silence. On the contrary, in itself, it is of far too much importance, to be treated with neglect, and the place which it occupies in our history is too conspicuous to be entirely overlooked. The town of Hanover has done something, in the line of manufacturing enterprise, as the statistics of the State show ; and considering the many disadvantages under which our population have labored, from many sources, we think that what has been done, is highly creditable to their industry and perseverance.

The petition for the incorporation of the town, states that there were, then within its limits, "five saw-mills, and three iron-mills, and others," probably grist-mills.

As the names of these mills, and of the owners, are not given, we are left to learn them from the few hints scattered over our records.

FORGES, TACK WORKS, ETC.

As early as 1704, according to Deane, Bardin's Iron Works were erected on the Indian Head River; and these are called, on the records of the town, in 1730, the "old iron works." Thomas and Joseph Josselynn, were owners of the same, before 1743, and they were afterwards improved by Seth, Philip, Isaac, and John R. Josselynn, and others. They are now in the possession of Mr. George Curtis, who is engaged principally in the manufacture of Anchors, and other heavy forge work. On the Pembroke side of the stream, and opposite these works, stands an old saw-mill, now owned by Messrs. George Curtis, and Capt. Haviland Torrey; also a carding-mill, first built by Jesse Reed, at a spot farther up the stream, and moved from thence to its present locality. This, too, is owned by Mr. Curtis. A small furnace stood on the same side of the stream some years ago, but it is now gone.

The Curtis family has been connected with these works at least sixty years, or since 1790, though Seth Josselynn continued to be an owner until 1803, and Lemuel Dwelley, as late as 1839. Benj. Studley, and John R. Josselynn, were part owners in 1791, at which date they disposed of their interest to Lemuel Curtis. The year previous, or in 1790, Lemuel Curtis sold one fourth of the forge, &c. to Reuben and Consider Curtis, and Reuben disposed of his fourth to George Curtis, in 1831.

In 1839, Lemuel Dwelley, sold his half to George Curtis, and since that period, the last named gentleman has conducted the works individually.

The first works owned by the Curtis family, as also the building erected for a corn-mill in 1832, were destroyed by fire in 1848, and new buildings have been since erected. The old saw-mill, on the Pembroke side, yet remains, and is used some every winter; — also the old carding-mill, though the wool carding business, which was once very good, is now comparatively worthless. This mill was leased to Mr. Edward Y. Perry, for two years, from 1836-38, for running tack machines.

Mr. Curtis employs, in his anchor works, about sixteen hands, and manufactures from 200 to 250 tons of anchors per year. Business has always been active at this place; and, for nearly one hundred and fifty years, from amidst the charming and romantic scenery around, has ascended the smoke of the furnace, and the loud din of the descending hammer may be heard daily.

It is said that, from twenty-five to thirty years ago, anchors were made for the United States Government at this Forge, some of which were of great size, weighing five tons! Since the erection of the works at Washington, private contracts have been discontinued.

Formerly ship-knees, of iron, were made here; but at present, wooden knees are considered quite as serviceable, and are generally preferred.

The anchors made by Mr. Curtis, are for merchant ships and other vessels, and range in weight from 100 to 5000 lbs.

We annex a view of the "Old Forge."

Barstow's Forge, to which we have alluded on p. 19, was erected in 1720, and was occupied by the Barstow family, until the removal of Joshua, to Exeter, N. H., in 1795, when it was purchased by the Salmonds, and was improved by them, and by Nathaniel Cushing, and Charles Josselynn, for about thirty years.

In 1828, Mr. Salmond disposed of his interest in the works to Thomas Hobart, of Abington, who had been part owner for several years ; and at that time there were, on the premises, one forge for the manufacture of bar iron, one anchor shop, one tack factory, and a corn mill. Mr. John Silvester, who is still connected with the works, entered them at about this date. About one hundred tons of bar iron were made per year, and one hundred tons of anchors. Of tack machines, from twelve to fourteen were run, and from two to three tons of tacks were made a week.

About the year 1825, Messrs. Hobart & Salmond had a contract from the United States Government for the manufacture of anchors for the Navy, and several were made for seventy-four gun-ships, of the largest size ever forged probably.

As far back as the period of the Revolution, quite a business is said to have been done at this forge, in the manufacture of cannon balls by Mr. Barstow, and he is spoken of as one of the most enterprising men ever in the town. He melted his iron at an ordinary forge fire, and moulded his balls in the bottom of the forge.

At present, the works, which are conducted by Mr. Silvester, are adapted principally to forging anchors, shaftings, locomotive cranks, and wagon axles. Mr. Silvester commenced the manufacture of locomotive cranks as early as 1830, and was one of the pioneers in this branch of business.

Many tack machines are built here yearly, though the tack business is not conducted at the place as formerly. About one hundred and fifty tons of iron are used at this forge.

Between the Curtis Forge, and that of Mr. Silvester, and at a place called "Project Dale," stands the tack factory of Mr. Edward Y. Perry, moved to this spot by Mr. Charles Dyer, about the year 1830, from Col. Reed's dam, of which we shall soon speak. There was an old dam, a grist mill, and carding mill, on the premises.

From papers, in the possession of Mr. Dyer, we learn that James Torrey had a fulling-mill at this spot, in 1737, at which date the place was called Project Dale. Mr. Torrey had bought fifty-two acres of land of Wm. Clift, deceased ; and five acres, with a dwelling house, of Joseph Smith, in 1730. This mill privilege was sold to Thomas Josselynn, in 1737, and, for some time, the place was known as "Josselynn's Corn-mill," and the lane leading to it, as "Mill Lane."

During the latter part of the 18th century, Joseph Stetson was proprietor of this mill, at which date it was known as "Stetson's mill;" and at his decease, it was sold by his administrators, to Lemuel Curtis, who gave it to Nathaniel Curtis, and by him it was sold to Mr. Elisha Hobart. It is now owned by the heirs of Mr. Curtis, and is occupied by Mr. Perry.

Mr. Dyer conducted the works for ten years, from 1829 to 1839, as agent for Mr. Hobart, after which he formed a partnership with Mr. Perry, which continued until 1850, when Mr. Perry took the sole charge of the works.

An idea of the extent to which the business is conducted by Mr. Perry, may be gathered from the following statistics. He employs sixteen hands, twelve of whom are males, and four females;—manufactures three hundred pounds of shoe nails per day, and about eight hundred thousand of tacks;—uses from two to three tons of copper, twenty-five tons of zinc, and seventy-five tons of iron per year; runs three shoe nail, and seven tack machines, and one machine for three-penny nails, of which about one hundred pounds per day are made.

The location of these works is very pleasant, especially in the summer season, being in a quiet dale, environed by hills, clothed with evergreen, and deciduous trees; and both here, and at the place next named, at an early period, the business of tack making was commenced, and has since been continued.

A short distance farther up the stream, Col. Jesse Reed, now of Marshfield, was located for a time. He came to Hanover about the year 1812, and lived on what is called the Smith farm, which he purchased of Mr. Robert Salmond, and which is now owned by Mr. Nathan Dwelley. The privilege which he improved, was purchased of Mr. Enos Bates, where Mr. Bates contemplated the erection of a dam and grist mill. Col. Reed built the dam, and put up a grist mill, and nail factory and machine shop. He remained in the town several years, and thence moved to Marshfield, where he yet resides.

The career of this gentleman, is worthy of notice, as an instance of the manifold blessings which a genius like his confers upon the public.

His father was a clock maker by trade, and, at the date of the birth of Jesse, in 1778, resided in North Bridgewater, Mass. At the age of nine years, the son went to Easton, to reside with Mr. Dean, with whom he remained three years, during which time his mechanical taste was displayed in the construction of a trip hammer, put in operation by a wheel and cam shaft, propelled by water. At the age of twelve, he returned to his father, and soon after constructed the main part of a wooden clock. At the age of fifteen, he was apprenticed to a joiner in Randolph, Mass., where he served a regular apprenticeship at that business.

During this period, he tried his skill on perpetual motion; and the result of his labors is thus given in his own words: "I worked two days and three nights without sleep. The last night, a little before day light, I got it ready to put into operation; and to avoid notice, I went into a little pine grove, with a friend, to put it together and set it in motion. I found that as soon as it was put together, it would go as well one way as the other, and that it would not go either way without help. I was then fully convinced that it was out of the power of man to put machinery together so as to produce perpetual motion, and that nothing short of the power to create could do it. To this belief I have ever since adhered."

At the age of twenty-two, or thereabouts, he invented and constructed a rotary pump, which worked well, but which was soon laid aside. His mind was next drawn to improvements in the manufacture of cut nails, and his first machine, for making nails from rods, was patented in 1802. One third of his interest in this right was sold to Rev. Jonathan Strong, of Randolph, and another third to Thomas Ordiorne, of Boston; they to have two-thirds of all improvements Mr. Reed should make in the business. But the experiment of manufacturing from rods, proved a failure, in a pecuniary point of view; and the next plan was to roll the iron to a suitable thickness, and slit it into pieces of the right size for the body of the nail, and flatten the point,—but this plan also failed.

The third step was the construction of a machine for cutting and heading at one operation. On this machine a patent was obtained, but it was soon laid aside. A heading machine was next constructed, into which, after the nails were cut, they were fed by hand; but this was also laid aside.

The partners of Mr. Reed now leaving him, he located in North Bridgewater, and built a small house by a waterfall, as a family residence, using the lower part of the building as a machine shop. Here he built two or three nail machines of different kinds, but pecuniary embarrassments caused him to lose his all, and he left his home, and went to Boston, where he worked at his trade, of a joiner, and was employed in constructing the first lock on the canal through Medway. Thence he went to Providence R. I. There he made the model of a nail machine known as the "Odiorne Tool." Leaving Providence, he moved to West Bridgewater, Mass., and there commenced making patterns for a machine for four-penny nails, to be propelled by the foot, which made sixty-two nails per minute. This was in 1803. His old partners now joining him again, machines for four-penny and six-penny nails were made, and set up in Plymouth.

In 1805 or 1806, the machine known as the "Odiorne Tool," was patented, which was sold to the Messrs. Odiorne in 1806, and Mr. Reed moved to Kingston.

It was about this time, that his machine for pulverizing dye-woods was invented, for Messrs. Barrett & Shattuck, of Malden, Silk Dyers. Letters patent for this invention were obtained in 1807.

Soon after this, the machine known as the "Reed Tool," for the manufacture of nails, was invented; and whilst in Hanover, his tack machines were invented, and put into operation. He likewise worked, for a time, on a high pressure steam engine, but soon abandoned it.

Disposing of his first privilege, in Hanover, he moved to one near Rocky Run, where he erected works, and conveyed water to his wheel through a trough one third of a mile long; but the difficulties encountered here were such, that he finally sold out entirely, and moved to Marshfield, where he has since resided.

His later inventions, are machines for steering vessels; different patterns of pumps; cotton gins; treenail machines, &c. In all, he has obtained patents on from twenty to thirty different machines in his day, many of which are of great importance to the community; and every house builder has the benefit of his ingenuity.

Mr. Reed is a man of indefatigable industry, and of indomitable perseverance. He has made and lost several fortunes in his day. Free and generous in his manners, he is not one who hoards all his gains, to increase his own stores ; but considers himself as a public servant, and expends, on new inventions, the fruits of his previous toils. Thus, in his old age, not a millionaire, resting from his labors, he is still at work, with a mind as active and vigorous as ever.

On King-street, the “Drinkwater Iron Works,” or “Mighill’s Works,” were erected, about the year 1710. The early history of these works is involved in some obscurity. Tradition says, that during the Revolution, cannon were cast here, and carried down by the old fulling mill, near where Barker’s foundry now stands, for trial ; and Tilson Gould was killed by the bursting of one of the guns, the pieces of which are said to be yet lying on the bottom of the old furnace pond.

About the year 1816, Charles Josselynn, Oren Josselynn, Timothy Rose, Calvin Bates, and others, erected a forge on the dam, and the works are now owned and improved by Messrs. Bates and Holmes,—the latter gentleman being the agent. Besides the forge, there are on the dam a saw mill, a grist mill, a box board mill, and a shingle mill, owned by the same company.

We learn from Mr. Bates, that five hands are usually employed in the forge, and from fifty to sixty tons of anchors, with wrought iron bars, &c., are made at the works.

The three forges above-named,—viz : those of George Curtis, John Silvester, and Messrs. Bates and Holmes, are old establishments,—among the oldest in Plymouth County ;—and, by a glance at the dates given, it will be seen that the town of Hanover may justly claim to have borne its part in this highly useful branch of industry ; and these works have not only added to the wealth, but to the prosperity of the town, and the promotion of its outward interests.

To the eastward of the works of Messrs. Bates and Holmes stands the foundry of Mr. Joshua Barker, erected about the year 1830, at which stoves, hollow-ware, and machinery of different kinds are cast.

An old fulling mill formerly stood near this spot, improved, many years ago, by Messrs. Bailey, Hatch, and others.

The tack works of Mr. Samuel Salmond, are on the Third Herring Brook, and at the spot where the "Stockbridge mill" formerly stood. This mill was erected as early as 1677, by Charles Stockbridge; it descended to his sons; and, in 1692, Thomas Stockbridge sold one-half of the mill to John Bryant, and Samuel Stetson. In 1729, Thomas Stockbridge, son of the first Thomas, sold "one-fourth of the saw-mill" to Jonah Stetson, whence the name of Jonah's Mill; Samuel Stetson having sold his fourth of the "corn mill," to the said Jonah Stetson, in 1726.

The mill was afterwards the property of Recompense Tiffany, and was called the Tiffany mill.

Tack works were erected on the premises about 1830, and were conducted, for some years, by Capt. Zephaniah Talbot, and by John, and William, brothers of Mr. Samuel Salmond. The latter gentleman has conducted the works since 1838, uses about sixty tons of tack plates per year, employs fifteen male hands, and five females, and runs from twenty to twenty-five machines.

Tolman's mills are near Winslow's bridge, on the Third Herring Brook, but the proprietor is a resident of Scituate.

The tack business was commenced in Hanover at an early date, and tack machines were invented here by Col. Reed; so that we feel as if our town could claim some credit on the score of useful inventions, and the successful prosecution of the branch of industry opened by these inventions.

SAW AND GRIST MILLS.

We cannot devote much space to the history of the saw and grist mills in the town.

Eliab's mill, so called, or the Studley mill, stood on Pleasant street, and the site is now occupied by the shingle mill of Mr. Nahum Stetson. The privilege has been improved since the middle of the last century.

Tradition says, that an old saw mill formerly stood near Ellis' bridge, which was burnt by the Indians in 1676, and the erection of a new mill on the spot, at whose raising cold water, instead of spirituous liquors, was furnished as a beverage, gave rise to to the term "Drinkwater," so frequently occurring on the Town records.

As early as 1723, a saw mill was erected on Curtis street, where the mill of Deacon John Brooks now stands. The latter mill was erected in 1851, and is the third which has stood on the dam. Mr. Brooks has been connected with this mill for seventeen years, and saws, on an average, from eighty to one hundred thousand feet of inch and half-inch pine boards, annually, besides pine and oak plank, joist, and timber.

In the woods, west of the mill of Mr. John Brooks, stands the shingle and box board mill, built by Joseph Brooks, about 1820, and which was occupied as a grist mill until 1833. Here, the iron work of Mr. Prouty's ploughs was polished. Cedar and pine shingles are now sawed,—the material being obtained from the forests of Hanover, and the adjoining towns.

An old grist mill formerly stood on North street, where the brook crosses the street, at the bridge, and was owned, many years ago, by Caleb Mann. It was built by his father, Benjamin Mann, and was an old-fashioned mill, with a large wheel, requiring a great quantity of water to turn it.

The mill of the Messrs. Jacobs, stands on the Third Herring Brook, and is on the bounds of Hanover and South Scituate,—the saw mill being in South Scituate. This was erected, probably, about the year 1700.

The old Curtis mill, also on the Third Herring Brook, is now in the possession of T. J. Gardner, Esq., and was erected about the year 1692.

The Clapp mills, are also on the Third Herring Brook, not far from Mr. Gardner's, but belong to South Scituate, as does the mill of Mr. Gardner. Large quantities of lumber are sawed at all these mills, annually, for the trunk and box factories in South Scituate and Hanover, and for building purposes.

A small grist mill was early erected by the Curtis family, on Hugh's Cross, now Silver Brook, and is yet standing, though but little used.

The late saw mill of Messrs. Cobb & Cushing, burnt in 1852, stood near Teague's Bridge, in Hanson, and was formerly known as Hatch's mill.

PLOUGH BUSINESS.

About the year 1811, Mr. David Prouty, a native of Scituate, came to Hanover, settled on the place which had been owned by Mr. Thomas Hatch, and lived in the house built by Mr. H. Here he found a farm, rough, and hard to cultivate, especially to one in his feeble health. In connexion with his farm, he opened a store, and, with his trading, joined the business of weaving cotton cloth. This cloth was made from yarn obtained at the factories in Dedham, Dorchester, and Marshfield, and was put out by Mr. Prouty to females in his neighborhood; furnishing, to a large number, a source of steady, and, for a season, profitable income. This business was continued, until the system of weaving by power-looms was introduced, which caused hand-weaving to be soon abandoned.

Mr. P. was then, for about two years, engaged in manufacturing black morocco shoes, with Major Wm. Morse; which he pursued with his usual zeal and earnestness. The business, however, was not conducted by him very extensively,—but six hands being employed in the shop;—and, on its relinquishment, we find him contemplating a visit to New York State, with a view to a permanent settlement. Whilst in that State, his attention was called to the ploughs used by agriculturists at that date; and though we cannot confidently say, that he was the first inventor of the cast iron ploughs, which have since given to his name a world-wide celebrity, yet patents were early obtained by him for their manufacture, on principles whose discovery must be attributed to him;—he was a pioneer in the business;—and, to the close of his useful life, he gave all his energies to its prosecution, and his efforts were crowned with a success, not only gratifying to him personally, but eminently beneficial to the community, reflecting honor upon his genius, and attesting the fertility of his resources.

At the time Mr. Prouty commenced the manufacture of the ploughs which still bear his name, the implements then in use by farmers, were of a far different stamp from those seen at the present day, as may be seen from the annexed cuts. That part of the instrument which performs the labor, was of wood, strapped with iron bars; and the form and durability were far below the ploughs of Mr. Prouty's construction. But it was no easy matter for him, at the outset, to convince the public of the superior value of his invention. He had not only hereditary prejudices to encounter ;—that spirit of conservatism, too much of which still exists among the yeomanry of New England,—but also the idea which prevailed, that pot metal, as it was termed, was too brittle a substance to stand the rough use to which the plough is subjected. But, by practical demonstrations of the strength of his implements, he silenced this objection, and vanquished those prejudices.

Deacon John Brooks, of Hanover, well recollects when the first plough made by Mr. P. was put in operation. It was taken to a gravel knoll, on the highway, near the present residence of Mr. Samuel Brooks, Main Street, and many were the prophecies, that as soon as the oxen were attached, and an attempt was made to break up the almost impenetrable surface, it would at once be shattered, and found worthless. But Mr. P., who had all confidence in his success, held the plough himself, guided its operations, and, as the team moved on, and the furrows were turned, the prophecies of failure, vanished as the dew before the morning sun.

Not long after, as a farther test of their strength, Mr. P. caused one of his ploughs to be taken to a piece of land on Walnut street, almost covered with rocks ; and here, it was freely prophesied, that his instrument would be broken ;—but here, as before, it worked admirably, and the triumph of Mr. P. was final and complete.

The establishment of Mr. Prouty, in Hanover, was not on so extensive a scale, as was that conducted by him subsequent to his removal from the town. About one thousand ploughs, per year, were made, and from three to four hands employed in the shop. There was a blacksmith's shop attached to his premises, also a building in which was machinery for sawing plough beams, &c., by horse-power.

Mr. Prouty left Hanover about the year 1833, and established himself in Boston, where, in company, with Mr. John Mears, and Mr. Lorenzo Prouty, and under the firm of Prouty and Mears, the business of manufacturing ploughs, and other agricultural implements, was carried on until the decease of Mr. Prouty, and is now conducted by Mr. Lorenzo Prouty, and Mr. John Mears, jr., at their extensive warehouses, on North Market, and Clinton streets.

It would be agreeable to us, did our limits permit, to quote a few of the many testimonials which have been published, in favor of the value and excellence of Mr. Prouty's ploughs, and the importance of his invention to the agricultural community. Not only at most of the Fairs in the different Counties of Massachusetts, have premiums been awarded, but similiar premiums have been bestowed at the Fairs of other States, and even at the World's Fair. Indeed, the fame of the inventor has spread farther than that of many a warrior, and many a statesman; and it will endure so long as the community can appreciate the worth of those who have been the benefactors of the laboring classes.

The light in which his invention has been viewed by practical farmers, may be seen from the following note, from the pen of the lamented Elias Phinney.

LEXINGTON, Mass., February 25th, 1846.

To Mr. James Pedder,

Dear Sir:—You ask my opinion of the "CENTRE DRAUGHT PLOUGH." I give it freely, and in few words. If my opinion of its merits, will, in any measure induce my brother Farmers to adopt this, in preference to any other plough now in use, I shall feel that I have rendered an important service to the public, and, at the same time, contributed my share toward the discharge of the debt of gratitude due to the Inventor of this invaluable improvement, in an implement of so great importance to Agriculture.

I have, for twenty-five years past, personally superintended my own estate, part of which I have annually had under the plough. I have tried English, Scotch, and every variety of American ploughs, and presume I shall be excused for saying, that I consider myself a competent judge of their relative value in the hands of farmers. The application of the "Centre-Draught" principle to the plough, by Messrs. Prouty & Mears, is, unquestionably, the greatest improvement that has been made in the Implement since its first invention. The remedy for the long existing evil of having the whole resistance on one side of the line of draught, and the necessity of placing the centre of resistance exactly on the line of draught, first suggested itself to the philosophical mind of DAVID PROUTY.

Mr. Prouty was a practical farmer. He saw the objections to the old-fashioned plough—his ingenious mind set about devising means, whereby the power of draught might be greatly lessened, the liability to wear, in certain parts more than others obviated, the labor of managing greatly diminished, and, at the same time, doing the work infinitely better; and well has he done it. And when his improvement shall be generally adopted by farmers, and its merits justly appreciated, Mr. Prouty will be ranked among the greatest benefactors of his age. And although some of his contemporaries may injure him by unjustly interfering with his rights, and appropriating to themselves some of the fruits of his ingenuity—they can never rob him of his well-earned fame—Posterity will do justice to his memory. And the approbation and magnificent testimonial of one of the most powerful and enlightened Monarchs of Europe, is but a foretaste of what he may expect from his own countrymen, when the merits of his invention shall be rightly appreciated.

I am aware that my strong convictions of the vast utility to farmers of this improvement in the Plough, may lead me—in the minds of some—to speak in extravagant terms of the merits of the Inventor. But you have known Mr. Prouty; you have been familiar with the operations, and can fully appreciate the benefits of his invention; and by you, I presume, I shall not be charged with bestowing unmerited praise, in saying, that if the farmers of his own state should appropriate to that object, but a single tithe of what this improvement in the Plough has saved them, in the cultivation and better condition of their farms, it would raise a monument to his memory, which would not be transcended in beauty, in grandeur and durability, by any that have been erected to the memory of the greatest benefactors of mankind.

With great respect,

I am, my dear sir,

Very truly and sincerely yours,

E. PHINNEY.

Mr. Prouty is remembered, in Hanover, with much respect, by those best acquainted with him; and probably few have done more for the prosperity of the town, and the advancement of its interest, than did that gentleman, whilst he resided here.

OTHER BRANCHES OF INDUSTRY.

Of the other branches of industry in the town, we shall be obliged to speak briefly.

The carriage manufactory of Mr. Thomas Turner, is on Broadway, who conducts this business in all its branches; the wood work, iron work, painting, trimming, and even harness-making, being all done on his premises. His buildings were erected in 1850, at which date Mr. Turner came to Hanover from South Boston, where he had been previously engaged in the same calling. He employs ten hands, and builds about forty carriages per year.

On Washington street, stands the wheelwright shop of Mr. Robert Eells, and near it, the blacksmith shop of Mr. Warren Wright.

On the easterly side of the street, is the shop of Mr. John P. Eells, who is a painter by trade.

At the corner of Broadway and Washington streets, is the carriage trimming shop of Mr. Henry Chandler.

In this vicinity, there were formerly several blacksmiths shops, when ship building was in its prime, conducted by Robert L., Robert, and Joseph Eells, and by the Dillinghams, and others.

Mr. Haynes, a few years since, had a harness manufactory, in Wood & Torrey's store.

In the days when there were no carriages owned here, the saddle business was a prominent branch of enterprise, and was conducted by Benjamin Stockbridge, at the Four Corners, and by the family of Estes, on what is now Plain street, and perhaps by others.

There have been many blacksmiths shops scattered around in the town, at different periods, on Washington street, Centre street, Broadway, Main street, &c. The only ones now in operation, besides Mr. Wright's, are Mr. McFarland's, at Snappet, and Mr. Judson Bates', on Centre street.

We have heard John Jacobs, Walter Rogers, Lemuel Curtis, Joshua and Elisha Simmons, Benjamin Stetson, Bela Mann, Charles Mann, Ezekiel Hatch, and Richard Estes, named as blacksmiths in years past ; and there were probably many others, whose names we have not learned.

Of traders, we have had many ; and we dare not attempt to give the names of all who have engaged in trade. The principal establishments, at present in the town, are the Messrs. Blanchards, at Snappet ; and John B. Bates, Isaac M. Wilder, and Stephen Josselynn, at the Four Corners. Messrs. Wood & Torrey, have just relinquished the business conducted by them for many years.

Mr. Josselynn, and the Messrs. Blanchards, are extensively engaged in the manufacture of shoes, and this is one of the prominent branches of industry in the town ; a large number of males being engaged in making boots and shoes.

Mr. Edward Y. Perry recently had a store on Broadway, near Silvester's Forge, which is now occupied by Mr. Howland.

Formerly, the clock and watch making business was conducted by John Bailey, and Calvin Bailey, on Curtis, now Main street, and at the Four Corners ;—also by David Studley, and by Benjamin D. Torrey. There is now nothing done here at this business. The Messrs. Bailey, as well as the others, were ingenious workmen ; and there are still to be found, in several houses, the large, old-fashioned, eight-day clocks, with a "full moon" on the face, made by "John Bailey."

The town has had the usual complement of carpenters, masons, &c., and there are several yet engaged in these branches.

The tannery of Messrs. Seth and Edwin Rose, is on Hanover street ; and that of Mr. William Church is on the same street ;—the former at the westerly, and the latter at the easterly part of the street. Mr. Simeon Curtis had tan-works some years ago, on Silver street, the old pits being yet visible.

Messrs. Daly & Co. have a tailor's shop at the Four Corners ; and there is a stove shop on Broadway, in the old Academy building.

The only tavern now in operation, is that that of Mr. Joseph Pocorny, at the Four Corners.

In former years, when spirituous liquors were freely used and sold, taverns were common ; so much so, that as early as 1747, the town "voted not to set up any more taverns" ; and also "voted that there is too many taverns in town already" ; and “voted that one tavern is sufficient for this town.” We have never heard of breweries or distilleries in the town.

Bricks were made sixty years ago, at Walnut Hill. Mr. Joseph Sylvester is engaged in the manufacture of soap, on Broadway.

We dare not affirm that the foregoing sketch is complete. On the contrary, we doubt not some omissions will be discovered ; but these, we trust, will be attributed, not to intentional neglect on the author's part, but to his limited knowledge, and the difficulty of obtaining information concerning the past.

CHAPTER XI.

SHIP BUILDING.

“To mark the ship in floating balance held,
By earth attracted and by seas repelled;
Or point her devious track thro’ climes unknown,
That leads to every shore and every zone.” FALCONER.

Former and present state of the art of Ship-building in America—Materials for the construction of vessels—Massachusetts Enterprise—Ship-building on the North River—Yards in Pembroke—Yards in Hanover—The Barstows, Sylvesters, Sampsons, Clarks, Perrys, Eells, Paiges, Baileys, Smiths, Kingmans, Wings, Stockbridges, &c.—Obstructions in the River—Petitions to Congress for their removal—Decline of the business—Present condition of the village.

The history of ship-building in New England, could it be faithfully written, would present to us memorable instances of the triumphs of genius over contending obstacles, and striking proofs of the degree of perfection to which this art, which, two centuries ago, was but in its infancy, has been carried by the persevering skill, and industrious application, of the Anglo-Saxon race.

Compare the pictures of the small, ill-shaped, and clumsily-rigged vessels, which bore the Pilgrim Fathers to this land in 1620,<sup>1</sup> with those sumptuously furnished, and palace-like "ocean monarchs,"—faultless models of beauty and elegance,—of from sixteen hundred to two thousand tons burthen, which may be seen in all the great harbors of our country, spreading their sails to every breeze, and conveying our hardy sailors to the Polar Circle, in pursuit of the whale, or to the East Indies, and the ports of Europe, swelling our commerce, increasing our comforts, and augmenting our wealth.

If OLD ENGLAND is "mistress of the seas," in the weight of her armament, and the amount of her shipping, she must yield the palm to NEW ENGLAND, in excellence of structure, beauty of finish, exquisiteness of proportion, and those fast sailing properties which have already borne off the prize for NEW YORK on the theatre of the WORLD'S FAIR, held in her own metropolis, and on the waters of the seas washing her own shores!

The facilities for procuring materials for the construction of vessels of the largest class, from the forests of this State, are not so great as formerly. The giant oaks, which once spread their shadows over the land, have almost entirely disappeared. In the western counties they are most abundant.

Yet, for centuries to come, so extended is our republic, and so expansive are its resources, American skill will continue to compete with the most enterprising of the Old World, and the superiority of our naval architecture, already acknowledged and felt, will not soon be cast into the shade, or suffered to diminish.

The oaks and pines in the forests of Michigan, and all over the Western States, and even upon the Pacific Coast, will furnish a supply for generations to come; and when our iron-arms, Briareus-like, shall be spread out to embrace the whole of those now distant regions, the rich harvest, which has been accumulating for ages, will pour in its treasures upon us, to stimulate to higher attainments and prouder triumphs.

Massachusetts, one of the earliest settled of the New England States, has ever borne her part in the promotion of our country's prosperity. Her citizens, some of whom are in the ship yards of Maine, and New Hampshire, and others peopling the prairies of the Mississippi Valley, and the shores of the Pacific, carry with them those habits of industry and thrift, for which she has ever been famed, and maintain her ancient power, and present dignity, unstained, wherever they are found.

Here has been educated an army of shipwrights; and, when business has been wanting at home, they have scattered abroad, and are the principal mechanics at many of the yards where ship-building is largely conducted, along the Atlantic sea-board.

The North River, in Plymouth County, which forms the boundary between Hanover and Scituate, on the one side, and Pembroke and Marshfield, on the other, is a comparatively small stream, not over twenty miles in length, never with a great depth of water, but a few rods in breadth, and very tortuous in its course, with shoals at the bends, and sand bars at its mouth. Standing on the bridge, beyond the Four Corners, and looking first above, and then below, as far as the eye can reach, and noting the quietness which seems usually to reign over the spot; or walking along the banks of the stream, across the fairy-like bridge of plank, worn by the tread of human feet for many years, and spanning the Third Herring Brook, which, from its shape, is expressively called the RAINBOW BRIDGE;—and thence over Fox Hill, and past where Seabury's point stretches off to the right, until the old Brick-kilns appear in sight; one, who did not know what busy scenes had been enacted here in past times, would hardly imagine that, from 1660 to 1835, or for more than a century and a half, the business of ship-building was carried on, probably to a greater extent, than on any other river, of the same size, anywhere in the State! Not only on the Hanover side, were the yards compacted together, in close proximity one to another, but on the Pembroke side, below Rocky Reach, and at Seabury's point, yards were established by George and Thomas Turner, and Nathaniel Cushing; and, on the banks of the stream, near the "reach," by the bridge, the indentation, or hollow, where the saw pit stood, is distinctly visible, and the old wharf yet projects its rocky piers into the stream below.

On the Hanover side, before the present bridge was built, ship-yards existed, above and below the old bridge. The banks of the stream here, for some distance, present peculiar facilities for this business, being sloping, and somewhat abrupt, though not precipitous; so that, whilst the bows of the vessels were near the water, the sterns were on the hill sides, and easy of access by the aid of a few plank, without the necessity for those lofty stagings which are indispensable in many yards.

From the top of these banks, stretches back a large tract of rough, rocky, pasture land, also easy of access from the travelled ways, where timber was landed, brought from the surrounding country, in such quantity, that the whole surface of the tract was covered at times.

Above the old bridge, on the Hanover side, is a small ravine, or gorge, on the land of Seth Barker, Esq., just wide enough to admit the hulk of one of the small craft built in those days, and sloping towards the river, at such an angle as to afford a fine opportunity for launching, were it not for the bridge. The site is visible from the present bridge, being but a few rods above; and the scenery around has that wildness of aspect, which renders it quite romantic. Here, James Barstow built one vessel, previous to the Revolution, which, it is said, was launched directly across the road. But the existence of the bridge presented too formidable an obstacle, to encourage the building of many vessels at this spot; and the yard, accordingly, was soon abandoned.

Just below the old bridge, and in the space intervening between its piers, and the piers of the present bridge, was another ship yard, first improved by William Barstow, and his descendants for two generations. It was, probably, established near the year 1660. The vessels built at this yard, by the Barstows, were mostly small ones, and their sides rose higher than the piers of the present bridge, their bows reaching up the bank, into the doorway of the present residence of Mr. Barker. It is said that the Barstows abandoned this yard, because of the difficulty experienced in launching their vessels, in consequence of their impinging frequently against the rocky ledge, on the opposite shore.

After they left the yard, about 1745, it was improved for a period of from twenty to thirty years, by Nathaniel Silvester, familiarly known as "builder Silvester," who was born in 1718, and died in 1781, at the age of sixty-three. He built the house occupied by Rufus Farnum, on Washington street, just above Mr. Barker's, and nearly opposite Mr. Sylvanus Percival's.

His son, Nathaniel, afterwards occupied the house, and improved the ship yard, until his removal to Winchendon. The vessels built, both by father and son, were small, seldom exceeding two hundred tons burthen, and were mostly schooners.

After the Silvesters, the yard was improved by Jonathan Sampson, from 1795 to 1820, he residing in Pembroke, just over the bridge, on the hill, in the house now occupied by Sumner Stetson, which has been a tavern stand.

Mr. Sampson built many vessels for the Cod Fishery at the Grand Banks; and some ships, of from two hundred and fifty to three hundred tons burthen, for residents of Duxbury and Cape Cod, for citizens of Boston, and for Nathaniel Cushing, of Hanson. These ships were for the Southern trade, for the West Indies, and for different ports in Europe; and their stern-posts, it is said, stood quite up to the old road, and some of the staging, for building the projecting part of the stern, was actually over the road, which, at this place, was but about two and one-half rods wide.

The yard next below, and close by the present bridge, was improved by the Clarks,—Nathaniel and Belcher,—sons of John Clark, of Scituate. The former, Nathaniel, lived on Washington street, in the low and ancient building now occupied by Mr. Henry Bates, and died in 1814, aged seventy-three. The latter, Belcher, lived in a house which stood where stands that of Mr. Samuel Salmon, and died in 1826, aged eighty-four. The yard improved by these brothers, is said to have been occupied by their father before them. It was probably established as early as 1736, but no vessels were built there after the year 1800. Zebulon, the son of Belcher, born in 1780, recollects when his father built, while he was a lad.

The next yard, a small one, was improved for a time by Dea. Isaac Perry; but seems not to have been occupied by him long, as we subsequently find him building at a yard farther down the stream.

Mr. Perry is spoken of as a man of unblemished integrity, and of high moral excellence. He was born in 1736, and died in 1825, at the age of eighty-nine. He lived on Washington street, and his house stood where stands that of Mr. Josiah Winslow, near the corner of Hanover street.

The next yard was at a little distance farther down, and its site is marked by a work-house, yet standing, and by two gigantic oaks, of venerable appearance, at least three centuries old, which were, of course, of goodly size when the Pilgrims landed! Against these trees, still lean the logs, forming the frame work of the old saw pit, and around the spot is a vast deposit of decaying vegetable matter, accumulated in the yard, black, spongy, and apparently valuable for the compost-heap, which might be profitably carried off to add its enriching materials to the stercoreary of the owner of the land.

This yard was improved by Thomas Barstow, the father of Col. John B. Barstow, of this town; and by Capt. Robert Lenthal Eells, who was an extensive landholder; one of the wealthiest citizens of his day; a man whose chief greatness consisted in the greatness of his soul; of unbounded hospitality; charitable; kind to the poor and the suffering; devoted to every thing public spirited; eminently patriotic; an able officer in the war of the Revolution; who opened his doors cheerfully and widely to all who were engaged in that struggle; and whose daughters, evinced their zeal for Liberty, in ministering to the wants of the soldiers, and in manufacturing cartridges for the use of the companies enrolled in the town.

This yard, which was established about the year 1755, was improved by Messrs. Barstow and Eells, for about thirty years; the former having the superintendence of the wood work, and the latter furnishing the iron work,—his blacksmith shop standing near the hay scales, by the Four Corners.

No very large vessels were built by this firm, as previous to the Revolution, the burthen seldom exceeded two hundred tons; but after that period, and especially after the opening of the present century, by their descendants, and by others, vessels of from three hundred to four hundred tons burthen were built, from 1810 to 1834.

Mr. Barstow died in 1797, aged sixty-five ; and Mr. Eells in 1800, aged sixty-eight ;—both being born in the same year, 1732 ; and in the same month, Februray ;—the former on the 27th, and the latter the 17th ! Companions in life, and cousins, they dwelt in harmony, and their business was conducted successfully and prosperously.

A few years previous to the death of Mr. Barstow, his son, John B., was concerned in ship-building at this yard, with his father ; in which business he was afterwards joined by his brother Elijah, and they, together, improved the yard, until 1817, when they went to a site still farther below, which presented greater facilities for launching. This firm built many ships for Nantucket and New Bedford, for the whaling business, of from 300 to 350 tons burthen ; also many merchant ships, among which were five, built for the sons of John B. Barstow, who were at that time in business in the city of New York.

Next to the yard of the Barstow's, was one called Paige's yard, which was afterwards occupied by Dea. Isaac Perry, and occasionally by Albert and Josiah Smith, when they had a small vessel to build, and when their other yard was occupied.

Next below, was the yard of Col. John Bailey, whose master workman was Joseph House. This yard was not long improved by Mr. B., he being personally engaged in other business ; and it was afterwards occupied by Albert and Josiah Smith, sons of Josiah Smith, of Pembroke, who married sisters, — daughters of Capt. Robert L. Eells, himself a blacksmith by trade, but a ship-builder in connection with Thomas Barstow.

Capt. Albert Smith, in early life, followed the seas, as a ship-master, being in the Baltimore trade for some time, and making several voyages to Russia, during the reign of the Emperor Paul.

About the year 1790, he settled in Hanover, residing on Broadway, in the house now occupied by Martin Stetson, which he bought of Joseph Josselynn ; and, forming a partnership with his brother Josiah, he carried on the business of ship-building for about ten years, from 1798 to 1808, fitting for sea, on an average, three vessels a year, of from 300 to 400 tons burthen, for himself and others, for Liverpool and other European ports. The descendants of Capt. Smith are now in the service of the United States ; his oldest son, Joseph, being a Commodore in the United States Navy, and Chief of the Bureau of Docks and Yards ; and Albert, Esq., being an eminent lawyer in Washington city.

After the Smiths, Edward and Samuel Eells built a few vessels at this yard ; and subsequently, it was improved by John B. and Elijah Barstow, from 1817 to 1835 ; and then by Elijah Barstow, Jr. ; the latter of whom, in connection with Capt. Thomas Waterman, is still engaged in the business, at their yard in Scituate, below Fox hill.

The last yard, on the Hanover side, was that of David Kingman, who built the tavern stand at the Four Corners, now occupied by Mr. Joseph Pocorny. Isaiah Wing built one vessel, very near this yard, about the time of the last war ; and also Benjamin and Martin Stockbridge. Dea. Perry built one vessel at this yard, about 55 years ago ; — a ship of some 300 tons burthen.

Nearly all the above yards were on the land of Mr. Benjamin Stockbridge, and were comprised within the space of one third of a mile from the bridge ; from which their compactness and juxtaposition, may be easily judged.

Previous to the year 1795, the business demand was principally for vessels of a small size, such as could be easily launched on the river, and taken down the stream without much difficulty, from the bars. During the Revolution, Mr. Thomas Barstow built several small privateers, — some for Mr. Derby, of Salem. Towards the close of the last century, vessels of a larger size were in demand, besides the small fishing and coasting vessels ; and this call continued, until business was suspended by the war with Great Britain, in 1812.

The occurrence of that war, just as the business was in its most prosperous state, was a serious shock to those who were engaged in it ; but they re-commenced in 1815, after peace was declared ; though the growing scarcity of timber, and the obstruction of the channel of the river with rocks and sand bars, which rendered it tedious and expensive to get large ships down the stream, and over the bar at the mouth, caused the business to decline, until now, in Hanover, it has entirely ceased. The process of moving large ships, was by attaching the scows called gundaloes, (a corruption of gondolas?) two to the stern, and two to the stem; which were lashed down at low water, so as to lift the ship as the tide flowed.

Several attempts have been made to obtain aid from the National Government, for the improvement of the navigation of the North River; but hitherto, with but little success. In 1839, Col. J. B. Barstow, Joseph S. Bates, and Elijah Barstow, jr., were chosen a committee to petition for the appropriation of a small sum "for the purpose of removing sand-bars, and cutting a channel for the North River into Massachusetts Bay;" but their prayer was not favorably answered.

During the great storm of April 16th and 17th, 1851, the sea broke completely over the narrow strip of beach between the third and fourth cliffs, near Scituate harbor, at the very point where the cutting of a canal has been thought feasible.

A new petition for aid has been circulated within the past year; but we fear its fate will be like that of its predecessors.

The palmy days of ship-building, in Hanover, were from 1800, to 1808. Then, five or six yards were in active operation, and at least ten vessels were annually fitted for sea. The scene on the North River, was one of animation and industry. Every morning, the carpenters might be seen, crossing the pastures, or walking along the river bank, or over the tiny "Rainbow Bridge," to the place of their daily toil; and the stroke of the axe, the thump of the maul, the cheerful calls, and the various other sounds always heard in the ship-yard, constantly saluted the ears of the passers by.

The pasture, too, was strewed with timber; and teams of "fat oxen," daily brought in, from the forests around, their loads of round, or rough-hewn, white oak, beech, maple, and other timber; and oak and pine plank, for sheathing, and for the decks, &c. Then, business was stirring. All were active. And never since, has the village, at the corners, presented so cheering a spectacle of thrift and prosperity. That village is beginning to rise again; and though the character of its business has changed, yet the promise is fair, that ere long, if a liberal policy prevails, it will become, once more, a place of activity, and the number of its buildings, and the advantages of its citizens, be greatly increased

PROVISIONS FOR THE POOR.

For many years after the incorporation of the town, the poor were kept in the families of their friends, an annual appropriation being made for their maintenance. The number thus aided was small, so that no further provisions in their behalf were necessary, and no other arrangement could have been more generally acceptable to those whom misfortune had reduced to a state of dependence.

Oct. 29, 1736, "Voted to the widow Frances Josselynn £5 old tenor, to keep Jean Barron from Nov. 18, 1746, to Nov. 18, 1747, but if she should have any extraordinary sickness in that time, to be further allowed what is reasonable."

Mar. 5, 1750, "Voted to give Thomas Curtis 31s., old tenor, per week, for boarding Margaret Young one year in sickness and health, the town finding clothes, and paying Doctor's bills, if any there be; and he agreed to keep her at that price."

At the same date, "Voted £15 to Benjamin Woodworth, for bringing up John Loud's (or Ladd's) daughter to the age of 18 years; and £24 for bringing up the said Loud's youngest son to the age of 21 years."

This course continued to be followed even after the Revolution, and so late as the beginning of the present century; and to the selectmen was entrusted the general oversight of those thus aided, to see that they were properly cared for.

Thus, in 1782, the selectmen were instructed to provide for the poor, and to supply Job Long's family with the necessities of life. March 13, 1786:—The selectmen and Dea. Timothy Robins were chosen a committee "to agree with Mr. Samuel Witherell, to maintain his father during his natural life, by the lump or by the week, as they shall agree, and pay him out of the town's money."

Oct. 17, 1796. The selectmen were instructed "to provide for the poor under their care, and call on the Treasurer for money as they shall want it."

About the year 1803, we find the first notice of a change in this mode of procedure. The selectmen were then chosen a committee, to meet a committee of the town of Pembroke, "to consult on the expediency of building a work-house."

In 1809, a donation of $278, having been made to the town by Maj. John B. Barstow for the poor, he, with the selectmen, were chosen to distribute the same.

In 1814, it was "voted to raise $110, to purchase Mary Peterson's house and land for a poor house;" and the purchase was made,—but the town being dissatisfied, in 1816 the building was sold, and for the first time on the records, it was voted to put out the poor at auction to the lowest bidder ; the auction to be at the Central Meeting House, on Wednesday, Jan. 31, at 4 P. M.; and the person bidding off the same was "to give good and sufficient security to the overseers of the poor that he will support them well, in sickness and in health, and furnish them with good and comfortable clothing, and pay all expenses for physicians, and to receive pay for the same at the end of the year."

But this policy, though adopted by many towns in Massachusetts, and quite common twenty-five years ago, was soon found to be exceedingly defective, and liable to serious evils. Enough allowance was not made for that principle or maxim, which prompts men, in business affairs, to trade sharply, and to make the most of their bargains, of whatever character they may be. We do not deem it necessary to revive the controversies which grew out of this system, which, notwithstanding its exceptionable features, continued to be followed for twenty years. We need only say that in 1836, it was voted to establish a Poor House, and a Committee of five, consisting of Ebenezer Simmons, Turner Stetson, Benjamin Mann, Levi Curtis, and William Morse, were chosen to look up a suitable farm ; and in a very short time, the present establishment, located on Washington street, in the North-easterly part of the town, was purchased, which was formerly Nathaniel Jacobs' place,—and here the poor have since been kept in a manner creditable to the liberality and humanity of the Town. The expense of maintaining the poor is about $600 per annum, and the number supported for some years past, has been from eight to ten.

TEMPERANCE CAUSE.

It is well known to all conversant with the history of our country, that, until within a comparatively recent period, spirituous liquors were a common beverage of all classes in the community, and were freely sold and freely used in every town in this State. True, the evils attendant upon intemperance have been always felt, and always acknowledged ; and efforts have been made, from time to time, to check the tide which threatened to overwhelm. But it is only within the past twenty or thirty years, that these efforts have been attended with any signal success. And even now, such is the selfishness of avarice on the one hand, and such are the cravings of appetite, on the other, that the temperance cause has attained but a measurable triumph, and much remains to be done, before every mind will be actuated by right motives, and brought under the influence of the laws of moral rectitude.

That great good has been accomplished, however, only those interested to perpetuate evil can deny. The evidences of improvement are too palpable to be mistaken. The thriftiness of our villages; the decrease of native pauperism; the general sobriety of the people; the absence of loungers at the bar-room of the tavern, or at the grocery on rainy days; and the rareness of the sight, especially in the country, and in the open highway, of men lying under the walls, sleeping away the effects of their deep potations; — all these are tangible proofs that something has been done; — proofs which none can gainsay; — and we trust the time is not far distant, when it will be deemed, throughout our land, beneath the dignity of any one claiming the attributes of humanity, to taste of the intoxicating cup; and when reason shall sit firmly on its throne, and all who are made in the image of God, shall stand erect in their manhood, not victims of passion, or slaves of appetite; but walking the earth in the exercise of those nobler qualities, which distinguish us from the brutes, and which ally us to angels.

Were we writing a treatise on temperance, much that is valuable in the history of the cause might be gathered from the Laws of Plymouth Colony, and from those of the Massachusetts Colony. But however interesting these extracts might be, we shall be obliged to omit them, inasmuch as we have enough from the records of our own town, and contemporary annals, to fill the space we propose to devote to this subject.

Although the law passed by the Legislature of Massachusetts, and called "the Maine Law," is regarded by some as a novel feature in human legislation, and an encroachment upon the rights and liberties of the people, yet laws embodying similar principles, or partaking of a similar character, were passed long ago, in this country.

In 1754, a bill called the "Excise bill," for "granting to his Majesty an excise upon wines and spirits distilled, &c.," was introduced, and taken into consideration by the people; and the town of Hanover, after debating it for some time, "Voted, that the said bill is disagreeable to the minds of the town, and Voted, that David Stockbridge, Esq., representative of said town, be desired to use his endeavors to prevent the said Bills passing into an Act."

The extent and character of the traffic in spirits at this time, and the course of argument by which the business was sustained, may be gathered from the following luminous and curious statement from Minot's History of Massachusetts, vol. 1, pp. 155-161.

"A great part of the inhabitants of Massachusetts Bay live chiefly by the sea, and are employed in

1. Fisheries. 2. Navigation. 3. Building and providing materials for ships.

By these employments, they depend upon Great Britain for

1. Clothes. 2. Materials for furnishing their houses of many kinds. 3. Cordage and sail cloth for equipment of their vessels. 4. Lines, hooks and cables, &c., for the fishery.

They are dependent on the northern Colonies for bread corn.

RUM is their chief manufacture; there being upwards of 15,000 hogsheads of rum manufactured in the Province annually.

This, with what they get from the English islands, is the grand support of all their trades and fishery; and without which they can no longer subsist.

Rum is a standing article in the Indian trade, and the common drink of all the

1. Laborers. 2. Timber-men. 3. Mast-men. 4. Loggers. 5. Fishermen in the Province.

These men could not endure the hardships of their employments nor the rigor of the seasons without it.

Rum is the merchandize principally made use of to procure

1. Corn. 2. Pork for, 1. Their fishermen, and 2. Other navigation.

This is done in winter, when there is no catching fish, nor any other employment for the fishermen.

Then, a great number of fishing vessels with their men, go to North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, &c. These trade with rum and molasses for corn and pork, which serves for a supply for the next season.

Newfoundland has large annual supplies from Massachusetts Bay of rum, molasses, pork, &c., without which they could not carry on the fishery to so much advantage.

Halifax at present, and for some years at least, must depend on New England for a supply of those articles in order to carry on the fishery; which can only be done by coming at those commodities at a moderate price.

The rum carried from Massachusetts Bay, and the other northern Colonies to the coast of Guinea, is exchanged for gold and slaves. The gold is sent to London, to help pay for their annual supplies; and the slaves are carried to the English Sugar Colonies, and exchanged for their commodities, or sold for bills of exchange on Great Britain.

So that rum is useful in all their traffic, especially in supporting the fishery; not only as it is the common drink of persons in that business, but in being a means of employing the vessels and men at a season, when no other business can be carried on by them; and procuring provisions for their supplies, which otherwise they could not have but by their labor at the season proper for fishing.

From evidence in the cause, when before the lords of trade, it appeared that Jamaica at this time produced about 12,000 puncheons of rum, of 110 gallons each, per annum; Barbadoes 12,000; Antigua from 10,000 to 12,000; St. Christophers 6,000; Monsterrat 1,500; amounting in the whole to at least 41,500 puncheons, or 4,565,000 gallons!!!

But the excise bill was passed; and on the Church Records of Hanover for 1755, we find the following curious documents relating to the Act:—

And at the same time, Shuble Munroe gave in his account of two gallons, as said Bates did."

We presume the foregoing extracts give us the names of nearly, if not quite all, the legal voters, or heads of families in the town.

From another source,—the old Justice Records of David Stockbridge, Esq., we learn that all who violated the law, were prosecuted and fined for the same; and actions against Adam Rogers of Marshfield, Bezaleel Palmer, Stephen Otis, Jr. of Scituate, David Allen, of Middleboro', Jesse Thomas, of Pembroke, Ebenezer Mann, of Pembroke, are recorded, the fines being generally 40s. for each offence.

About the year 1816, a society for the suppression of intemperance was formed in Hanover, and at a meeting of the Association, held April 28, 1817, an address was delivered by the Rev. John Butler, pastor of the Baptist Society, which was printed,—a copy of which is in our possession. It is a plain and sensible document, its reasoning being straight-forward and cogent, and its array of arguments clear and convincing.

We take from it the following extract:—

“By the exertions of this Association, the prevailing practice of intemperance has been brought into public view. It has been taken under serious consideration by many, and made a subject of conversation by all classes of people among us. The object of this society has been proposed for consideration to the selectmen of the adjacent towns, with whom it has been favorably received. The respectable inhabitants of the town of Scituate have felt the importance of the subject, and united in an association for the suppression of this public vice. The several retailers in the town of Hanover have been respectfully addressed upon the importance of observing the wise and good laws of this Commonwealth, made expressly for the regulation of their conduct; and measures have recently been taken, which we have good reason to hope, will secure obedience to these laws.”

In 1830, May 3, the town voted, “that the selectmen be requested not to license any retailer or innholder, who shall, between this and August, permit spirituous liquors to be sold and drank in and about their premises, and engage not to sell after that time to be drank in like manner.”

For several years past, a temperance committee has been annually appointed by the town, to take cognizance of all violations of the laws; and though we do not affirm that no ardent spirits have been brought into the place, or sold, or used by the people, yet no one can doubt, that there is more sobriety, more order, and a better state of moral feeling in the community, than existed twenty-five or thirty years since.

May the blessing of God continue to rest upon this, and every other cause which has for its object the moral elevation of our race, and the deliverance of the soul from the dominion of lust and destructive appetites.

SLAVERY.

It may seem to some singular to find anything in a town history in Massachusetts, relative to the subject of human slavery. And yet, it is a well known and undeniable fact, that, previous to the Revolution, slavery existed in all the colonies, not even excepting our own; and slaves were held in almost every family wealthy enough to own them. The minister, the deacon, and even quiet members of the Society of Friends, if we mistake not, held slaves; and justices of the peace, innholders, proprietors of forges, &c., all sinned after the similitude of the same transgression!

The following items, which we have gleaned from various sources, may be interesting in this connection, and present as full a sketch of the history of slavery in this town, as we are able to furnish.

In 1764-5, the number of slaves held in Scituate was 107!<sup>2</sup> The number in Hanover is not given. At the same date there were thirteen Indians in Scituate;<sup>3</sup> but the number in Hanover is not given.

Not only were blacks, but Indians, were held as slaves; and intermarriages between the black and red race were not infrequent.

We do not know that we can give the names of all who held slaves in Hanover; we are only able to present the scattered notices of marriages, births and deaths, which occur on the records of the town and church.

These are as follows:

Dick, James Bailey's negro, and Daphne, Col. Barker's negro, were married Dec. 25, 1741, and Boston and Margaret, slaves of Elijah Cushing, were married in the same year. Windsor Jonas, and Mercy Red, an Indian, were married March 9, 1749. Jack and Bilhah, Job Tilden's servants, were married Feb. 8, 1751. Tradition says, that Mr. T. raised slaves for the market! Newport and Kate, slaves of Nathaniel Silvester, were married

This child belonged to Edward Jenkins, of Scituate, and was given by him to Mr. S. soon after its birth. A negro child of Ensign John Bailey, died August 7, 1751. A negro child of Lieutenant Job Tilden, died Dec. 25, 1754, and another February 12, 1760. Dinah, negro servant to Mr. Amos Sylvester, died Feb. 1756. Ben, an Indian slave of John Bailey, died May, 1756. Bilhah, Joshua Barstow's negro woman, died May 21, 1757. Jeffrey, negro of Colonel Turner, was drowned in the furnace pond, Aug. 29, 1765. Dick, slave of Rev. Samuel Baldwin, died Feb. 3, 1762. Phebe, negro slave to David Jacobs, died Jan. 8, 1769,—also Jane, a negro servant of David Jacobs, died Feb. 28, 1775. Jesse Boos, negro slave of Rev. Samuel Baldwin, died Oct. 5, 1775. Daphne, an old negro, probably Col. Barker's slave, died March 10, 1779. London, negro of the widow Turner, died Jan. 15, 1786. Dick, negro of Col. Bailey, and husband of Daphne, died Jan. 20, 1786, aged 90. Mingo, negro of Capt. Simeon Curtis, died April 7, 1791, aged 70. He lived on Silver street, with his wife and child, and gave the name to Mingo's field. Susannah, negro of Deacon Bass, died May 2, 1791, aged 73. Bess, negro of Rev. John Mellen, died Sept. 20, 1793, aged 36. Mary, negro of Robert Estes, died March 20, 1794, aged 76. Cuba, a negro woman of Deacon Brooks, died March 25, 1795, aged 84. Cuffee Josselynn, a slave of Col. Joseph Josselynn, died in the almshouse, at the advanced age of 103, in 1831. He was out in the Revolution as a soldier, as the rolls show.

It is related of one slave, held at the Four Corners, that he earnestly desired to be free, and often asked his master to give him his liberty, who put him off with the promise that he should be made free, as soon as all the water in the North river had run by; and the simple-hearted creature was frequently seen looking wistfully at the stream, doubtless hoping daily that it would become dry!—but alas! for him, slavery knew no end but death. Heartily do we rejoice that our State no longer labors under this terrible curse!—and would to God it were abolished in all our land, that in truth, as well as on parchment, all were free and equal,—possessing and enjoying their inalienable rights,—and that the banner of freedom might wave triumphantly over every mile of our territory.

BURIAL GROUNDS.

Of our burial grounds, the oldest in the town is that near the centre meeting house. In 1727, the town of Scituate made a grant of ten acres of land to Hanover, for a “training field and burial ground;” and on the records of Hanover, under date of June 17, 1727, Benjamin Curtis and Samuel Barstow were chosen agents to attend the Surveyors in laying out the same, and in case they could not agree where it should be laid out, it was voted that the two surveyors should lay it out at their discretion.

This land was divided into two lots, one of seven and a half acres, for the training field, and the other of two and a half acres, for the burial ground; but we find no record which fixes the original bounds of either lot. The former, the training field, seems to have been exchanged with John Rogers, in 1730, as June 15th of that year, Isaac Buck was chosen agent to give John Rogers a deed of seven and a half acres of land in the town’s behalf, and to take in return, a deed for three acres; and at the same time it was voted to pay Isaac Buck £3 for one acre of land. We incline to the opinion that Buck’s acre was that on which the meeting-house was built, and that the three acre lot of Rogers constituted the burial ground. In 1769, we find on the Scituate records, the minutes of the laying out of the ten acres granted in 1727;—one of the pieces, containing nearly eight acres, being near the residence of Mr. Baldwin; and the other, of two acres and a little over, is described as "lying near Captain John Bailey's new house, in the East of the way that leads to Deacon Thomas Roses's, &c."

In 1788, David Stockbridge, Esq., "for and in consideration of his good will and affection to the town, presented a piece of land containing one acre, one quarter and twenty-five rods, to enlarge the present burial ground; said lot lying westerly of the former lot."

In 1792, £6 were voted for the purchase of a Pall, and in 1804, $103,55, for fencing the ground. In 1808, it was voted "to purchase a hearse, and build a house for the same on the burying ground," where it still stands.

A gift of land for the enlargement of the burial ground, has just been received from John Barstow, Esq., of Providence, son of Col. J. B. Barstow, of Hanover, on which occasion the following votes were passed:

"Whereas John Barstow, Esq., of Providence, Rhode Island, a native of Hanover, in consideration of his "respect to the birth-place of his ancestors for six successive generations," has been pleased to present to the Town, as a token of his good-will and regard, a Deed of Two Lots of Land in Hanover, adjoining the present burial-place, near the centre meeting house, for the enlargement of said burial ground, which lots are fully described in the Deed and Plan forwarded by him; therefore Voted, that the Town accept said lots, with the Proviso attached, in reference to driftways, and agree to improve the same according to the intents of the Donor.

"Voted, that the Deed of said lots be entered at large upon the records of the Town, in token of our acceptance of the same, and to perpetuate the remembrance of the liberality of the Grantor.

"Voted, that the Town duly appreciate the generous motives which have prompted this gift; and that the filial reverence therein displayed for the resting place of the Dead, meets our cordial approbation, and our hearty sympathy.

"Voted, as a token of our respect for the memory of the departed, and of our desire to co-operate with the generous Grantor, in the laudable object which he had in view in said gift, that the Town will, at their earliest opportunity, take such measures to cause said burial-ground to be suitably fenced, and otherwise improved, as may render the spot more attractive in its appearance, and more in accordance with the genial spirit of our holy religion.

Voted, that the Town Clerk be requested to forward a copy of these proceedings to Mr. Barstow, at his earliest convenience ; and that the minutes of this meeting be entered on the records of the Town."

We trust these votes will soon be carried into effect ; that our ancient burial ground, will be cleared of stones and bushes ; that trees and shrubbery will be set out to adorn it ; and that the whole will be enclosed with a good and substantial fence.

To beautify and adorn the "place of the dead," is one step towards embalming their memories more effectually in the hearts of the living, and tends to cherish a purer regard for the spot where our fathers sleep in peace.

In the extreme North-easterly part of the town, or in the Snappet neighborhood, is another burial ground, owned by proprietors, who reside in Hanover and South Scituate. This was established about the year 1789 ; but, like the lot in the centre of the town, it needs attention, as the fences are fallen, and the ground is bare, and destitute of shubbery.

We present the following table of longevity, to show that a fair share of the citizens of Hanover have lived to a "good old age," and passed the bounds of three score years and ten, and even four score years, allotted to man as the term of his earthly pilgrimage. We give the date of death, and the age, so far as they can be learned :—

CHAPTER XIII.

HIGHWAYS — STREETS — BRIDGES — PONDS — STREAMS — AND LANDMARKS.

The details of the laying out of highways are usually of but little interest to readers in general. They have, however, a local value, and are often of great assistance, in fixing the residence of some, of whom we could otherwise obtain but little information. We shall make our sketch as brief as possible, consistent with the omission of nothing of importance. There were some roads laid out before the incorporation of the town, and whilst it formed a part of Scituate. The "Drinkwater road," so called, was one of these, also the "country road," from Boston to Plymouth, that from the Four Corners towards Scituate harbor, and others. The following are from the town records:—

Mar. 29, 1729. A highway laid out near the road from James Hatch's to the saw-mill, thence to the S. E. corner of Amasa Turner's ten acre lot; thence to a marked tree in James Hatch's range; thence to John Cobb's corner; thence to the corner between John Cobb and Bachelor Wing; and thence to Drinkwater road, near where the old gate stood by the widow Deborah Hatch's. Vol. 1, p. 375.

Mar. 29, 1729. A private way laid out, from Ebenezer Curtis's barn, to the W. end of Joseph House's house; thence to Joseph Curtis's lot; thence to Benj. Curtis's lot; thence to Timothy White's great lot; thence to Josiah Curtis's ten acre lot; thence to the N. W. corner of Joseph Randall's 10 acre lot; thence to a tree at the corner of John Rogers's land, which the town bought of the said Rogers; and thence to the road near the new meeting house. Vol. 1, p. 375. This was part of Curtis street.

Mar. 29, 1729. A private way laid out, from Abington line, near Michael Wanton's house, where Samuel Staples lives, thence to the top of a dug hill; and thence to the county road beyond Elijah Cushing's. Vol. 1, p. 375.

Mar. 16, 1730. A driftway laid out, beginning at the gate near the widow Deborah Hatch's, as the way goes down the dug hill; thence to Caleb Barker's line, between his land and that of Isaac Hatch; and so on to the way to the furnace, and thence to the furnace mill dam. Vol. 1, p. 374.

Mar. 16, 1730. A driftway laid out, beginning at the N. side of the road leading to the furnace, on the W. division of widow Deborah Hatch's garden to her son; thence to Caleb Barker's corner; thence to Drinkwater dam; and thence, being a private way, running to the line of the 8th Pond Lot; thence to Otis's corner; thence to House's corner; thence to the corner of Otis's pond lots; thence to the W. end of Edward Estes's dam; thence to the corner of Thomas Rogers's and Charles William's lot; and thence to a stake in the line between Joseph Ramsdell and Thomas Wilkes. Vol. 1, p. 374.

Feb. 25, 1730. A private way laid out, from the way from Barstow's to the New Forge, in the range between James and Nathaniel Torrey's; thence to the N. E. corner of Benjamin Hanmer's field; thence to the upper end of Nathaniel Torrey's lot; thence to the corner of Benjamin Stetson's lot; and thence in his range and Matthew Stetson's range, to Drinkwater road. Vol. 1, p. 272.

Feb. 27, 1737. A private way laid out, from a corner of the lands belonging to the heirs of Capt. Joseph Barstow, deceased, near Matthew Stetson's shop, to the highway, from Samuel Eell's shop to Capt. Joseph Josselynn's house. Vol. 1, p. 27.

Oct. 24 1774. A highway laid out, at the request of Matthew and William Estes, beginning at the top of the hill above William Estes's shop, and turning N. to the E. side of said Estes's fence, to Matt. Estes's line, and thence to Caleb Barker's fence on said Estes's land, till it comes to Matt. Estes's orchard fence. Vol. 1, p. 370. Now Plain street.

Mar. 21, 1749. A way laid out, from the end of the lane leading by Capt. Ezekiel Turner's house ; thence to the W. side of a brook in Dea. George King's land ; thence to Ridge hill ; thence as the said hill goes, to the most convenient place of coming off the same into the way that goes from Ezekiel Turner's to the county road ; and thence as the cartway goes to said county road. Vol. 2, p. 7.

Mar. 5, 1750. Accepted the highway laid out from Ezekiel Turner's, to the way leading from Elijah Cushing, Esq.'s to Hatch's mill. Vol. 1, p. 57.

June 29, 1751. A way laid out, from the way from David Jenkins's to Abijah Stetson's, near the S. E. corner of said Stetson's cornfield, and thence by a cartway cleared out by said Stetson, till it comes to the way at the foot of the great lots, &c. Vol. 1, p. 369.

1756. A highway laid out to Abington, through land of John Bray and Benjamin Studley.

Feb. 27, 1758. A way laid out, from the Beech woods saw mill dam, as the way now goes, till it comes to the W. side of the cedar swamp, thence to John Bray's barn ; and thence to the S. E. of Abington way. Vol 2, p. 207.

Feb. 27, 1764. A way laid out from the land of Marlboro' Turner, and the heirs of Joseph Curtis, late of Hanover, deceased ; thence N. as the way now lies to Samuel Whiting's and James White's land ; thence to a beech tree on Joshua Jacobs's land ; thence to the S. end of the lane between the land of Thomas and William Whiting ; and thence N. as the way now lies, till it comes to the N. bounds of the town of Hanover. Vol. 2, p. 208. Whiting street.

Mar. 26, 1764. A way laid out, from the S. W. corner of Gideon Randall's land, on the N. side of the way that leads from the furnace to the meeting house ; thence to Isaac Hatch's fence ; thence turning W. and running straight to the way that leads from Mordecai Ellis's to the meeting house. Vol. 2, p. 208.

April 17, 1782. A way laid out, beginning at Scituate line, at the South end of the highway from Captain Thomas Collamore's to Hanover meeting-house ; thence to Job Curtis's corner ; thence to Oles's lot ; thence to the head of a wall between Benjamin Mann's and Thomas Hatch's; thence to the head of a wall between Thomas Hatch's and Job Curtis's; thence by Lemuel Curtis, jr.'s house; and thence to the highway heretofore laid out. Vol. 1, p. 357. Part of Curtis street.

April 25, 1791. A highway laid out across the land of Richard Estes, from the highway leading from said Estes's dwelling house to the old furnace, beginning at the South-west corner of his farm, and running North to the highway opposite the dwelling house of Isaac Hatch. Vol. 1, p. 368.

Dec. 1, 1792. Main street laid out, the details corresponding generally to those already given, under date of March 29, 1729, and April 17, 1782. Vol. 1, p. 351.

May 16, 1796. A way laid out, from the North-east corner of William Stockbridge's land, by the highway near Charles Bailey's, and thence West to the highway near John Bailey, jr's. Vol. 1, p. 355.

Aug. 9, 1798. A new road petitioned for at the North-west part of the town, and laid out, being that passing through Walnut and North streets.

Oct. 20, 1800. The town voted against the road from Lemuel Curtis's to the meeting-house, and not to accept the road turned out by Joshua Dwelley near his house.

Oct. 12, 1801. A way laid out across Birch bottom.

1807. The road widened on the East side of the burying ground.

Nov. 1819. The highway near Eleazer Joselynn's, past David Studley's shop, widened and straightened.

June 1820. A new way laid out from Zaccheus Estes's to Paul Perry's being part of Plain street.

April 7, 1835. The road past the house of George Curtis altered, and that portion of the old road between the termini discontinued.

May 5, 1835. A road laid out from Charles Dyer's over the driftway to the old forge, across land of Elisha Bass, John B. Barstow, and Reuben Rogers, out to the road to Pembroke.

June 17, 1837. A road laid out from Charles Dyer's house, to the road near Nathan Dwelley's, on the road from Hanson to the Four Corners. At the same date, the road from Hiram Gardner's to Scituate line was widened.

June 9, 1840. The road from Joseph W. and Zebulon Clark's, to School-house No 2, widened and straightened.

June 10, 1842. Road from David Mann's to Abington widened.

The roads laid out since the last date, are Pine street; that part of Hanover street called the Pine Island road; and a road from London bridge to Benjamin Mann's. Several alterations have likewise been made in existing roads, and new locations of portions of the old roads. The sum expended on highways, for a few years past, has been quite large, considering the population of the town, and the extent of its territory; but though the taxes have been high, they have been paid with commendable promptitude, and usually with but little complaint. One thing we think can be said of the town of Hanover with truth;—that whatever differences of opinion may have temporarily arisen, and however warmly party feelings may have been enlisted for or against certain measures; these feelings have never resulted in any violent outbreaks, as in some towns, nor have they produced alienations in families or neighborhoods, which have been lasting. We do not claim that our citizens are void of the common passions of humanity; but a spirit of forbearance has been usually exercised, worthy of all praise.

STREETS.

New Guide Boards, with substantial red cedar posts, are placed at the corners of all these streets, with the names, and suitable directions to the neighboring towns. In this respect, the town of Hanover has not only fulfilled its legal obligations, but has set an example which, were it followed by every town, would be of great assistance to the stranger and traveller.

It is bad enough to journey over unknown roads with guide boards, but where there are none, or only defaced and illegible ones, it not only occasions great perplexity, but is often a serious detriment, in the loss of time and distance, besides causing additional fatigue to both man and beast.

BRIDGES.

The principal bridge in the town, is that over North River, below the Four Corners, and on the old stage road from Boston to Plymouth. The first bridge was erected here in 1656, by Wm. Barstow, of which we have already given an account.

In 1682, the Colony Court ordered the second, or a cart bridge, to be built over the North River at Barstow's bridge, at the expense of three towns; Scituate to pay £10, Duxbury £5, and Marshfield £5.<sup>1</sup> The place where this bridge stood is still visible, and its old piers, built of loose stones, yet remain.

The present bridge, with split stone abutments, was built, by order of the County Commissioners, in 1829, and is a substantial structure, which promises to last for many generations.

At the Curtis forge is a small bridge, across the Indian Head River, which was probably built as early as 1704, the date of the erection of Bardin's Iron Works. Ludden's Ford, so called, is near here, over which Gov. Winthrop was carried upon a man's back, on his visit to Plymouth in 1632.<sup>2</sup>

Above this, and in the neighborhood of Dyer's, now Perry's Tack Factory, there was formerly a bridge, over the Indian Head; but it has been gone for some years.

Still farther up, at Silvester's, formerly Barstow's Forge, is another bridge, built as early as 1720, when the "new forge" spoken of on the town records, was set up.

Following the stream up, which now has the name of Drinkwater river, we come to the old Furnace Dam, near Daniel Barstow's, where Mighill's works were erected in 1710.

Ellis's bridge, is near Abner Magoun's, and was built as early as 1676, as an old saw mill then stood on the spot, which was burnt by the Indians in that year.

On the third Herring Brook, and below the Four Corners, is Palmer's bridge, named on the town records in 1742, and built by John Palmer, of Scituate, in 1660, who covenanted with John Bryant and Humphrey Johnson, to build a logway and bridge, and cover it with gravel, from firm upland to firm upland.<sup>1</sup> A permanent bridge of stone was built here, by vote of the town, in 1835.

Above this is Winslow's bridge, named on the records in 1765, and probably built as early as 1676, at which date the mill of Cornet Stetson, which was burnt by the Indians, stood near this spot.

Still farther north, is the bridge covering the stream between the mills of T. J. Gardner (formerly the Curtis mill,) and that of John Clapp. This was built as early as 1690.

At South Scituate line, is the dam connected with Jacobs' mills.

There are other small bridges over our brooks, which have local names.

PONDS AND STREAMS.

There are no natural ponds of any size in Hanover. Almost all the mill privileges, however, have formed artificial ponds, some of which are of considerable extent. The largest is at the forge near Daniel Barstow's, covering a portion of Drinkwater swamp.

North River, the principal stream, received its name before 1633, probably from the circumstance that its general course is from North to South.<sup>2</sup> It is very winding,—its length, from North River bridge to the mouth, being over eighteen miles, and the tide rises at the bridge from three to five feet,—there being a perceptible tide some distance higher up.

Its three chief sources are the Namatakeese, and Indian Head, which flow from the Mattakeesett Ponds in Pembroke; and the Drinkwater, which has its source chiefly in Abington, flows into the Pond by Bates & Holmes' Anchor Works, thence by a general southerly course, being a stream of some size, into Cobb & Cushing's Pond at Hanson, and thence easterly, forming the boundary line between Hanover and Hanson, past Silvester's Works, and Perry's Tack Factory, into Indian Head River.

Though hardly within our scope to describe this river throughout its course, its mouth being in another town, yet the views which it presents are often so beautiful and picturesque, that we can scarce resist the temptation to give them a passing glance, at the risk of being accused of deviating slightly from the beaten path in which historians usually tread. Suppose, then, we go down to the "landing" at the bridge, and step on board one of these "gundaloes," or flat barges, used by our farmers for transporting their salt hay from the marshes below. Shall ours be a moonlight excursion, with the workmen, starting thus early to be in season for the morrow? or shall we choose rather to glide down the stream by daylight? The former is certainly the time which the poet would choose; the silvery beams of "night's chaste queen," then shimmering upon the waters, and reflecting upon their placid bosom the trees which border its banks, fitting like shadows by as we move on, without oar, without sail, impelled only by the silent current;—anon passing a ship yard, where, in silent grandeur, looms up the hulk of some half-finished bark, which will soon be sailing upon the mighty deep, perhaps to distant climes;—and then opening upon an expanse of meadow, winding through which, like a thread of silver, the stream may be seen, far beyond us. What stillness reigns! How quiet! Not a sound of life is heard around us! Who can resist the feelings of reverence which such a scene is calculated to inspire!

The trip by day, though not possessing all the enchantment of that by night, is still beautiful, especially if taken when the leaves are changing, and our forests are robed in their autumn hues! It is certainly delightful, on a clear October morning, when the air is just cool enough to brace the nerves, and invigorate the lungs, to move noiselessly down with the tide, viewing the scenery on either bank, with the landings, and ship yards, the old "brickilns," "Cornet's rocks," and "gravelly beach," and noting the meanderings of the stream, sometimes almost doubling upon itself, and the fine farms which are passed, and the broad meadows, with the hills at a distance, and the sloping plains, until we arrive at the "New harbor marshes." Here, as Deane truly observes, "the scenery is on a sublime scale, when viewed from Colman's hill, or from the fourth cliff. The broad marshes are surrounded by a distant theatre of hills, and the river expands, and embraces many islands in its bosom. Here it approaches the sea, as if to burst through the beach, but turns almost at right angles to the East, and runs parallel with the sea shore, for nearly three miles before it finds its outlet, leaving a beach next the sea of twenty rods in width, composed chiefly of round and polished pebbles, excepting only the fourth cliff, a half mile in length, which comprises many acres of excellent arable land."<sup>1</sup>

The author has looked upon this broad, marshy tract, from Coleman's hill, after a severe storm, and seen the whole covered with water, like a mimic sea, with Will's Island standing out in the midst, like an oasis in the desert. The contrast between the smooth expanse here spread to view, and the turbulent waves, fretting the beach beyond, is exceedingly grand.

The town owns, near the mouth of the river, a body of flats, formerly quite valuable, the produce of which was annually rented for a considerable sum; but the depreciation in value of all fresh and salt meadow land within the last fifty years, renders these now comparatively worthless.

Deane asserts<sup>2</sup> that salmon were formerly taken in the North river, and that bass were once abundant in the winter season. Shad and alewives are still taken; and in the early history of the town, the alewife fishery was a subject of interest and contention, but has latterly ceased to attract much notice. Pembroke, Scituate, and Marshfield derive the most profit from this fishery.

The principal brooks are the following:—

1. The Third Herring Brook, which forms the boundary line between South Scituate and Hanover, rises in Valley Swamp, towards Hingham, and empties into the North river. This is a valuable water privilege, which was early improved for saw and grist mills, and to which have since been added tack factories. Alewives formerly passed up this brook as far as Valley Swamp.

2. Silver, formerly Hughs' Cross brook, rises near the central meeting house, and runs parallel to Silver street throughout its course, forming a small pond at the Curtis family mill, and emptying into the Third Herring brook.

3. Trout brook, rises in Randall Swamp, west of Washington street, and flows southerly past Church's Tannery, emptying into North river.

4. Torrey's brook, rises near Rose's Tannery, on Circuit street, and runs in a south-westerly direction, emptying into Drinkwater river.

5. Beaver dam brook, rises in the low ground east of the house of Zaccheus Estes, on Plain street, and runs westerly, emptying into Longwater brook.

6. Stetson's brook, rises in Hell swamp, back of Church's Hill, and west of Washington street, crosses Union, Main, and Cedar streets, and empties into Bailey's brook.

7. Bailey's brook, rises in the low ground east of Main street, which it crosses, flowing southerly until it receives Stetson's brook, and then westerly, emptying into Longwater brook.

8. Longwater brook, rises in South Scituate, near Accord Pond, and flows south-easterly, crossing North street beyond David Mann's, at a spot where formerly stood an old grist mill, thence forming the pond by Brooks' lower mill, and thence flowing southerly, crossing Cedar, Hanover, and Circuit streets, and emptying into Drinkwater river.

9. Studley mill brook, rises in Abington, and flows South-easterly, crossing Webster and Pleasant streets, forming near the latter a pond of considerable extent in the winter season, and emptying into Long-water brook.

10. Iron-mine brook, rises in the low ground near Broadway, and flows south-westerly, emptying into Drinkwater river.

There are other small streams in the town, dry in the summer season. Those that we have named are permanent, and some of them copious.

PART II.

FAMILY GENEALOGIES.

In the following pages, we have endeavored to give notices of all the families at present settled in the town, so far as records could be obtained, with extended sketches of several of those early settled on its territory, and now widely scattered abroad, throughout the country. We do not claim that these notices are perfect or complete. Every one who has had any experience in such matters, knows the difficulty, and even the impossibility, of attaining to absolute perfection. The author expects some errors will be discovered, but he trusts none of great consequence. No pains have been spared to obtain reliable information; authentic records have been consulted wherever they could be found; and traditions have never been given as authority, without first endeavoring to verify them from different sources.

The author ventures to hope that a little indulgence will be extended to him, when the variety and multiplicity of details and dates here presented are considered. It may be that some of these sketches are not so extensive as the families themselves might desire. But all that has been learned of these families is published; and want of materials, not of inclination, is the reason why more has not been said. The author has endeavored to do as equal justice as possible to all whose names are presented. He has published as cheerfully minutes of one family as of another. And according to the interest the parties themselves have taken, and the fulness of the information they have furnished, will the sketches be found.

The brief memoirs of individuals scattered throughout this part, are such as have been obtained from letters, and the recollections of those who knew the persons alluded to; and it is believed they will be found to be courteous and respectful, at least. The names of all who have ever lived in the town are not entered. Some were but transient residents. Others, who had descendants for two or three generations, finally removed, and are settled in different places. To have recorded all of these, would have enlarged the size of the volume, but probably not its interest. Enough, however, is given here to satisfy reasonable minds. Liberal criticism will never be deprecated. A candid judgment is all that is asked.

Trusting that this part of the work will prove acceptable to those for whom it was prepared, and not lacking in value as a family memorial, and a contribution to the general fund of genealogical knowledge, it is sent forth, in the belief, that though not free from errors, it contains much that is correct, and perhaps as few inaccuracies as most books of the kind.

The plan adopted in the following pages, is simple, and will be easily understood by all familiar with genealogical tables. But for the information of such as have not this acquaintance, we deem it necessary to remark, that the figures which precede the names of individuals, denote their place in the series, and the figures which follow, point back to the place in the series where the paternal ancestor is to be found. For instance, in the first family, the Bailey's, we read, "21. Benjamin, s. Charles 14." The figure 21, denotes that this is the twenty-first family described; and the figure 14 refers back to the fourteenth family, in examining which we find that Benjamin was born Feb. 24, 1797. By observing this rule, it will be easy to trace any family back to the first ancestor.

FUNERAL SERVICES.

Brief Sketch of the Life of the Venerable John Bailey.

The funeral of the late John Bailey took place at his residence, No. 7 Chancery Court, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and were attended by a large number of relatives and friends, among them friends from Concord, N. H., Haverhill, Cambridge and New Bedford. Mr. Bailey was a member of the Friends meeting, of Lynn, and the services were after the Quaker custom. Abigail Beede offered prayer, William O. Newhall offered prayer and spoke. Parker Pillsbury, of Concord, N. H., and Hon. James N. Buffum, of this city, spoke of the deceased in a very feeling manner. The features of the deceased looked very natural in the casket. A wreath of wheat and ivy, and some extra wheat was placed upon the casket. The remains will be kept as long as possible, before they are interred. John Bailey was a man well known as a strong abolitionist during the anti-slavery days. He was born in Haverhill, Mass., and at the time of his death, last Friday, his age was 96 years, 6 months and 7 days. He was the oldest man in Lynn, and those who were acquainted with him retain pleasant recollections. The Sabbath before he died he attended to shaving himself, as he always had done, and on Thursday last was sitting up, and conversed with a friend. During this conversation he inquired if "they had killed Butler," meaning in a political sense. When Butler was a candidate two years ago, Mr. Bailey voted for him, for he thought he had vim and courage. Mr. Bailey's last vote was for James A. Garfield for President. His first vote was for James Madison, and he voted for nineteen presidents in all. In 1848 Mr. Bailey came to Lynn and engaged in the watch and clock business, and he had kept a store on Union street, the last place being where the Kirtland Block now stands. He came from New Bedford to Lynn. While in New Bedford he took an active part in the anti-slavery question, and at one election in New Bedford, in which he was the means of tying the vote by his influence with the colored vote considerable feeling was shown by the Whigs who, on seeing Mr. Bailey coming up the stone steps, jostled against him purposely, and he was precipitated the whole length of the steps, narrowly escaping death, his large cape overcoat saving him. He proscribed by the Whigs, and his immense business (he having nearly all the chronometer work to do) was taken from him. A relative approached him at this time and said to him "John, the Whigs will take thy business all away." He replied that as long as the fish in the sea swam and the clams lived on the shore, he would not sell his principles. His stand on the slavery question cost him his business. He leaves four daughters to mourn his loss, the oldest one, a widow of 67 years, living in Alta, Illinois, the other three daughters lived with him and cared for him during his last days. It was reported that he had one son living, but last November, William Bailey, the only son, was accidentally killed by falling a distance of 12 feet and striking the railing, on a dark night. During the closing years of John Bailey's life he retained his faculties in a remarkable degree. His last illness was inflammation of the lungs.

The Late John Bailey.

A New Bedford paper recently contained the following, which was scratched on the inside plate of an old clock:—

"Know all men whom it may concern that in the year 1837 John Bailey was proscribed on account of his political and anti-slavery principles, and work was taken from him by William R. Rodman, William T. Russell and other kindred whigs. O More, O Tempore."

Mr. Bailey read this a short time before his death and recalled the time when he scratched it on the brass plate in the clock. His memory was very vivid, and during his confinement to his house he often recalled the incidents in his political career.

A man by the name of McNulty, who committed a burglary and murdered the policeman in Boston some years ago, confessed on the gallows that he was the party who laid in wait for John Bailey night after night, for five or six weeks, about 32 years ago for the purpose of robbing him of his bag of jewelry and valuables which he was wont to carry to his home, from the store. McNulty was thwarted in his purpose however, for there was so much passing and repassing of people that he did not dare to make the attempt. He finally left the job, and thus Mr. Bailey lived to be the oldest man in Lynn.

"BARSTOW,
Naburn Hall, York.
Ermine, on a fesse sable, three crescents, or.
Crest, a horse's head, couped ar."

BARSTOW. This family is of English origin, and from the West Riding of Yorkshire, where the name still occurs. According to Whittaker's Ed. of Thoresby's Hist. of Leeds, "Edmond Barstow, Esq., J. P., for the North Riding of Yorkshire, was in 1816, possessed of Hingerskil, formerly the seat of the Hoptons, being the second husband of Ellinor Hopton, of the ancient and eminent family of Hopton of Hopton, by whom he had Edward, Thomas, Mary, Eleanor, and Henrietta. He was the son of Edward, the son of Thos. Barstow, of N. Allerton, whose da. Elizabeth, m. Darcy Conyers, Esq.; and his bro. Walter, was fa. of Mr. Jeremiah Barstow, of Leeds, who, by Alice, da. of Mr. John Douglass, of Anstrop Hall, had issue Jere., Esq., Mayor of Leeds, 1706, Michael of Wakefield, and Wm. of Leeds. The oldest son, by Elizabeth, da. of Mr. Wm. Brook, of Killingbrook, had issue Jere., d. unm., Wm., and Hannah."<sup>1</sup> We find in London, at the present date, James, and Thos. I. Barstow, Esqr's., barristers, in the Temple, who were of Yorkshire. The fa. of the latter is also a lawyer, in Yorkshire. We have likewise heard of the Rev. Francis Barstow, of Scalesboro' Park, who d. ab. 1830; of Mr. Barstow, of Green Gate House, near Leeds; and of Mr. Barstow, of Headingley, near Leeds, — a man of property.<sup>2</sup>

Four brothers of this name came early to N. Eng., and settled at Cambridge, Watertown, and Dedham. These were George, Michael, John, and William. Of but two, George and William, have we been able to learn when and how they came. We find that, on the 20th Sept. 1635, William Barstow, ae. 23, and Geo., ae. 21, embarked for N. Eng., in the Truelove, John Gibbs, Master. The place from which they came is not given, but they were probably of Yorkshire.

The following are the principal minutes which we have obtained of the history of these brothers.

1. George, one of the brothers, according to the Mids'x. Prob. Rec., m. Susan, da. Thos. Marrit; had land granted him in Dedham, in 1642;<sup>3</sup> was a member of the An. and Hon. Art. Co., in 1644;<sup>4</sup> a householder in Scit. in 1652, and a member of the second Church;<sup>5</sup> and d. in Camb. 18d. 6m., 1652, his will being on file, and his estate being appraised at £85 14s. 6d.<sup>6</sup> His wid.

Susan, d. at Camb. in 1654, and in the Invt. of her Est., allusion is made to a "steere and cow at Dedham, and two young heffers at Scituate," and Thos. Marrit is called her father, and was appointed guardian to her two ch.<sup>1</sup> This Invt. is signed by John Bridge and Michael Barstow. The names of the ch. were, 1., Margaret, bap. in Scit., Feb. 24, 1649-'50, and 2., George, bap. in Scit., June 12, 1652, his father being then dees'd. These ch. are alluded to in the will of Michael, of Watn., in 1674, and to each he left a legacy. Of their history we know nothing with certainty. We think it highly probable, however, that the Bars-tows of Rehoboth, descended from the son George. There we find that Saml., s. George and Mary, was b. May 1, 1705, and m. Mary Mason, Mar. 29, 1733; and this Geo., seems to have had a son Geo., b. at a previous date, prob. as early as 1690, before the fa. sett. in R. Geo., senr., d. Ap. 6, 1726, but his age is not given. Geo., jr., m. Martha Mason, Sep. 29, 1715, and d. May 11, 1733. His ch. were, 1. Martha, b. Ap. 16, 1716; 2. Jno., b. June 14, 1718, m. Susanna Carpenter, Mar. 15, 1743, and is prob. the one alluded to in letter of Eben'r. B., of Scot'd. Ct., who, he says, was "killed in the famous battle at the heights of Abraham, in Quebec, Canada, (1759,) leaving 3 ch., one of whom was Wm. (of Prov., m. Bethiah Bourn? June 10., 1773,) whose s. John? now resides in Killingly, Ct., and his son John is in Scot'd. Ct., and was previously of Prov., R.I."; 3. Hannah, Ap. 2, 1721, d. young; 4. Geo., Mar. 19, 1724, m. Abigail Mason? Mar. 14, 1753; 5. Hannah, Feb. 7, 1726-7.

NOTE.—Another John, called John the 3d., m. Judith Carpenter, Feb. 18, 1756? and had, 1. Lucy, Mar. 26, 1757? d. young. 2. Danl., July 25, 1759. 3. Abel, Oct. 20, 1760. 4. Huldah, Jan. 26, 1762. 5. Lucy, Jan. 26? 1762. 6. John, Mar. 6, 1765. "Joseph Munroe, of Rehoboth, m. Sarah Barstow, June 9, 1782."

2. Mig. Barstow brother of George, was made free-man of Mass. Mar. 3, 1635-6, and possessed in Wat., as per Rec., "1.—a homestead of 14 acs. 2.—2 acs. of meadow at beere brook. 3.—2 acs. of meadow in Plain Meadow. 4.—7 acs. of Plowland, being the 10th lot in the further plain. 5.—7 acs. of meadow, being the 10th lot in the remote meadow. 6.—12 acs. of upland beyond the further plain, being the 29th lot. 7.—a Farm of 129 acs. of upland, in the 5th division, and 8.—50 acs. of land, being a great dividend in the 4th div. and 9th lot.” He was a man of note in the hist. of the town, his name often occurring on its records, and he being Selectman in 1652, Rep. in 1653, and often on the Jury of trials.<sup>1</sup> From the disposition made of his property, we infer that he left no family. He was prob. m., and his w. Grace, d. July 20, 1671,—3 years before his own decease. No ch. are named. His will is dated June 23, 1674, and in it, he gives legacies to Rev. Jno. Sherman, of Wat.; to the Church of Christ in Wat.; and to Dea. Thos. Hastings, and Dea. Henry Bright, whom he names as his executors. The bulk of his property was disposed of as follows:—“To Hannah Barstow, alias Prince, one great bible, and the debt due to me in my booke, which her first husband, Wm. Barstow was indebted, &c.; to Elizabeth, w. of Wm. Randall, of Scit., £5; the same to Susan, w. of Wm. Perry, of Mfd.; to Michael, son of John Barstow, deceased, a lot of upland, &c. in Wat.; and to John and Jeremiah, ch. of the aforesaid John Barstow, dees’d., to ea. £15. The rest of the est., after paying debts, &c. to be divided into 10 shares, 2 of wh. parts or shares were given to the ch. of his bro. Geo. B. dees’d., and 8 to the ch. of his bro. Wm. dees’d.” His est. was appraised at £273 18s. 3d.<sup>2</sup>

3. John, although not expressly called so, was, we have no doubt, bro. of George and Michael, and resided in Camb., where he died in 1657, the Inv. of his Est. being entered the 20 d. 12 mo. 1657,<sup>3</sup> and consisting chiefly of farming utensils. In this Inv., mention is made of a widow, who appeared before the governor, Feb. 25, 1657-8 and testified to that being a true Inv. of the Est. of her husb. &c. As no will exists, we find no ch. named; but if he be the one alluded to in the will of Michael, above, he had 3 sons, Michael, John, and Jeremiah;—and if this Michael be the one who testified in the case of a complaint vs. Susanna Woodward et. al. 1671, 3, 6,<sup>4</sup> where he is called Michael, jr., and said to be ac. ab. 17, he was b. ab. 1654. We find that John, the father, instituted a suit vs.

Ann Hibbins, Relict and Exec. of Wm. Hibbins, desc'd., in 1656, 3, 29,<sup>1</sup> which was but about a year before his decease. The name of his wid. we have not learned. Michael, the son, m. Rebecca Thaire or Thayer, Jan. 12, 1676, and d. Dec. 2, 1698, leaving an only da. Hannah.<sup>2</sup> He owned "a homestall containing 6 acres of upland and meadow, with a mansion house, and barn, orchards, and cyder mill, &c."

The history of the other sons,—John and Jeremiah,—is involved in a little obscurity. There was a John Barstow in Scit. in 1678, who is called by Deane a son of Wm., formerly of Dedham, and who, he says, was prob. b. in Dedham. There was also a Jeremiah in Scit., who was "killed by the Indians in 1676," and whose wid. Lydia m. Richard Standlake, 1677. This Jeremiah is also called by Deane a son of Wm. of Dedham. But as there is no actual record of the birth of such sons to Wm., we think there is room to doubt the correctness of Deane's suggestion. It is certain that John of Camb., had sons Jno. and Jere., but not certain that Wm. had such. We think it most probable, therefore, that John and Jeremiah settled in Scituate, and were sons of John, who d. at Camb., and not of Wm. of Dedham.

Of their history, and descendants, we shall speak hereafter.

4. William, the fourth bro., was in Dedham in 1636, and signed the Pet'n. for the incorp'n. of that town under the name of Contentment.<sup>3</sup> The 16 d. 12 mo. 1642, grants of "upland ground fit for improvement with the plough," were made to him, and to his bro. George. He was a freem. in Scit. 1649, and the first settler, of whom we have record, on the present territory of H. He was prob. m. to his w. Anne, after he came to N. Eng., but we have found no record of this marriage, and cannot, therefore, give her maiden name in full. Mr. B. was a noted man in his day, as will be seen from what we have already said of him. He was also an extensive landholder, a man of high respectability, and a worthy and enterprising citizen. He d. in Scit. in 1668, æt. 56, leaving no will, and his wid. Anne, admin. on his Est.<sup>4</sup> In the will of Michael, his bro., mention is made of "8 ch. of his bro. Wm." We have succeeded in learning the names and dates of birth of but 5 of these. There seem to have been but 2 sons; the rest were probably daughters. Their names were, 1. Joseph, b. in Dedham, 6 d. 4 mo., 1639. 2. Patience, b. in Dedham, 3 d. 10 mo., 1643, m. Moses Simmons, of Scit., 1662. 3. Deborah b. in Scit. in Aug. 1650. 4. Wm. b. in Scit., in Sep. 1652. 5. Martha b. in Scit., 1655, m. Sam'l., eldest son of Sam'l. Prince, 1674, who d. bef. 1686. (N. E. Gen. Reg. 1851 p. 379.)

NOTE.—It would appear, from the will of Michael, of Watn., that the w. of Mr. B. m. a Prince.

5. John, s. John 3, is prob. the one who was a householder in Scit. in 1678. According to Deane, "a consid. tract of land was laid out to him W. of the So. Meeting-house common, extending to Jordan Lane. His house was 50 rods south of the present road, and was afterwards the house of John Ruggles," &c. He m. Lydia Hatch, Jan. 16, 1678, da. of Wm. Hatch, who moved to Swansey, and had 1. Job, Mar. 8, 1679. 2. Jeremiah, Aug. 28, 1682. 3. John, Feb. 15, 1684, bap. an adult, July 18, 1708, and prob. d. unm. 4. Jerusha, Nov. 21, d. Dec. 18, 1687. 5. Susanna, May 5, 1689. 6. Abigail, Mar. 8, 1692. 7. Lydia, Mar. 26, 1696.

6. Jeremiah, s. John 3, is prob. the one who was killed by the Indians, with Capt. Michael Pierce, of Scit., at Rehoboth, in 1676. He m. Lydia ———, and she, after his decease, m. Richard Standlake, in 1677. The ch. of Mr. B. were, 1. John, and 2. Jeremiah, and of these the wid. Lydia was appointed guardian, "to demand and recover a legacy given unto each of them by their great uncle, Michael Barstow, late of Watn. decsd., as by his will." <sup>1</sup> Lett's. of Adm. were granted to John, ro. of "Jeremiah, deceased, so he keep a faire accompt thereof, and be redy to shew it before said Court, when by them required." <sup>2</sup> According to Deane, Jeremiah, the youngest of these sons, was a captive, for a time, amongst the Indians. <sup>3</sup> We have no knowledge of the subsequent history of this family.

7. Joseph, s. Wm. 4, m. Susanna Lincoln of Hm., May 16, 1666, (Hm. Rec.) and d. Ap. 17, 1712, and his wid. Jan. 31, 1730, being very aged. For some acc't of his life, see p. 18. That he was an extensive landholder, is evident from the large grants made to him by the Col. Court, which embraced many hundred acres,<sup>1</sup> now lying chiefly in Abington. These grants were in the vicinity of the grants made to Cornet Stetson, with whom Mr. B. seems to have been on terms of intimate friendship, and whose will he witnessed. ch.: 1. 8. William Barstow s. Wm. 4, m. Sarah —, and is called a husband-man.<sup>2</sup> He occupied his father's house, and probably, also, to some extent, followed the business of ship-building. He was owner of a saw-mill, and of other property, which he bequeathed to 2 sons and 5 das., and his will bears date 1711. ch.: 1. Rebecca, Mar. 12, 1676. 2. Martha, 1678, m. John McFarland? The resolutions of the latter body, of which he was presiding officer, state that, "in the death of Bro. Bates, we mourn the loss of an excellent, honest, true hearted man and mason:—one who has endeared himself to his brethren, by the urbanity of his manners, the uprightness of his deportment, and the benevolence of his heart." The altar of the chapter was also clothed with mourning; and we understand that a monument has been erected to the memory of Brother Bates, in the beautiful Cemetery at Mt. Auburn. CURTIS, CORTEIS, &c., an ancient English Family, settled in the Counties of Kent, and Sussex. (See Berry's Genealogies.) Stephen Curtis, was of Appledore, Kent, ab. 1450, and several of his descendants were Mayors of Tenterden, a town from which some of the first settlers of Scituate came. The earlier desc'ts. of this pedigree, are taken from an original pedigree, in the possession of the family, under the hand and seal of office of Sir Wm. Segar, Garter King-of-Arms, transcribed by John Philpot, Blanch Lion, and entitled, "This descent of the auntient familie of the Curteises, in the Co. of Kent, gents., faithfullie collected out of the office of Arms, the public records of the kingdom, private evidences of the familie, and other venerable monuments of antiquitie;" in which pedigree, and also in several old MSS., in the Harleian Coll., in the Brit. Mus., the arms of the family are given as annexed, without reference to any particular grant, but as borne by them in virtue of ancient usage.

William Curtis, came to N. Eng., in the Lion, in 1632, and was of Boston in that year, and afterwards of Rox'y., where his descendants still reside. He was the ancestor of Geo. T., and Benj. R., Esq's., of Boston.

Richard, William, and John Curtis, were of Scit., in 1643, and Thos., in 1649, who was of York, Me., and who returned there. John left no descendants on record. A few of the desc'ts. of Thos., are in Scit., and elsewhere; and more of the desc'ts. of Richard. The desc'ts. of Wm., are quite numerous, in Scit., Hanover, and other towns in Mass. These are here given.

EELLS, or EELES, John, was among the early settlers of Dorchester, and "dwelt at Fox-point." According to the History of Dorchester, now in the course of publication, and from which we quote, "it appears that he removed to Hingham;" and it is suggested, that "he may have been John the bee-hive maker, who finally settled in Newbury. He had a son Samuel, bap. in D., May 3, 1640."

Samuel Ells s. of Jno., according to family doc'ts., sett. in Milford, Ct. He commanded a garrison at Dartm'h, Mass., in Philip's War, 1676; was J. P.; and Rep. from H'm., 1705-6; m. Anna, da. of Rev. Robt. Lenthal, of Wey'h.; and had 7 sons, and 1 da., the latter of whom m. on Long Island. The name of Lenthal was preserved in this family for a long time, and still exists in it. After the death of his 1st w., Mr. E. moved to H'm., Mass., taking with him his youngest son, Nath'l., and there m. 2, wid. Sarah North, formerly a Peck, (H'm. Rec.) She was prob. the wid. of Joseph Peck, of H'm., and her maiden name was North, she being a desc't. of the noble family of that name in England. The fa. d. in H'm., in 1709, and his wid. in Scit., in 1711. A son John, lived in Milford, Ct., and had 2 das., Ann, who m. Thos. Weldon, and Frances, who d. at her uncle Nath'l's., in 1718.

NOTE.—We find the name of John Eales, among the freemen of Mass., in 1634, (N. E. Gen. Reg., Vol. 3, p. 92); and Henry Eeles was a Pass. for Va. in the Merchants' Hope, Hugh Weston, Master, in 1635. (Ib. vol. 4, p. 190.) It has been suggested, that the names of Eells, and Ellis, were formerly one; but of the correctness of this suggestion, we are not prepared to decide. Similarity does not always prove identity.

2. Nathan<sup>e</sup> Ells (Rev. Nath'l.,) s. of Capt. Saml., was b. in 1678, grad. at H. C. 1699, and sett. in Scit., over the 2d Church, in 1704. He was m. by his fa. to Hannah

North, of H'm., (aunt to Frederick, Lord North, afterwards Prime Minister of Geo. III.) Oct. 12, 1704, and d. in Scit., Aug. 25, 1750, ae. 72, and his wid., May 1, 1754. He is described, by Deane, as a man "of a stature rather above mediocrity, of broad chest and muscular proportions, remarkably erect, somewhat corpulent in his late years, of dark complexion, with black eyes and brows, and of general manners rather dignified and commanding, than sprightly and pleasing." He wrote a fair hand, as the Church Records show; and as a preacher, his discourses prove him to have been a man of great simplicity of style, and directness of argument. He prepared his own sons, and others, for College, and was a ripe scholar, naturally shrewd, and one eminently qualified for usefulness in the station he filled. ch.: 1. Sarah, Aug. 5, 1705, m. Benj. Turner, of Scit. 2. Samuel, Feb. 23, 1706-7. 3. Jno., Jan. 23, 1709, m. Abiah Waterman, of Scit., in 1730, and left desct's. 4. Nath'l., Feb. 4, 1710-11, grad. H. C. 1733, ord. at Middletown, Ct., 1737; was for some years Tutor at Yale Coll., where 3 of his sons grad., who sett. in Ct. The fa. d. in 1776. Concerning him, we find the following note, in the Stat. Acct. of Mid'x., Ct.: "In 1738, the Rev. Ed. Eells, s. of the Rev. Nath'l. Eells, of Scit., Mass., was ord. in the Upper Houses. Mr. E. acquired some celebrity by a pamphlet which he pub. in 1759, on the Wal-lingford case. JOSELYN, JOSLIN, JOCELYN, &c., an old English family, dating back several hundred years, and sett. in Cornwall, Essex, Hertford, Kent, &c. The Earl of Roden, is of the Jocelyns; and Sir Ralph Josceline, of Hertfordshire, was Mayor of London, in 1474 and 1476, being made Knight of the Bath, by King Edward IV., in the former year. The coats of arms vary in different families, and there is one extant in H., different from that which we have presented above, and handed down by tradition. In America, Jno. Josselyn, gent., was in N. Eng. in 1638, and was the author, among other works, of one called "New-England's Rarities;" and Henry, his bro., (and son of Sir Thomas, of Kent,) was at Black Point, now Scarborough, Me., in 1634, being sent over, by Capt. Mason, to make "a more complete discovery," and examination of the advantages of the grant made to Capt. M. He was a memb. of the Gen. Court, at Saco, 1636;

SALMOND, Robert, and his bro. Peter, were born in a small town in Scotland, lying between Edinburgh and Glasgow, within 8 miles, it is said, of the tree in which William Wallace hid, as is related in the Scottish Chiefs. Robert was born in 1749, and Peter in 1745. Previous to the opening of the Am. Rev'n., they came to this country, on a visit, and staid in Bridg'r., Mass., one year, from 1774 to 1775. Starting from thence to return to their native land, by the way of Halifax, N. S., they were there impressed into the British army, under Burgoyne; and when that officer was defeated, they left the ranks, and returned to Mr. Russell, their fellow countryman, at Bridg'r., with whom they had been tarrying. Soon they entered the employ of the Hon. Hugh Orr, also a native of Scotland,—who was a manufacturer of cannon, and other arms,—and with him they remained for four years, receiving, as their compensation, but $8 per month, and their board,—a sum which would now be considered small by most of our mechanics. From thence, both came to Hanover, and engaged in trade, in the humble capacity of peddlers. Peter, after remaining two years, moved to Pemb., and settled near the Rev. Morrill Allen's. He m. Eunice, da. Capt. Jonathan Bass, of E. Bridg'r., and widow of Seth Whitman, in 1785, and d. in Pemb., in Oct. 1828, æ. 83, leaving ch., of whom his son Peter, is still living in Pemb., on his father's place. Robert, the other brother, remained in H., and was, for about thirty years, engaged in the iron business at Sylvester's Forge,—28 years of the time with Nath'l. Cushing,—in manufacturing Anchors, and carrying on this business on an extensive scale. He lived first in the Baldwin House, so called, on Hanover St., and afterwards on Broadway, in what is now known as the "Salmond House." Both the brothers, were men of high moral worth, and one who knew them well, has said, that "if all were like them, we should need no penal laws." Both left behind a good name for their children,—a legacy far more valuable than gold or silver! The desc'ts of Robert, we give below.

2. Robert Salmond of Scotland, b. 1749,

3. Samuel, s. Robert 2, m. Eliza, da. Hon. Albert Smith, of H., July 26, 1826, and lives on Wash'on. st., near the Four Corners. His life, like that of his father and uncle, has been eventful and instructive. At the age of 18, with his bro. Robert, he sett. in Bangor, Me., where, for 10 years, he was engaged in trade. In 1818, he left B., and journeyed to the South, tarrying there 4 years, until the death of his bro. Robert; and thence he went to Cuba, on which beautiful island he passed 7 winters. During a portion of this time, he was in the employ of the U. S. Gov't. In 1838, he sett. permanently in Hanover, and engaged in the Tack business, at the works previously occupied by his brothers, and at the spot where anciently stood the Stockbridge mill. Mr. S. is a man of modest and retiring manners, of unblemished integrity, never weary in well doing, and is respected most by those who know him best, and can best appreciate the excellencies of his character. ch: 1. NOTE. This name, on old records, is generally spelled Samson; and Henry, the ancestor of most of the Sampsons of Plymouth Co., arrived at Dux'y., in 1620, according to Winsor.

SIMMONS, Moses,—formerly written "Moyse Symonson,"—came to Plymouth in the Fortune, in 1621, and is usually reckoned as one of the Pilgrims, being among the early settlers of Plym'h. Winslow speaks of him as "a child of one that was in communion with the Dutch Church at Leyden," and as being "admitted into Church fellowship at Plym'h., in N. Eng'd., and his children also to baptism as well as our own." In the division of lands made in 1623, he, with Philip De la Noye, (now Delano,) received each one acre, "beyond the first brooke, to the wood westward;" and in 1628, Mar. 26, he, and Edward Bompas, sold each one acre of ground to Robert Hicks, "lying on the North side of the town,"—being probably the acre granted to him in 1623. In the division of cattle, made May 22, 1627, the first lot, consisting of the "four black heifers that came in the Jacob, and two she goats," fell to Francis Cooke, and his company, among whom was "Moses Simonson." He was in Dux'y., before 1637, and in that year, was one of a Jury of 12, "to set forth heigh wages about Plymouth, Ducksburrow, and the Eele River." In 1638-9, he received a grant of 40 acres of land in D. He is in the list of those able "to bear arms," in 1643; and in the list of freemen in D., in 1646. At about this period, he became one of the 54 original proprietors of Bridg'r., but soon after sold his share to Nicholas Byram. Under date of Mar. 7, 1652, he is spoken of, on the Col. Rec., as having one of the 34 shares, "of a tract extending 3 miles E. of the E. part of the river or bay called Acusshena, and soe alonge the sea side to the river called Coaksett, lying on the W. side of point prill (peril?) &c., and extending 8 miles into the woods,"—said tract being land purchased of the Indians. He was a surveyor in Dux'y., in 1657; and in 1665, a footway was laid out through his land, and that of Sam'l. Chandler. In 1662, he was one of the proprietors of Midd'o., his lot being the 18th, and being "bounded with a red Oak and a Walnut tree marked." The name of his wife, we have not learned, nor the dates of birth of his children. We should infer, from Winslow's account, that some of them, at least, were born before he came to Am'a. Of his sons, we find recorded the names of Moses and Thomas. The family is prob. of English origin, and may be connected with the Symonds, or Simonds, of Devonshire, Dorset, Somerset, Gloucester, Norfolk, Hertford, &c. We find this family name sometimes spelled Symons, and Simmons, and the family itself, is numerous and respectable, and of quite ancient date.

Rob. Stetson STETSON, Cornet Robert, the ancestor of the Stetsons of the U. S., and a noted and valuable man in his day, prob. came from Yorkshire, Eng'd., from which county many of the first settlers of Scit. originated, and where, according to Rev. R. Breare, the name is still extant, being found in Richmond and other towns. Having already published a sketch of this family, entitled "Records of the Stetson Family," we do not deem it necessary to pursue its history at large here, and shall therefore confine this notice chiefly to those that settled in Hanover. We need only remark, that the Cornet had five sons, who left male issue, viz.: Joseph, Benjamin, Thomas, Samuel and Robert.

The descendants of the first of these—Joseph—settled principally in Scituate. A few resided in H., and these we shall give. More of the descendants of Benjamin and Samuel, and a few of those of Thomas, became residents of H.; but none of those of Robert. From the latter, however, descended Nahum Stetson, Esq., of whom we have spoken on p. 229.

1. John Stockbridge a wheelwright by trade, came to N. Eng., in the Blessing, John Leicester, master, in June 1635, being then 27 years of age, and his wife Anne, ae. 21, and his son Charles, ae. 1. Several of the early settlers of Scit. came in the same vessel, among whom were elder Thos. King, Gilbert and Wm. Brooks, and Mr. Wm. Vassall. The fa. was in Scit. in 1638, at which date he took the oath of fidelity. His 1st. w. d. ab. 1642, and he m. 2, wid. Elizab. Soan, 1643, and 3, Mary —. He was one of the Conihasset partners in 1646, and had a house near to John Hollet's, which is supposed to have been a few rods S. W. of the late residence of Jesse Dunbar, Esq. He also owned a large, tract of land, purchased of Abraham Sutliffe, near "Stockbridge's mill-pond," so called, on the north and east. In 1656, he purchased half the mill privilege of George Russell, with the saw-mill, which Isaac Stedman had erected ten years before, and built a grist-mill, in partnership with Mr. Russell. In the same year, probably, he built the Stockbridge Mansion House, which was a garrison in Philip's War. This venerable building was torn down a few years since, and in some of its timbers, were found bullets, fired at the inmates by the Indians. The will of the fa. is dated at Boston, in 1657, and in it he gives, "To eldest son Chas., my water-mill, at Scit., house, ground, and orchard belonging to it, he paying to his sis. Elizab. £10, &c. To wife Mary, house and land at Bos'n., and the house in wh. Gilbert Brooks lives, at Scit., with the land adjoining; the same to be for her use through life, and then to belong to s. Jno., in case he survives his mo., he giving to his sis. Mary £10;—if he should not survive, the same to be equally divided among the rest of the ch. To da. Hester, the house in wh. Wm. Eng. at an early date, one in Boston, and the other in Sandwich. A branch of each of these sett. in Scit., and have desc't's. in H. We shall trace these separately.

I. Jno. Studley, and w. Elizab., were in Bos'n., in 1659, but when they came to the city, or how long they remained, we cannot say. Their s. Jno., was b. in Bos'n., Dec. 8, 1659; and their son Benj., was b. in B., May 23, 1661. This is all the notice we find on any of the records in B. The latter son, Benj., seems to have been in Scit., in 1683, m. Mary, da. Jno. Merritt, and sett. near Merritt's brook, a few rods S. E. of the bridge. ch.: 1. Jno., Dec. 11, 1684. 2. Benj., Dec. 7, 1687. 3. Jas., July 15, 1690, m. Sarah Farrow, of H'm., 1717, and had Sarah, 1718; Jas., 1720; and Elizab., 1725. 4. Jona., June, 19, 1693. 5. David, Jan. 19, 1696-7, m. Susanna Vinton, 1717, and left 1 da., and 3 sons, some of whose desc'ts. yet live in Scit. 6. Mary, Sep. 23, 1698. 7. Elizab., June 8, 1701. 8. Debo., Dec. 19, 1702-3. 9. Elizab., Sep. 10, 1706.

NOTE: We think it highly probable, that Benj. Studley, who was in H'm., in 1724, m. Susanna, da. Eben'r. Lane, Dec. 31, 1724, and had Hannah, 1725; Sarah, 1727; Ruth, 1729; Lois and Eunice, 1731; Jona., 1734; d. young; Rhoda, 1735; Irania, 1737; and Jona., 1728;—was a desc't. of Benj. of Scit., and prob. his son, as he is called "s. of Benj." We think it also probable, that most of this name, in H'm. and Cohas't., sprung from Jno. of Boston.

SYLVESTER FAMILY.

Arms: Ar. an oak tree, eradicated,

Crest: A lion's head, erased, vert.

SYLVESTER, SILVESTER. This name appears to be of French origin, and in the French language, sylvestre signifies a tree, whence the coat of arms represents an oak tree in the shield, being a parlant, or speaking coat, descriptive of the name. We find the family sett. in Eng. not long after the Conquest, and the ancestor probably went over in the army of William, in 1069. Stephen Silvestre, is named by Fuller, among the gentry of Norfolk.<sup>1</sup> Gabriel Sylvester, D.D., was Prebend of Weeford, Litchf'd., in 1506;<sup>2</sup> and in 1538, Robert, was Archd'n. of Langtoft, York;<sup>3</sup> Preb. of York, 1541;<sup>4</sup> and Archd'n. of Nottingham, 1549.<sup>5</sup> The family is highly respectable in the old country, and is numerous represented in the U. States.

The first of the name in N. Eng., was Richard, who was of Wey'h., 1633, and of Scit., 1642, and sett. on the "Two Miles." The year in which he came over, and the name of the vessel in which he embarked, we have not been able to learn. Settlements were made at Wey'h., in 1619, 1624, and 1625. He prob. came in the company with Rev. Robert Lenthal, minister of Wey'h., and the cause of his coming to Scit., was on acc't. of difficulties, arising from his religious opinions.<sup>6</sup> He m. 2. Capt. Joseph, s. Rich'd., lived where Sam'l. Waterman's house stands, in So. Scit., near Church Hill, and improved the farm wh. he purchased of Jno. Whiston, 1664. We have given some sketch of his life on p. 22. As a reward for his services in the Indian wars, a grant of land was made to him and his company, by the Gen'l. Court, which was designed to have been in Maine, but which, when the line was run between the Provinces, proved to be in N. Hampshire; and on a repres'n. of these facts by Chas. Turner, and others, agents for the claimants, in 1765, a new grant was made in Me., on condition that 30 families and a minister should be sett., and a meeting-house built, within six y'rs.; and this is now known as the town of Turner, Me.<sup>1</sup> His ch., by w. TURNER, an ancient family, of Norman French origin, which appears in Eng'd. as early as 1067, the date of the Norman Conquest, when "Le sire de Tourneur," accompanied King Wm. in his expedition. (N. E. Gen. Reg., vol. 2, p. 33.) There are various coats of arms, belonging to different branches, in most of which, the mill-rind, so called, is a distinguishing feature. Burke gives the names of 35 families, to whom coats of arms have been granted, and these have produced many eminent men, distinguished in historical, and literary annals. Several families appear early in N. Eng'd., among whom are, Humphrey, of Scit., the "tanner," who arrived with his family in Plym'h., in 1628, had a house lot assigned him in 1629, and erected a house, in which he prob. lived in 1633. (Deane.) He is the ancestor of most of the Turners in Plym'h. Co., though there have been some in H. descended from Thos., of H'm., 1637, whose son Thos. was in Scit., 1680. As several sketches of the Turner family have already been published to the world, and the number who have sett. in H. is comparatively small, we do not deem it necessary to enter at large into its history here, and shall confine ourselves, therefore, principally to those that have sett. in H. We need only say, by way of introduction, that Humphrey, of Scit., had Jno., who was fa. of Amos, and Jona.; and Amos was fa. of Ezekiel, of H., and Jona. was fa. of Isaac, and he, of Wait and Jona., of H. Daniel, another son of Humphrey, had Amasa, and Abner; and Amasa was fa. of Amasa and Eliab, of H., and Abner was fa. of Abner, of H. Thos., of H'm., had Thos., of Scit., and he was fa. of Caleb, and he, of Caleb and Marlboro, of H. The descendants of these families are given in the following sketch:

2. Ezek'l., s. Amos, and gr. gr. s. I. Humphrey, m. 1, Bathsheba Stockbridge, who d. July 14, 1731; and 2, Ruth Randall, June 17, 1736; and d. Aug. 10, 1773, and his wid. May 25, 1805, ae. 86. ## HYMN.

Our Father God, before Thee now,
Together we, thy children bow,
And joyful, willing songs of praise
From lip and heart, to Thee we raise.

We're gathered on the cherished spot,
Where thou in wisdom cast the lot
Of parents; who, before Thee stand
With children, these, a filial band.

Back half a century's rolling years,
This night; with love, and hopes and tears,
Their bridal vows, they made in youth;—
Since kept with holy faith and truth.

Through life's bright prime; through wiser days,
Together toiled their blended ways,
And now Age smites, they kiss the rod,
And patient wait their call to God.

Now, sons and daughters, come to bless
Their kind parental faithfulness,
And childrens' children, join and sing—
While orphan hearts thank-offerings bring.

Departed ones, who shared this love.
Raise holier songs in homes above!
Help us, O God! to join THEIR song
And in thy praise their strains prolong. S.

[Jan. 11, 1848.]

ADDRESS. PLACING THE RING.

HYMN.

Father, and Mother! Husband, Wife!
Names in which dwell earth's holiest charms,
We hail this length of wedded life,—
Of aged vows — of trembling palms.

Dim eyes, gray locks, were bright the day
These bridal vows, ye youthful took,
Tho' dimmed the eye, the locks turned gray,
Their bonds, not loosened, nor forsook.

Since that far day, how sore the strife
In household toil, ye two have borne
Daughters and Sons—life from your life
Have drawn; 'till yours' is waste and worn.

We children greet you on this day,
Father and Mother, take our song,—
While "little longer" you may stay,
We would in peace your hours prolong.

Now old, fond love, drop gladsome tears,
These children hands, shall 'fend from need,
'Till we all end our mortal years,
Then Jesus, count us "holy seed." L.

BARSTOW FAMILY. Since this work went to press, we have obtained the following additional particulars relative to the Barstow family. The original name seems to have been Burstow; and we find this name in Sussex Co., in the reign of Edward II., A. D., 1308, at which date grants were made to Roberto de Burstowe. See "Documents Illustrative of English History, in the 13th and 14th Centuries," in the N. E. Gen. Soc. Lib.; and Rymer's Foedera, vol. 3. In the reign of Henry III., A. D., 1271, we find in Suffolk Co., Will. de Burstowe, and Christiana, his wife. See "Excerpta Rotulis," &c., vol. 3, in the N. E. Gen. Soc. Lib. In the "History of Surrey and Sussex," pub. in London, in 1829, vol. 2, p. 273, we find the parish of Burstow described, which is "situate in the weald of Surrey, and is not mentioned in Domesday Book. It adjoins Horne on the east, Horley on the west, Blechingley and Nutfield on the north, and Worth, in Sussex, on the south. In 1821, there were 915 inhabitants, and 106 houses in this parish. The manors of Burstow Court lodge, Burstow, Burstow lodge, and Red hall, are situate in this parish, and principally belong to M. Sanders and T. Dickson, Esqrs. The benefice is a rectory, in the deanery of Ewell. It is rated in the valor of Ed. I. at 12 marks, in the king's book at £15 13s. 4d. It is a peculiar of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and is in the patronage of the king. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, consists of a nave and south aisle, a chancel, and a wooden turret and steeple at the west end. The interior is particularly neat. On Smallfield Common, in this parish, is the remaining part of a mansion-house, built of stone, which belonged to the family of De Burstow, and passed from them to that of Byshe, long settled there. It was formerly called Cruttings, and was given by Bartholomew, (Lord Burgherst,) to John de Burstow, as an acknowledgment for assistance received from him when thrown from his horse in an engagement with the French. The house, of which part is now standing, is supposed to have been erected by Edward Byshe. He was a bencher of Lincoln's Inn, and a great practitioner in the Court of Wards, where he amassed his fortune, and used jokingly to say, that he "built his house with woodcocks' heads."

We think it probable, that branches of this family,—the Burs-tows,—settled in Yorkshire; and from the latter, sprung the Barstows who emigrated to America.

Mr. Faxon's Funeral.

The funeral services of the late Hon. William Faxon were held yesterday afternoon at St. John's church, of which the deceased was a member. After prayers at the Park Central hotel the body was removed to the church at 3 o'clock, the bearers being Senator Joseph R. Hawley, Edgar T. Welles, Mr. R. W. Cutler, cashier of the Hartford Trust company; Mr. Henry Kellogg, president of the Phoenix fire insurance company; Dr. P. J. Horwitz, medical director, U. S. N.; Mr. M. T. Merritt of Stamford, Judge J. Huribut White, and Mr. John W. Hogg, chief clerk of the navy department.

The body was enclosed in a casket of solid oak with rich but simple ornaments of silver. The inscription plate bore the name, age and date of death of the deceased. At the request of the family there were few floral offerings—one beautiful piece, representing "The Gates Ajar," a cross of rose buds, a wreath of pansies and a basket of choice flowers were all. At the church the sublime Episcopal burial service was read by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Williams, the Rev. Mr. Bradin and the Rev. Dr. George W. Smith, S. T. D., president of Trinity college, who was an intimate friend of the late Mr. Faxon. After the prayers the choir sang the hymn:

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee."

The concluding portion of the service was read at the grave in Spring Grove cemetery by the bishop and the Rev. Mr. Bradin.

Among those present from Washington, aside from those already named, were Commodore Kane and Captain E. E. Potter of the navy, both in uniform, and Mr. A. E. Merritt, chief clerk of the bureau of yards and docks. The officers of the Hartford Trust company, the officers and directors of the Phoenix Fire Insurance companies, and the proprietors and several of the editors of THE COURANT attended the funeral in a body. The flag on THE COURANT building was at half mast during the afternoon, and the office of the Trust company was closed and draped with crape.

The Late William Faxon.

At a meeting of the board of trustees of the Hartford Trust company, the following memorial was unanimously adopted:

The Hartford Trust company has lost, by the death of its president, the Hon. William Faxon, a faithful, honest and capable official, and the members of this board a genial, courteous and honorable associate.

He brought to the management of this company a most sterling character, superior executive capacity and rare habits of system and method.

His perceptions were clear, his judgment reliable and his integrity absolutely beyond question.

He was modest in his bearing, courteous in his manner, considerate and generous in his nature.

Whether in the activities of business or in the walks of social life, as a private citizen or a public officer, he carried his conscience with him.

He was clear-headed, clean-handed, true-hearted at all times and in all places.

Not for form's sake, but with deep feeling, we pay this, as we believe, truthful tribute to his memory.

We will perpetuate the sentiments of this memorial in our hearts and its language upon our records.

To his family, so suddenly and so deeply stricken, we extend our warmest sympathy.

Attest, R. W. CUTLER, Secretary.

William Faxon's Sudden Death—The New Post-Office Building—Fire Progress—Toward Completion—Sunday Personals.
From Our Special Correspondent.

HARTFORD, Ct., Saturday, September 22.

The death of William Faxon takes from Hartford this week one of the best men of the city, whose loss will be more fully realized when people get over the almost stunning suddenness of his death. No one knew he was sick until he was dead. He was about his business as usual all Tuesday, and on Wednesday morning he was gone. Mr Faxon was prompt, accurate and methodical to a remarkable degree. People always knew where to find him and he always knew where he was himself. Being alike honest, systematic and clear-headed, he was not long in being recognized as a most valuable executive force; and the way in which he went on from printer's boy to be assistant secretary of the navy in the time of that navy's greatest efficiency, and, after the war, to be called on for one important work after another at home, was gratifying evidence of how the true character and worth of the man revealed themselves in spite of his natural modesty. For he was of a retiring disposition, and every office that he held sought him, not he it. No one man will fill the places he leaves vacant in this community.

On Thursday, the 20th, Secretary Chandler telegraphed the following to Mr. Egar T. Welles, at Hartford: "With great regret I learn of the death of Mr. Faxon. As chief clerk of the Navy department, during the whole war, he contributed largely by his ability, zeal and energy to the success which characterized Secretary Welles's administration, and his appointment as Assistant Secretary in 1866, and as Acting Secretary on various occasions, were deserved recognitions of his capacity and fidelity. To me he was a much-valued and beloved friend, and I am a sincere mourner at his departure. Commodore Upshur has been ordered to send suitable representatives of the navy to attend the funeral, and I have also directed the attendance of Medical Director P. J. Horwitz, and of the chief clerk of the department, Mr. John W. Hogg, and the chief clerk of the bureau of yards and docks, Mr. A. E. Merritt. The department will be closed on the afternoon of his burial (Friday). William E. Chandler, Secretary of the Navy."

OBITUARY.

The Hon. William Faxon.

The Hon. William Faxon died suddenly about 4 o'clock Wednesday morning at the Park Central hotel where he has resided for several years. He was at his office at the Hartford Trust company on Tuesday and retired in his usual health. About 3:30 in the morning he called his daughter, who occupied an adjoining room, informing her that he was in great pain. Miss Faxon alarmed at his symptoms sent for Dr. Curtiss, who lives next door, but before his arrival her father had expired.

Mr. Faxon was a native of West Hartford, born April 17th, 1822, the old homestead built by his grandfather in 1777 being still standing in Elmwood. In his youth he learned the printer's trade of John L. Boswell, in the office of THE COURANT, having, as a fellow apprentice, Mr. Robert Bonner. In 1853 he was admitted to the firm, which became Boswell & Faxon, and so continued until Mr. Boswell's death in 1854. Mr. Faxon then went to Amherst and published for a time the Weekly Express of that town.

In 1856 one hundred prominent republicans of Hartford subscribed $100 each and established the Evening Press, the first republican paper in the state, and Mr. Faxon and Edmund Pierce were its first managers. Mr. Pierce shortly retired and was succeeded by Joseph R. Hawley, the firm being Hawley & Faxon until 1861, when the Hon. Gideon Welles, secretary of the navy, and one of the founders of the Press, persuaded Mr. Faxon to accept the position of chief clerk in the navy department. The Press was consolidated with THE COURANT in 1867, and Mr. Faxon always retained the liveliest regard and friendship for the paper and for those connected with it. Mr. Faxon continued as chief clerk under Secretary Welles, until at the retirement of Assistant Secretary Fox he was appointed his successor, holding the office until the close of Andrew Johnson's administration. He was always one of Mr. Welles's most intimate and trusted assistants, his good judgment and his remarkably systematic and methodical business habits making him invaluable for mastering the manifold details of the department during the arduous days of the war. Mr. Faxon gave eight of the best years of his life to this work and no soldier in the field rendered more faithful or patriotic service to the country than he, in assisting to the utmost in the organization of the war navy and in caring for its interests. Mr. Welles, Mr. Lincoln's able secretary, was to the end of his life enthusiastic in his praise of Mr. Faxon as his trusty right-hand man in every emergency. Their intimate friendship was broken only by death.

Upon leaving the department Mr. Faxon sought needed rest and recuperation in an extended foreign tour in Europe and on the Nile. He traveled with his eyes open and with keen intelligence to profit by what he saw. His letters were full of interest and worthy of preservation. He made a second but less extended trip a few years since. In 1878 he was appointed a Bank Commissioner by Governor Hubbard, and it is only justice to say that he made this bureau a valuable and indispensable part of the state government. He brought to his work the same methodical system which had made him so useful in the navy department and the same business ability. Under his administration bank examinations became thorough and systematic, and for the first time the statistical returns became valuable and instructive. In January, 1881, Mr. Faxon was appointed postmaster of Hartford, but declined the appointment before entering upon the duties of the office, in order to take the presidency of the Hartford Trust company, which position he has since filled very successfully and acceptably.

Mr. Faxon was one of the original incorporators of the Phoenix fire insurance company, and has been one of the directors of the company from the first. He was for several years a director of the reconstructed Charter Oak life insurance company, but declined a reelection previous to the last annual meeting. He was a member of St. John's Episcopal church.

Mr. Faxon was a collector of historical books and pamphlets, especially of those relating to the late war and to national politics. He had also compiled valuable scrap-books on the same subjects, and had gathered a choice collection of autographs. He was an earnest republican, but never an aspirant for office. His appointment as postmaster came without his seeking and against his inclinations. For many years, when not absent from the city, he has prepared blank tables for election returns and has himself tabulated the telegraphic returns from the state for THE COURANT of the next morning. When all was excitement over some hotly contested election, he always remained cool and self-possessed. His judgment as to the result of an election, formed after studying the first scattering returns from a dozen or twenty towns, was hardly ever at fault. His was always a helpful presence in an editorial room, and his familiar form and kindly greeting will be long and sadly missed.

Mr. Faxon was twice married (to the Misses Cushing, sisters), and has been a widower for a number of years. Two children survive, a son, William B. Faxon, and a daughter, Miss Anna C. Faxon. The son completed his art studies in Paris a year ago and has a studio in New York.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock from St. John's church.

Appendix.

A descendant of Col. John Bailey has recently sent us from Hanover the following account of his and our great grand grandfather.

He was second in command at Borchester Heights in 1775; afterwards in important positions around New York. In September 1776 his regiment with two others - "Glover's Brigade" - were thanked in person by Washington for their gallant conduct, and when Washington resolved to make a sudden dash upon the "Hessians" at Trenton, among the trusty men he picked was Bailey's regiment. The troops were in two divisions, Bailey was in the first. They crossed the river in the storm and among the floating ice. They won the fight and the next morning Washington warmly thanked his army for their brave and steady conduct.

Lossing says "At Saratoga Gates felt confident of victory, aided by such men as Poor, Learned, Stark, Patten, Bailey," etc. etc. The Brigade Bailey was in occupied the center at the first battle of Saratoga: in the second he was in the left wing which attacked the Granadiers and drove them from the field.

"Col. John" did not serve through the war, as in April 1780 he wrote to Washington asking his discharge on account of his domestic affairs and ill health. In October 1780 a resolve of Congress relieved him on half pay for life.

This sketch was sent us from a great-grand-son of Col. Bailey who resides in Hanover, and whose mother was a daughter of Col. Bailey.

RECALLED REVOLUTIONARY DAYS

Bronze Tablet Dedicated by the Massachusetts Sons of the Revolution as a Memorial to Major General John Thomas

To commemorate the military and public services in Revolutionary times of Major General John Thomas, who in 1775 commanded the provincial troops quartered in Roxbury, a bronze tablet has been placed on the old Dillaway house in Eliot square, Roxbury, his headquarters during the early struggles for independence. The tablet was put in place yesterday afternoon by the Sons of the Revolution in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and last evening a service was held at the Church of the First Religious Society in Roxbury, Eliot square. The tablet, a large one, bears this inscription:

"This tablet marks the site of the house built by the Reverend Oliver Peabody for the parsonage of the First Church. Occupied by the Rev. Amos Adams, patriot minister of the church, chaplain of the Continental army, scribe of the convention of ministers at Watertown, whose appeal to the people was for war. The headquarters of Major General John Thomas, who reviewed the army in front of the house and from its dormer window watched with his spyglass the movements of the British at Charlestown. For more than a century and a half the abode of high ideals in learning, patriotism and righteousness. This tablet placed here by the Society of the Sons of the Revolution in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts June 2, 1905."

At the service held in the evening Rev. Edward Huntingt Rudd of Dedham, chaplain of the Sons of the Revolution, offered prayer. Music by a quartet followed, and then came an address by Rev. James de Normandie, D. D., minister of this old-time church, who told of the historic edifice and the neighborhood. Arthur Lord, president of the Pilgrim Society, also delivered an address reviewing the career of General Thomas. Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D. D., chaplain of the United States Senate, also spoke, telling of the good work of the Sons of the Revolution, after which the congregation sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

WILLIAM FAXON.

It is with a very heavy heart that we record the sudden death of William Faxon. On Tuesday he was about the streets in apparently vigorous health. At four o'clock Wednesday morning he was dead of disease of the heart. No man could be better prepared to go, without a moment's notice. His accounts were square with all the world every day; his business was always in order; it was not his habit to defer anything till to-morrow; better than almost any other man we know he could go and leave no arrearages of duties unfulfilled. What we may say of him may seem partial to those who had with him only a casual acquaintance; all that we could say, would seem cold to those who knew him well. He has filled public positions of trust and honor and confidence, filled them perfectly, without ostentation or parade. But what was admirable in him would have been just as admirable if he had never stepped out of strictly private life. We think more of his qualities than of any position he ever held or of the manner in which he discharged the duties of it. He was that rarest of human beings, the perfectly honest man, honest with himself, and honest in all his relations. Absolute integrity was in every fiber of his constitution. This character gave extraordinary value to all his excellent talents and abilities. For he was a man of great clearness of mind, quickness of perception, accuracy of judgment, and he had uncommon executive force. It was remarkable that with his great honesty he was rarely deceived or taken in by pretensions; he had a fine perception of moral qualities and values.

It was the knowledge of his perfect integrity, clear mind, his fidelity, his ability to see through any sort of crookedness, his business readiness and quickness, and his uncommon facility in the dispatch of business, that caused the late Secretary Welles to select him for his chief clerk when he was called to Washington to enter Lincoln's cabinet. In those days it was absolutely necessary that a cabinet officer should have near him a man whom he could implicitly trust, and a man capable in affairs. It is only just to say that the success of Mr. Welles's administration of the navy department was in a considerable measure due to William Faxon. Neither man sought or encouraged notoriety; and it is one of the most creditable parts of our national history that the navy department, during the war, was highly efficient without the least ostentation of efficiency. If the inner history of the war were truly written and credit were given where credit was never claimed, Faxon's name would stand very high in the list of those who deserve most honor. To say that he was incorruptible, both in his position as chief clerk and subsequently as assistant secretary, is to say what all men know; but how much was due to his vigilance, his industry, his unflagging executive force and even judgment, is not perhaps so well known. He carried into his official business the same good sense and unpretentious integrity that governed his private life.

The chapter of the Third Plantation, Daughters of the Revolution, held its last meeting at the residence of the regent, Mrs. M. F. Clough. The subject for the evening was "The Battle of Lexington," and the programme was in charge of Miss Louise J. Putnam, who sketched the condition of affairs in Massachusetts in 1775, closing with a reference to the poem, "Paul Revere's Ride." This stirring poem was read by Mrs. Clough.

Miss Maria Goodwin gave a sketch of the life and revolutionary services of William Dawes, who was dispatched by Dr. Warren with Revere to alarm the countryside, and who deserves equal recognition for his services on that famous midnight ride, but who is little known, where Revere is widely praised, "because," as the little rhyme in the February Century puts it, "he was Revere and I was Dawes."

Mr. Eugene A. Putnam read a life of Jonas Clarke, the patriot pastor, exhibiting a cane, which once belonged to him, and presented by his daughter to Mr. Putnam's grandfather, whose father, Joel Viles, was a corporal in Capt. Parker's company. Miss Putnam then described the Lexington and Concord fight, calling on Miss Maria Rich, a descendant of Daniel Townsend, one of Lynn's Lexington martyrs, for the story of Lynn's share in the fighting. The leader closed the programme with a few anecdotes of the part played by the women on that dreadful day.

Mrs. Clough told several anecdotes, and showed the members a valuable revolutionary relic, in the shape of a copper urn, which was formerly used in the Buckman tavern in Lexington, and from which the British soldiers were very likely served when they entered the tavern for a drink after the bloody skirmish on the green.

The Daughters of the Revolution will celebrate the Lexington anniversary on Monday, April 20. The services will be very quiet in their nature, out of respect to the memory of Gov. Greenhalge, to whom the day will quite generally be appropriated this year. Patriotic addresses will be given and an informal reception held, to which all the members will be invited. The interest in the society is constantly on the increase, and it is gaining in numbers and in enthusiasm with each meeting.

Mrs. Lee, the state regent of the Daughters of the Revolution, has returned to her home in Brookline, greatly improved in health.

Note 1441. I wish to say a few words about Pownalborough, Me., established in 1760 as shire town of the eastern counties set off from Old York County between the Sheepscot and Kennebec rivers, now included in the towns of Dresden, Alna and Wiscasset. In this portion of the county were some of the most talented men of that day, from Massachusetts: Jonathan Bowman, came in 1760. He was judge of probate. William Cushing (H. C. 1751), afterward chief justice of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, and in 1789 promoted by Washington to the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States. He died in 1810. Charles Cushing, his brother (H. C. 1755) came also at the same time. He was first sheriff for Lincoln County and general in the Revolutionary army. Died in Boston in 1810. Rev. Jacob Bailey, the missionary (H. C. 1755), was here in 1760. He was a loyalist, and was driven away to Nova Scotia in 1779. John Gardiner, eldest son Dr. Gardiner, lived on the banks of the Kennebec, for several years, near city of Gardiner. Sheriff Cushing lived near the old Pownalborough Court House in Dresden.

At what was then known as Wiscasset Point lived Dr. Thomas Rice (H. C. 1756), and Timothy Langdon, brother of Governor John Langdon, grad. Harvard College 1765. Rowland Cushing, brother of William and Charles, lived here. He left college in 1768, and was in Judge Cushing's office, studying law. Tradition said that he was to marry Jane Lithgow, daughter of Colonel William Lithgow of Georgetown, Me. He died in Waldoborough, Me., in 1788.

The patriot Edward Bridge succeeded Sheriff Cushing in 1760.

Dr. Sylvester Gardiner of Boston moved to Kennebec and founded Gardinertown, now Gardiner, Me. John Adams, afterward President United States, was a practicing lawyer on the Kennebec, at Pownalborough, at the same time Governors Bowdoin, Hancock, and Increase Sumner, all of Massachusetts, were all at this place as lawyers; also John Jones of Concord, Mass., and Ruth Lee, a sister of Judge Lee of Wiscasset, and John Lee, a Loyalist, who had to flee the country. Jones was employed by the Plymouth proprietor to survey the lands owned by them. He died in Augusta, Me., in 1823. Jacob Bailey, Charles Cushing and Jonathan Bowman were classmates of President John Adams, who attended court at Pownalborough Court House before the Revolution. LOWELL.

It is a matter of interest that the unveiling of a tablet to mark the grave of William Dawes, Jr., who was buried in Kings Chapel burying-ground, was witnessed by several descendants of this patriot, who, so it has long been recognized, showed fully as much heroism as did Paul Revere on the famous April night in 1775. That Revere was captured instead of Dawes, who went by a much different route to Lexington than that chosen by Revere, was merely an accident of circumstances. Both men stood equal chances of capture by the British. The exercises on Patriots Day, arranged by the Massachusetts Society, Sons of the Revolution, were attended by members of many patriotic societies, as well as by Miss Eleanor W. Allen, a great, great granddaughter of Dawes, and his youngest living descendant; Miss Julia Goddard of Green Hill, Brookline, the granddaughter of Dawes; Miss Eleanor G. May, an almost equally near relation, the patriot's first wife being a May, and Mrs. S. R. Robinson, a grandniece, accompanied by her son, Henry R. Robinson. Among others present were Benjamin O. Low and his son, Benjamin Farragut Low, the present owners of the tomb, to whom it has descended from the original Dawes family. The tablet is of bronze, and bears this inscription:

"William Dawes, patriot, son of liberty, and first messenger sent by Warren from Boston to Lexington on the night of April 18-19, 1775, to warn Hancock and Adams of the coming of the British troops. Born April 6, 1745, died Feb. 25, 1790. Placed by Massachusetts Society, Sons of the Revolution, April 19, 1899."

Sketches of Colonel William Shepard and Colonel John Bailey

BY GENERAL PHILIP READE*

COLONEL William Shepard had field service prior to the Revolutionary War. In 1754, at the age of seventeen, he enlisted in defence of the frontier settlements against the incursions of the French and Indians. From April 12 to Nov. 3, 1758, he was a sergeant in Captain Jonathan Ball's company of Colonel William Williams's regiment, and accompanied the troops to Canada. He served as lieutenant in the 1758-59 expeditions against Forts William Henry, Ticonderoga and Crown Point, and held the rank of captain in 1760-61-62 and 1763. His name appears on French War Rolls, Massachusetts Archives, as second lieutenant in John Bancroft's company, serving from March 31 to Dec. 1, 1759. General Benjamin Lincoln of Hingham stated that Colonel Shepard acted with consideration and humanity in suppressing insurgents led by Daniel Shays and Eli Parsons at Springfield Arsenal, Jan. 25, 1787. Colonel Shepard was succeeded in the Fourth Massachusetts, Jan. 1, 1783, by Colonel Henry Jackson, with Lieutenant Colonel Ezra Newhall as the lieutenant colonel commandant. Shepard was the kind of soldier Oliver Cromwell liked. Sixty-five officers of the Fourth Massachusetts Regiment of Infantry served at Valley Forge during the winter of 1777-78.

John Bailey of the Second Regiment, Massachusetts Infantry of the Line, was born Oct. 30, 1730, in Hanover, Plymouth County, Mass., and died there Oct. 27, 1810. Colonel Bailey had field service prior to the Revolutionary War. In 1762 he was lieutenant in Captain David Stockbridge's company, Colonel Thomas Clapp's regiment, second Plymouth company, and later commanded the same company with rank of captain. Nov. 21, 1771, the town of Hanover paid Captain Bailey £9 8s. for four quarter-barrels of powder wherewith to equip local troops in possible emergency; and he was further chosen to keep the powder dry and care for it "in the best manner he can." Bailey succeeded General John Thomas of Marshfield as colonel of a Massachusetts regiment in July, 1775, and served as colonel of the Twenty-third Continental Infantry during 1776. His rank as colonel of the Second Massachusetts Regiment of the Line dated from Nov. 1 of the last-named year. Benjamin Tupper of Stoughton, also a soldier of the French War, was his first lieutenant colonel until his merited promotion to the Eleventh Massachusetts, vice Ebenezer Francis of Newton, who was killed at Hubbardton, Vt., July 7, 1777. When Colonel Bailey resigned, October, 1780, Lieutenant Colonel Ezra Badlam of Milton commanded the Second for a short time, but Ebenezer Sprout of Middleborough, one of the ablest of our field officers, was made lieutenant colonel commandant from New Year's, 1781, to November, 1783. During this period, the returns of the regiment showed another veteran of the French and Indian war period, Andrew Peters of Mendon; also that gallant Irishman, Hugh Maxwell, and, later, Caleb Gibbs, the latter having been commander of a company of Washington's Guards for nearly five years. Colonel Bailey's adjudier of the French War, was his first lieutenant colonel until his merited promotion to the Eleventh Massachusetts, vice Ebenezer Francis of Newton, who was killed at Hubbardton, Vt., July 7, 1777. During this period, the returns of the regiment showed another veteran of the French and Indian war period, Andrew Peters of Mendon; also that gallant Irishman, Hugh Maxwell, and, later, Caleb Gibbs, the latter having been commander of a company of Washington's Guards for nearly five years. Colonel Bailey's adjutant, or quarter-master, for about two years, was Luther, his son. The latter, in January, 1778, was brigade major.

Before the battle of Trenton, Christmas, 1776, Washington designated three regiments of the Massachusetts Brigade, commanded by Brigadier General John Glover of Marblehead, to cross the Delaware River in a storm, for the purpose of surprising the Hessians under Johan Gottlieb Rahl. Among the trusted colonels he picked Colonel Bailey, whom the commander-in-chief warmly thanked for brave, steady conduct in leading his gallant command for the sudden dash, forced march and subsequent fighting.

The Memoirs of Major General William Heath of Roxbury state that on April 17, 1777, one hundred and sixty men, presumably recruits, of Bailey's marched for Ticonderoga, also two hundred on the following day, from Colonel James Wesson's Ninth of Brookline.

The Trumbull papers publish a letter from General Benedict Arnold to Major General Horatio Gates, who had, that month, August, 1777, superseded Philip Schuyler in command of the Northern Army, reporting the presence in the Mohawk Valley, New York, at German Flatts, now Schuyler, of three Massachusetts regiments, viz., Colonel John Bailey, Second; James Wesson, Ninth; and Michael Jackson, Eighth. The presence of friendly Indians, Oneida and Tuscarora, was also named by Arnold. About two years prior to that date Colonel Bailey had made a forcible and convincing address to the Northern Indians, which address Peter Force reproduced in his American Archives.

After the brigade of Ebenezer Learned of Oxford had raised the siege of Fort Stanwix, now Rome, New York, retrieving the Oriskany disaster of brave old Nicholas Herkimer; blocking the advance of the British troops to the Hudson, and compelling the flight of Barry St. Leger's mixed command of regular troops, loyalists and Indians to Oswego and Montreal, our hard-worked regiments proceeded to join their comrades under Benjamin Lincoln of Hingham. Among these troops were the Nixon brothers of Framingham; John Paterson of Lenox; John Glover, the amphibious; Enoch Poor of Andover; Daniel Morgan's Rifle Corps; and the Light Infantry of Henry Dearborn.

The actions at Benis Heights, Stillwater (Freeman's Farm), and Saratoga followed. At Saratoga, the brigade Colonel Bailey was in occupied the centre at the first battle. Later his regiment was in the left wing which attacked the grenadiers, and drove them from the field. His regiment was foot-sore, weary, haggard, clamorous for wages, clothing and subsistence. In the Massachusetts Collection, Massachusetts Archives, is displayed Colonel Bailey's wage list, naming thirteen officers of his organization who were badly in need. On November 10, 1777, Lieutenant Colonel and Aide-de-Camp Alexander Hamilton wrote the commander-in-chief from Fishkill that Colonel Bailey was there "in command of Learned's brigade, on their march to the west side of the river; the men being in a state of mutiny for want of pay."

The minutes of the Massachusetts Revolutionary Board of War, Boston, four months later, display the following entry:

Ordered that Captain Hoppins deliver Captain Samuel Darby of Colonel Bayley's regiment, for Ellis Gray, Esq. 7 yards, British linnen at 5-6; two, three, six pounds, three pairs thread hose, 13-two pounds, five shillings 1/2 03 sewing silk, 4s 6d Paid Mr. Ivens four pounds, eighteen shillings.

On Dec. 22, 1778, a letter was written from Fishkill by Lieutenant Colonel Ezra Badlam of the Second Massachusetts, concerning the state of the army, requesting clothing for officers of Colonel Bailey's regiment.

Action by Colonel Bailey during January, February and March, 1778, on the resignations of Ensign Thomas Dexter, First Lieutenant Benjamin Ball and Simeon Tupper, all of the Second Massachusetts, attest his presence at Valley Forge, exercising the functions of his office.

On Aug. 3, 1779, Washington wrote General Heath from West Point regarding a memorial presented to him by "Colonel John Bayley" concerning "a Mr. Seth Bannister of, probably, Brookfield, originally appointed Paymaster to Colonel William Shepard's, of Westfield, regiment (4th) till Ebenezer Learned's promotion as a Brigadier." Seth Bannister appears, elsewhere, as a brigade major.

Massachusetts records, dated Dec. 7, 1779, give officers constituting the regimental staff of "Colonel J. Bailey": Adjutant, William Torrey of Pembroke; quarter master, Hezekiah Ripley of Duxbury; brigade chaplain, attached, David Avery. The surgeon was John Hart of Georgetown.

Oct. 21, 1780, Bailey wrote General Washington asking for a discharge on account of ill health and domestic affairs. Nine days later he was at Totoway detailed as president of a general court-martial, for the trial of Colonel Thomas Proctor of Pennsylvania of the Fourth Continental Artillery. "Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors in the Revolution" shows that he was paid as colonel until Dec. 31, 1780 and reported "deranged." As this last word was then employed, it did not mean insanity, but was used in the sense of supernumerary. The pay of a colonel of infantry in the Revolutionary army was then supposed to be $75 a month. An additional emolument announced by a general order of Oct. 24, 1776, showed that the American Congress has resolved to give, annually, to each man one complete suit of clothing, shirts, stockings, shoes, overalls, jacket, breeches, cap or hat.

In October 1780, an act of Congress retired Colonel Bailey on half pay for life but it is thought this must have been rescinded, as he, like Colonel William Shepard of Westfield, Timothy Bigelow of Worcester and Edward Wigglesworth of Newburyport, died a poor man.

The Revolution found him independent. He worked for the support of himself and his family without any guarantee from the State or anyone else, as he owned his own means of production. He sacrificed his personal and family independence for the sake of his country. No claim is made for him except as a soldier. He was not suddenly elevated into the position of a regimental commander, and this veteran

In October 1780, an act of Congress retired Colonel Bailey on half pay for life but it is thought this must have been rescinded, as he, like Colonel William Shepard of Westfield, Timothy Digelow of Worcester and Edward Wigglesworth of Newburyport, died a poor man.

The Revolution found him independent. He worked for the support of himself and his family without any guarantee from the State or anyone else, as he owned his own means of production. He sacrificed his personal and family independence for the sake of his country. No claim is made for him except as a soldier. He was not suddenly elevated into the position of a regimental commander, and this veteran was one of the most conspicuous and flagrant examples of a well-tried officer who for irrelevant reasons of policy had been passed over by Congress in opposition to Washington's policy. The efficiency of the early Continental Army was greatly impaired by promoting general officers over the heads of such veterans as Bailey.

John Adams gave clear expression of the principles on which Congress then often acted, and he said that he "would be glad to see Congress elect all the general officers annually, and if some great man should be obliged to go home in consequence of this, he did not believe the country would be ruined."
